Late returns from the state give Governor Ferris a majority over Ex-Governor Osborn of from 30,000 to 35,000. All of the balance of the state ticket went Republican with big majorities. The fight in this district over congressman was hotly contested. Both candidates have been claiming victory, but the later returns seem to give Samuel W. Beakes a majority over Mark Bacon of about 70 votes.

Great Republican victories all over the country show that the Democratic control of the House will be cut down to a small majority.

Returns show that the Constitutional amendment relative to fraternal insurance societies has been voted down by upward of 200,000.

Lenawee county elects but two Republican county officers Charles E. Henig, sheriff, and Leland F. Bean, prosecutor. The balance of the county ticket goes to the Democrats.

But what has become of the Bull Moosers? The Progressive vote was so light in the state and nation that they were hardly noticeable at all in the race.

We print below the full return of Tecumseh's vote in Tuesday's election:

DEATH PREVENTS WEDDING

Man Is Killed With Engagement Letter in His Pocket.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Edward Sawyer, thirty-five years old, of this city, was crushed to death beneath the wheels of a west bound freight train in front of the Michigan Central station.

In his pocket was found a letter addressed to his mother, in which he declared that he intended to be married in two weeks. The name of the girl to whom he was engaged was not given. The officers have been unable to find anyone who saw the accident.

AUTO UPSET MAY KILL WIFE

Couple Pinned Under Car When It Turns Over on Road.

BAY CITY, MICH. — Dr. A. W. Herrick and wife were seriously injured in an automobile accident on the Center avenue road.

Mrs. Herrick is in a precarious condition and her recovery is said to be doubtful. The doctor will recover. The machine ran into the ditch. Both were pinned under the upturned car.

Niles Man Aids Children's Society.

ST. JOSEPH, MICH. — The heirs of the late Charles A. Chapin of Niles have notified the board of trustees of the Michigan Children's Home society that in accordance with the will of Mr. Chapin $20,000 has been placed at the society's disposal for the erection of a receiving home at St. Joseph.

A TECUMSEH CITIZEN COMES TO THE FRONT

Tells His Friends And Neighbors Of His Experience.

Every Tecumseh resident should read what a neighbor says. His testimony can be relied upon. Here are his own words.

W. C. Witherell, W. Potawatamie St., Tecumseh, says: "I had acute pains across the small of my back and in my hips. Often after stooping a sharp twinge darted through my loins bringing me down. I was laid up in bed for several days and I believe that the trouble was caused by excessive stooping. When I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store and a few boxes restored me to good health. Since then whenever I have felt in need of a kidney medicine, I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and the results have been very pleasing. I have had no reason to change my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills, which I expressed some years ago."

MINISTER ADMITS BAD PAST

Apparently in [illegible] He Looks to Satan and Not Christ

CADILLAC, MICH. — Rev. William E. Gordon, of the Stittsville Methodist Episcopal church, is in a cell in the county jail. When arraigned in court he pleaded guilty to the charge of issuing a bogus [illegible]. Rev. Mr. Gordon has been in jail before and admits it. He was mixed up in a saloon brawl in Grand Rapids three years ago, and badly beat up a man. He served one year in Ionia. "Then I turned over a new leaf and was converted," said Rev. Mr. Gordon. "I studied at the Moody institute in Chicago for the ministry and intended to be good." But I got hard up and needed funds, so I wrote checks. I was writing for magazines and if they had paid for my articles I would have had money to settle the checks. But the money did not come."

Gordon first denied his guilt, but later made a complete confession. Local ministers may come to his aid. He is twenty years old and has a wife and two small children.

Prominent Howell Official Dies.

Game Law Violator Fined.

HASTINGS, MICH. — On complaint of Warden P. F. Yeider of Paw Paw, Burdett Babcock of Prairieville paid $16 for catching two skunks out of season. Complaint will be made against three Morgan boys for netting in the Thornapple lake.

Grand Trunk Train Kills Ionia Man.

IONIA, MICH. — The body of Joseph Duffy was found on the Grand Trunk tracks a mile east of Saranac. It is supposed Duffy went to Lowell Saturday afternoon and left for home on a midnight freight and fell from the train.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.
Probate Court for said County.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on the 9th day of October in the year one thousand nine hundred and fourteen.

Present, Hon. HARRY L. LARWILL, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of THOMAS BOYCE, Deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of John T. Boyce, executor upon the estate of said deceased alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased, and the expenses of administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and praying that his final administration account may be allowed and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 9th day of November, next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition.

And it is further Ordered, That a copy of this order be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

BLAZE IMPERILS COTTAGES

Resorters Relieve Situation After All Day Battle With Flames.

BAY CITY, MICH. — A fire starting on the farm of the Young Cattle and Packing company, three miles from the city, during the night, swept a course through to the bay shore at Aplin beach. More than 100 summer cottages were in danger, the fire gaining in volume under a heavy wind.

About fifty men, who had gone to their cottages to spend the night, worked all day and had covered a course of a mile of back firing by night, so that the danger temporarily was relieved. A fire steamer from the city and a big truck load of hose were sent down, but little could be accomplished with water as the ground swept by the flames is of a peat formation.

TWO INJURED IN YARD WRECK

Switching Crew Narrowly Escapes Death When Train Jumps Track.

HOLLAND, MICH. — A switching crew on the Pere Marquette railroad narrowly escaped death when an engine pulling a string of twenty cars jumped the track in the yards of the Holland Furniture factory.

The force of the heavy train smashed the tender and the engine cab. Engineer Earl R. Markham and Fireman Raymond Walker were wedged in the cab, but escaped with minor bruises. Foreman Joe Barney and Brakeman Harmsen were thrown upon a lumber pile and were uninjured.

MAN FACES SERIOUS CHARGE

But It Is Hard to See Where Law Will Better Things.

CADILLAC, MICH. — George W. Bremings, thirty-five, a farmer of Yuma, was arrested here. He will be charged with a serious statutory offense as he is alleged to be responsible for the delicate condition of Mrs. Alice Rogers Bremings, fifteen year old girl, whom he married last week. Indignant residents of Yuma brought the action against Bremings.

The child told the officers several conflicting stories but, it is alleged, admitted intimate relations with the prisoner before marriage.

Platura Is Released.

WASHINGTON. — One case causing differences between the British and United States governments regarding maritime trade with neutral countries has been disposed of with the release by Great Britain of the Standard Oil tanker Platura which had been detained at Stornaway, Scotland.

LONDON. — The Durban correspondent of the Daily Mail says the government at Pretoria has granted General Christian De Wet, the rebel leader, a five days' armistice, presumably in order to arrange peace.

VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

DR. PIERCE'S
Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the weak stomach. Gives good digestion. Enlivens the sluggish liver. Feeds the starved nerves. Again full health and strength return. A general upbuilding enables the heart to pump like an engine running in oil. The vital force is once more established to full power.

Year in and year out for over forty years this great health-restoring remedy has been spreading throughout the entire world—because of its ability to make the sick well and the weak strong. Don't despair of "being your old self again." Give this vegetable remedy a trial—Today—Now. You will soon feel "like new again." Sold in liquid or tablet form by Druggists or trial box for 50c by mail. Write Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.

J. E. Baker called on friends near Holloway.

MACON

Earl Payne and wife spent Sunday at the home of the latter's mother, Mrs. Mary Camburn.

Wheeler Collins of Denver is among Macon relatives this week. He will also visit friends in Moscow and other places.

Commencing with next Sunday November 8, the Sunday school in the M. E. church will convene at 2 o'clock p. m. with the preaching service at three o'clock. The change was made to accomodate the pastor Rev. Somers who would like to attend the Sunday school when possible.

Sumner Collins and Joseph Howel were here this week, to visit their mother, Mrs. Rachel Howel. Mr. Collins returned to his home in Washington, D. C. Tuesday, Mr. Howel remaining for the rest of the week.

Miss Amy Harring met with quite a painful accident Tuesday while helping with a washing for Mrs. Will Swick, she got her hand fast in the washer, badly crushing the end of the thumb. Dr. Beardsley was called and dressed the injured member making her as comfortable as possible.

J. D. Howel and Frank Day were visitors at the county seat Tuesday.

Mrs. Lewis Coller was the guest of friends in Tipton Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Smith of Dundee, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Pennington.

Mrs. Isaac Mills is very ill at this writing with no hopes for her recovery.

Rev Somers and wife were callers in the village Tuesday.

Vern Graff came from Hope last Saturday for a visit of indefinite length

Jesse Coller of Jackson is visiting at his brother Lewis' this week.

Lyman Thomas was a business caller in Ypsilanti Tuesday,

Miss Mary Pratt who has been in poor health for so long is not improving as her friends would like to see her, not being able to sit up much of the time.

Mrs. Swick of Britton is staying at her son's Will Swick, helping to care for Mrs. Kate Mills who is so very ill

The reception given Rev and Mrs. Somers last Friday night was largely attended nearly two hundred being present. The evening was passed very pleasantly socially, a fine musical program being one of the features of occasion. The singing by Miss Edna Taylor and the recitation by Miss Irene Conklin being especially enjoyed

Little Elmer Burleson was operated on Tuesday for the removal of adenoids, Drs. Morden and Beardsley being the attending physicians

Miss Clara Hendershot entertained her cousin Mrs. Jay Kenyon and Mrs. Weidman, both of Detroit Monday and Tuesday of this week,

Mrs. Tiery came Saturday from Ft. Wayne to make her home here.

NAMESAKE DOES JOB ASSIGNED OTHER MAN

Mistake, However, Credits Enterprise of Doer.

CADILLAC, MICH. — There are at least two Frank J. Kennedys in the United States. One lives in Cadillac. Another is a coupon distributor and bill poster for a Chicago soap company. When the latter Kennedy arrives here next week he will find all his coupons distributed and his bills tacked up. He will have Frank J. Kennedy of Cadillac to thank and perhaps the local man will ask his "namesake" for about $10.

Some time ago a Chicago soap and perfume company advertised for an agent in Cadillac. Frank J. Kennedy of this city answered. He has not received a reply, but a few days ago he was informed two boxes of freight for him had arrived. He investigated, found coupons and much literature.

"The company has hired me," he said to himself. "I'll get busy and do the work." He did.

Meanwhile one Patrick Ryan had been distributing samples of soap here, telling housewives that another man would be along in ten days to give them coupons for more free soap. Imagine his surprise, when he ran into some of these coupons. He telegraphed the firm. In reply he was informed that Frank J. Kennedy was in Illinois and would not be in Cadillac until about Nov. 10.

"I guess I am the goat," said Frank J. Kennedy of Cadillac when informed that he had done another man's work. "But maybe I can get my money back."

Popular Flint Doctor Buried.

FLINT, MICH. — Funeral services for Dr. W. H. Taylor were held at the Court Street M. E. church. A motor funeral car followed by automobiles carrying members of Genesee Valley commandery, conveyed the body to Clio, where interment took place. Local physicians attended in a body.

Martial Law in Egypt.

WASHINGTON. — Martial law has been proclaimed by Great Britain throughout Egypt. An official notification by the British charge d'affairs at Cairo was delivered to American diplomatic agents there.

MOTHERS OF DELICATE CHILDREN

Should Read the Following Letter—Mrs. Slack's Story About Her Child's Recovery Is Entirely Reliable.

Palmyra, Pa.—"Three years ago my little girl had black measles which left her with a chronic cough and so awfully thin you could count all her ribs, and she coughed so much she had no appetite.

"Nothing we gave her seemed to help her at all until one day Mrs. Neibert told me how much good Vinol had done her little girl, so I decided to try it for my little one, and it has done her so much good she is hungry all the time, her cough is gone, she is stouter and more healthy in color and this is the first winter she has been able to play out in the snow, coasting and snow-balling without any ill effects."—Mrs. ALFRED SLACK, Palmyra, Pa.

We know Vinol will build up your little ones and make them healthy, strong and robust, therefore we ask parents of every frail and sickly child in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil.

If we can induce you to try a bottle of Vinol as a body-builder and strength-creator for your child, and you do not find it is all we claim, we will return your money on demand.

Emerson as a Vocalist.

As a student at Harvard Ralph Waldo Emerson did not give much promise of his future greatness. His dissertation was spoken of as "a very good one but too long to give much pleasure to the hearers." He was class poet, but only after seven others had been successively elected and had successively declined the honor. A story told by Arthur Stanwood Pier in "The Story of Harvard" goes to show that Emerson's musical efforts were even less appreciated.

Singing in the yard was a popular diversion and early in his freshman year Emerson, wishing to have a share in the fun, went to the singing master, who said to him, "Chord."

"So I made some kind of a noise," said Emerson, "and the singing master said: 'That will do, sir. You need not come again.'"

IS NOT SO POOR AS THOUGHT

$700 Is Found in Home of Supposedly Destitute Woman.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 9.—Called to the home of Miss Amanda Crapsley, an aged woman, by her serious illness, Poor Commissioner Frank Wells and Health Officer Knapp, while making arrangements for her transfer to a hospital, found she had stored in a pasteboard candy box and an old satchel in her room in a tenement nearly $700 in bills and gold. The money was placed in a bank and she was sent to the hospital.

Relatives and friends expressed themselves as surprised at the finding of the money, as they supposed she had only a few dollars in the world. The hoarding is her life's savings from earnings at house work.

CRIME LAWS NEED PATCHING

Gov. Ferris to Ask Commission for Revision of Penal Code.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 9.—Gov. Ferris will ask the comdission on the revision of the statutes to tackle the criminal laws of the state next. The commission, which was appointed under authority of legislative enactment in 1913, is composed of Albert Cummings, of Lansing; Mark Stevens, of Flint, and J. Clyde Watt, of Saranac. It has been working on taxation laws, domestic regulation laws, and the matter of new court procedure, and is about ready to report.

The governor says that there is a strong demand for a revision of the criminal laws, and will ask the commission, if not able to revise them before the opening of the session, to try and have them ready before the close of the session.

WORKS FOR $9 WEEK, QUITS WITH $15,000

Michigan Laborer Is Living Off Rents from His Savings.

Owosso, Mich., Nov. 9.—When the delivery wagon from Collins' grocery store goes by nowadays, the older residents of the city stop and stare after it. Some of them are tempted to rub their eyes.

For a stranger is driving the wagon. The thin figure of Otto Debeaux no longer adorns the front seat. Otto has resigned. He is devoting his time to collecting his rents and looking after his property.

Otto didn't have much education, to begin with; he classes only as a common laborer. He started to work 31 years ago for A. T. Thomas, grocer, who died about two years ago. A quarte of a century or more ago money bought more than it does now. Otto probably started in at $6 or $7 a week. When Mr. Thomas died, Otto's weekly wage was, and has been, $9 a week. He had never received more than that in his working life.

Horace Collins, who bought the store, raised Otto to $10. But the bulk of his achievements were performed on $9 a week, $37 a month, $468 a year. Today Otto has a rent roll of about $100 a month. He owns eight houses. He has raised two girls to young womanhood, with the help of his frugal, industrious wife. He is a landed gentlemen, a capitalist. He has had as much solid happiness out of his life as the most of us. He has helped support the church of which he is a faithful member. He and his family have lived plainly, but well; they were always comfortably clothed. He has accumulated property worth $15,000 on $9 a week.

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 9.—Marie and Kittie Beberitz, respectively 19 and 21 years old, have arrived in San Francisco, after walking across the continent from Saginaw.

They started from this city in the middle of May and averaged about 20 miles a day while they walked.

Will Fight Tipping Evil.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 9.—Deputy State Labor Commissioner James F. Hammell, who has long been a leader in the opposition to an anti-tipping law in Michigan, has finally come to the conclusion that it would be a good thing, and it is probable that a bill to abolish tipping will be introduced in the legislature next winter.

STOCK EPIDEMIC WORST KNOWN

Statement Is Issued by Department of Agriculture.

UNTOLD LOSSES ARE IMMINENT

Unless Foot and Mouth Disease Is Checked Serious Consequences Threaten Live Stock Industry—Area Over Which Infected Cases are Found Exceeds Previous Outbreaks.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The secretary of agriculture has issued the following statement regarding the quarantine for foot and mouth disease:

"The present outbreak of the foot and mouth disease which is one of the most contagious and destructive diseases of cattle, swine and sheep, exceeds in area affected any of the five previous outbreaks in this country. Unless the infection can be immediately localized and quickly eradicated, it threatens untold losses among live stock.

"So contagious os the disease that in the past outbreaks where but one animal in a herd was infected, the entire herd in almost all cases later contracted the sickness. While the mortality is not high the effects of the disease even on animals that recover are such as to make them practically useless. In the case of cows the milk dries up and is made dangerour for human consumption.

"As a result of the five outbreaks in this country and other disastrous epidemics of the disease in Europe and Great Britain, veterinary authorities of the United States are agreed that the only method of combatting the disease is to stop all movement of stock and material which have been subjected to any danger of infection and to kill off without delay all herds in which the disease has gained any foothold.

"For these reasons the department of agriculture has already quarantined ten states for the foot and mouth disease."

Shredder Movements Stopped.

LaPorte, Ind., Nov. 9.—State Veterinarian A. F. Nelson has issued regulation No. 4 in regard to the foot and mouth disease among cattle, which has sperad so rapidly in the last few days that it affects five Indiana counties and fourteen states of the Union. The new regulation is as follows:

"The movement from one farm to another of any corn shredder, traction engine or hay baler for the purpose of shredding fodder, baling hay or straw is prohibited, as this is, at the present time, a menace in spreading the foot and mouth disease. Permits will be issued for movements of hay, straw, fodder, live stock or poultry under conditions that will guard against spread of infection.

"Milk may be accepted for shipment outside the quarantined area, provided it is pasteurized or the milk is for immediate consumption; where it is received by creameries, no skim milk to be returned to farm unless pasteurized; provided this shall not conflict with any state, city or county health officer's regulation."

Continues to Spread in Illinois.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—The foot and mouth disease continues to spread in Illinois. L. D. Canum, a wealthy farmer near Aledo, found the infection had appeared among his cattle and hogs. He killed ninety head of stock and 350 hogs, valued at $10,000 to prevent the disease from spreading. Five counties—Cook, Kane, Kendall, Livingston and Menard—are under quarantine and inspectors are working in Henry McHenry, Lake and Mercer counties, where the disease has been found. It is probable these will be quarantined.

A force of 100 men under the direction of State Inspector John Miller set to work to disinfect the yards at Peoria, which were shut down at midnight on Friday. It was said that the task would be complete by Thursday. Peckers there say they have enough stock on hand to keep them busy until the yards are reopened.

Detroit Yards to Close.

The Detroit stockyards will be closed indefinitely beginning Tuesday afternoon.

BOMBARD ASIA MINOR POINTS

British Squadron Keeps Up Activity in Mediterannean Waters.

Athens, Nov. 9.—The British squadron has bombarded various points along the coast of Asia Minor. The Turkish troops were concealed behind breastworks on the coast. The telegraphic station near Smyrna has been destroyed.

A British battleship has gone to Avali, Asia Minor, to seek the British consul and other British subjects. The forts at Fedil, Bachr and Koumalac have been seriously damaged by the recent bombardment by warships.

"Farmer" Burns' Mother Dies.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—Mrs. Mary Burns, mother of "Farmer" Burns, the wrestler, was buried from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary Bilderback, at 28 West Seventy-first street. Burial was at Mount Olivet. Mrs. Burns was 85 years old.

JUDGE NOT TO BE BENEDICT

Vesey Denies He Is to Wed St. Louis Concert Singer.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 9.—W. J. Vesey of this city, former judge of the Indiana Supreme Court, denies the report that he will marry Miss Cleo Freeling, a beautiful and wealthy young St. Louis concert singer.

"I know the young lady very well," said Judge Vesey, "but I am not engaged to marry her. I do not think that she is responsible for the circulation of this report, but I place the blame on her overzealous press agent."

MEXICANS ROB AND SLAY 3 AMERICANS

Latter Fight Doggedly Until Ammunition Gives Out.

El Paso, Texas, Nov. 9.—Fighting doggedly behind a wagon barricade until their ammunition gave out, three Americans were killed by mounted Mexicans at Chocoke Pass, Chihuahua, according to word brought into San Sidro, Chihuahua, by a Mexican servant of the American party. He declared the Americans were captured alive, shot and tortured to death and their wagon robbed.

The Americans—Carl Eck, William Bishop and Charles West, all of this city—were traveling from El Paso to Looks ranch, south of Casas Grandes, in northwest Chihuahua through a mountainous and little inhabited country. As the wagon entered the narrow defile off Chocolate Pass, the Mexicans, charging on horseback, opened fire on the party. The Americans, seizing rifles and pistols, dropped behind the wagon and returned the fire, wounding a Mexican, killing a horse and routing the attackers. The Mexicans withdrew a short distance, pursued by bullets, and dismounted. Hiding in the underbrush and behind pine trees, they opened a steady fire on the Americans. The horses attached to the wagon were shot down. The wagon was riddled with bullets.

Eck, a boy of 17 years, was wounded in the leg but continued firing as steadily as his companions. The Mexican servdnt was unarmed, he said, and took the first opportunity to hide.

The fighting continued more than an hour. Then the Americans' ammunition gave out and the Mexicans, numbering eight or ten, rushed in. There was a brief hand-to-hand fight and the Americans were bound.

The servant, watching the fight from a distance, said the Mexicans beat, knifed and clubbed their prisoners and then fell to looting the wagon. After they rode away with their two wounded companions, the servant said, he started for San Sidro.

"Uncle Joe" Sues For Libel.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 9.—Joseph G. Cannen filed a praecipe in the circuit court here, asking $25,000 damages from the Danville Press-Democrat, charging libel. The suit is a result of the political campaign.

SERVE CARRANZA WITH ULTIMATUM

Convention Gives Him Until 6 P. M. Tuesday to Quit.

ANTI-AMERICANISM IS STIRRED

Supreme Chief Seeks to Make More of U. S. Occupation at Vera Cruz for Popular Effect—Gen. Funston Says There Is No Cause for Any Alarm.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Carranza has until 6 o'clock Tuesday night to make up his mind whether he will relinquish the provisional presidency of Mexico without a struggle or whether he will fight for the retention of his present office.

The news that the convention has sent such an ultimatum to Carranza has been received here officially. The convention demands that before Tuesday evening he announce his recognition of the sovereignty of the convention and bow to it by vacating his office from which the convention has already deposed him and named General Eulalio Guetierrez in his place.

Though it had previously been rumored that the convention was to give a time limit to Carranza within which he must get out of office or be driven from it by force the day's dispatch was the first official report to this effect. Meanwhile, officials here are confident that by Wednesday a decisive turn will have been given the situation and there will be some basis for estimating whether there is to be war or peace in Mexico.

Carranza After Popular Sentiment.

Further indications that Carranza is engaged in an attempt to stir up popular sentiment in southern Mexico in favor of himself in his contest with the convention by agitating the issue of Vera Cruz was made here. It became known that while the inflammatory posters published and distributed by Masons early in the week were promptly suppressed they were reprinted in all the newspapers a few days later.

Nothing Alarming Says Funston.

General Funston cabled Secretary Garrison in response to the latter's inquiry that there seemed to be no cause for alarm.

"Many unsubstantiated rumors have prevailed for a long time," cabled General Funston. "I think it better to discredit unsubstantiated reports. There is nothing alarming in local conditions in Vera Cruz."

VISION TELLS GIRL OF PERIL

Fiancee of Mechanician Walker Hurries to Bedside Ignorant of Accident.

Galesburg, Ill., Nov. 9.—When Fritz Walker, a mechanician, died of injuries received when Jack Gable's racing car upset, Miss Laura Scherdt, his fiancee, was at his bedside.

"In a vision I saw Fritz in the hospital and hurried," said Miss Scherdt. "I left St. Louis without looking at the paper to see if there had been an accident. We were to have been married immediately after the race. He risked his life to get money for us to start housekeeping."

Sending German Troops Back East.

London, Nov. 9.—A dispatch from Amsterdam to a local news agency says the Germans have taken advantage of the heavy floods in the district near Nieuport to shorten their line of defense. The number of soldiers in that region has been greatly reduced. Many trainloads of German cavalry and guns are being sent back to Germany by way of Brussels and Louvain, evidently on their way to reinforce the armies opposing the Russians.

FOOTBALL TITLE FOR BENEFIT OF BELGIUM

President James of Illinois University Sees Huge Fund.

Urbana, Ill., Nov. 9.—A great post-season football game between the eastern and western champions for the benefit of the Belgian refugees, to be played in the largest stadium in the United States, is the plan of President James of the University of Illinois.

That the proposed battle would result in a sum of $300,000 or more is the belief of the president, who is at work securing the consent of the Western conference to the plan.

The battle would be between either Illinois, Chicago, or Wisconsin, the teams in the western semi-finals, and Harvard, Yale, or Princeton.

The proposed date of the game is on Nov. 28, a week after the closing of the season for the conference teams, and also for the eastern leaders.

The largest stadium in the country" is taken to mean the one at Yale, seating 60,000 persons. The receipts would be administtered by a Red Cross committee.

FUGITIVE BANKER GIVES UP

E. H. Ralrton Reads in Newspaper He Is Wanted and Surrenders.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Nov. 9.—E. H. Ralston, the Strahan, Ia., banker who has been missing for two weeks, has returned and voluntarily given himself up to Sheriff BBushnell of Mills county. Ralston was in Oklahoma when he read in a newspaper of the excitement caused by his disappearance and that a search was being made for him. It was then he decided to return to Iowa.

He had visited Springfield, Mo., and Wilcox, Mo., where he has relatives, presumably to secure help. He had also been at Fort Morgan, Colo. His quest for money proved unsuccessful.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional treatment, Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destoying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

Anonymous Work.

The work that does most of the world's good is anonymous. It is always astonishing to learn how unknown are most of the people who are doing the important things. They love their work more than their name.—The Christian Register.

Out of "Caste."

Many people, unless actually familiar with the ways and customs of the native of India, have little idea as to how superstitious many of these people are, especially with regard to their "caste" system.

In this district not very long ago a coolie while passing through the jungle was suddenly attacked and most severely mauled by a bear. His comrades, however, although they knew that a few miles distant there was a well equipped hospital, conveyed him to a village close by, where he was kept without medical assistance of any kind and in a blazing sun for three days.

When eventually brought into the hospital the man's plight may be better imagined than described. The surgeon and his assistants managed to keep him alive, but his face is so disfigured that he is known in the district as the "reache wallah" (bear man). The most extraordinary thing about this case is that the unfortunate person was during the time he lay in hospital considered by the fraternity to be unclean, with the result that his own wife was, through attending to his requirements, thrown out of "caste."—India Gazette.

Mexican "Puchero."

When things are at their best in Mexico first rate feeding is to be had. When such an expert as George Augustus Sala describes anything as "a grand dish" there can be no doubt about it, and that is how he speaks of the "puchero," the literal meaning of which is "pipkin." There is beef in it—boiled beef—the French bouilli, in fact. There is bacon. There are garbanzos (broad beans) and charming little black puddings and cabbage and delicate morsels of fried banana. It is very wholesome and very filling, and there is no use in your complaining that an odor of garlic pervades it, because the room and the tablecloth and your next neighbor are all equally redolent of the omnipresent ajo. There is a proverb which I may translate thus:

He who lets puchero pass
Is either in love, or asleep, or an ass.

—London Chronicle.

He Beat the Postoffice.

The French postoffice once found itself bested by a man who refused to pay an excess fee. He was condemned to pay the amount in dispute and a heavy fine besides. He declared that the authorities would not extract a centime from him and set about having his revenge. He bought a plot of ground in the French Alps, twenty-seven kilometers from the postoffice, and there built a hut. In this he installed an old shepherd, in whose name he subscribed to the Petit Journal, to deliver which it was necessary to engage a special postman, there being no other habitation within a wide circuit. After a time the authorities prevailed on Nardin to withdraw his shepherd, whereupon they withdrew their claim and paid him a small indemnity.—St. Joseph News Press.

Woman and Work.

Women are today what they have been throughout the history of the race—good wives, good mothers, good pals, good sweethearts, good sisters. Women in industry are no new thing. Women have been in industry since time began, and the women who have gone out to factory, to office, to schoolroom, to hospital, to clinic, to platform, are but doing, outside the home, what their mothers and grandmothers did inside the home. To take three-quarters of woman's vocations outside the home and to leave her with manacled hands inside the home would be to let her beat her life out against the cave wall of a prison cell in an idleness that would be madness.—From "The Autobiography of a Happy Woman."

Women and Men.

Woman began at zero and has through ages slowly unfolded and risen. Each age has protested against growth as unsexing woman. Men might spin and churn and knit and sew and cook and rock the cradle for generations and not be women. And woman will not become man by external occupations. God's colors do not wash out; sex is dyed in the wool.—Henry Ward Beecher.

When Webster Died.

Eloquent in life, Webster was sublime in death. He took leave of his household one by one, addressing to each fitting words of consolation. He wanted to know the gradual steps toward dissolution and calmly discussed them with his physician. At one time, awakened from a partial stupor which preceded death, he heard repeated the words of the psalm which has smoothed the death pillow of many a Christian: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me." The dying statesman exclaimed, "Yes, thy rod—thy staff—but the fact, the fact I want"—for he was not certain whether the words that had been repeated to him were intended as an intimation that he was already in the dark valley. Waking up again past midnight and conscious that he was living, he uttered the well known words, "I still live." Later he said something about poetry, and his son repeated one of the verses of Gray's "Elegy." He heard it and smiled. In the early morning Webster's soul went out with the tide.—Rhodes' "History of the United States."

Secret Criminal Societies

By

W. BLANCHARD MOORE

Lowest Type of Criminal.

Every prison in Siberia has a secret criminal society—an "artel" or union. Their unity of purpose is self protection against the common enemy, the government. Through the influence of the "artel," communication is obtained with the outside world—a ling of tobacco, a package of playing cards, or a daily paper may be smuggled in or punishments lightened. These criminal societies have their unwritten laws, their own code of honor and punishments. A convict may lie, steal, commit murder or break all the moral and social laws and still be in good standing if he does nothing that will injure the "artel." Should he, however, even under the severest punishment, ever divulge its secrets, it means to him certain death.

I asked the governor of the province at Karasnayarsk why the authorities did not exterminate these criminal societies. He replied the only way to do that would be to exterminate every criminal in Siberia.

My Experience in One of the Criminal Sections.

There are parts of Siberia that the government is colonizing for emigrants and other parts called the "criminal sections," inhabited by criminals of the worst character. The criminal sections, as a rule, are off the railroad, many being far to the north in the most dreary, desolate part of Siberia. In these places there are no laws, no punishments, not even for robbery or murder, except it has some direct connection with the government or the officials.

A regiment of soldiers is always stationed there to crush any demonstration against the government. In the worst criminal sections, no stranger dare cross the street alone, even in broad daylight. When I visited these parts of Siberia, it was under military protection, which I paid for by numerous and liberal tips.

In every so-called hotel, the office is a bar-room where vodka, the national intoxicating drink, is sold from a barrel in a tin cup. Loitering about these places are the toughest looking criminals imagination can picture—men who brag of the number of lives they had taken—criminal degenerates, many of whom, in other countries, would be in the insane asylum.

The military officer would always conduct me to the so-called hotel, tell the proprietor he would be held responsible for my safety, and turning to me, in a low tone of voice, would say: "There are some desperate fellows around here; don't go outside the house." The criminals watched every move I made as intently as a cat would a mouse. Should I lay my hand on the door latch, these vicious looking fellows would start to follow me. They knew that while in the house I was under military protection, but should I cross the threshold, they would violate no law by taking my life.

On the train near Irkutsk, I met a German tourist who accompanied me to a penal colony some distance off the railroad. Upon our arrival, we were conducted to the hotel and told not to go outside. After dinner, my German friend said: "I think I'll go out for a little walk and see the town." I told him he must not think of such a thing—that it might mean his death, and if he got in trouble, it would involve me. He replied: "I was a German soldier and am afraid of nothing." I beseeched him not to go. Finally he half-way promised not to do so. I went to my room, remaining about half an hour. When I sought my companion again, he could not be found. I told the proprietor I feared he had gone out, and asked if he could not send some one in search of him. "If you will pay two men whom I will select," he replied, "I'll send my son with them."

About a half a block from the hotel they found my German friend—stripped of all his clothing and unconscious, his head bleeding from a scalp wound where he had been struck with a blunt instrument. After restoring him to consciousness, I dressed his wounds with emergency remedies I carried with me. The next morning, when the officers called, they gave me an old suit of clothes and told me to give them all my baggage and clothing. When they had gone, I asked the proprietor what claims, if any, the officials had against me, and what, in his opinion, would be the outcome. He said: "Your future looks very black. The officials are suspicious of every one and are of the opinion you represent some society antagonistic to the government, that your friend is your servant, and after dark you sent him with a message to a certain political exile who formerly held a high position with the government. Should this be their conclusion, may the Lord have mercy on you." "Will I be court martialed and shot?" I asked. "No," he replied, "that would be a humane act. You will probably be placed in a dungeon reeking with filth and vermin and there left to rot your life away." Continuing, he added: "The officials will be here about 1 o'clock."

I looked at my watch—it was 10 o'clock. I returned to my room and seemed to live years in those three hours. Ten minutes after one the officers arrived. They returned all my baggage and ordered me and my companion to leave town on the 2 o'clock stage. My friend said no more about being a brave German soldier—he simply said, "I've seen enough of Siberia and am going

Draining Doughnuts.

A pair of long wooden knitting needles are most excellent for draining doughnuts. As the doughnuts are fried slip them on a needle, and when it is full rest it on the top of a pan to cool. The doughnuts do not crush, and the lard drains off.

AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION DECIDES IMPORTANT CONTROVERSY. MITCHELL RELIABILITY CAR IS STOCK MODEL SAYS CONTEST BOARD.

Since the conclusion of the famous 7500 Mile Sealed Bonnet tour of a Mitchell 1915 Light Four model car there have been mutterings among the trade that the car used was not strictly a stock car. The fact of the matter is this Reliability Car is identically the same in every detail as the Light Four Mitchell 1915 Models now being distributed all over the country.

This Reliability Car finished its 7500 mile 30 day run October 23rd in Pittsburg and on November 4th Mr. F. E. Edwards, Technical expert of the contest board of the American Automobile Association broke the seals and made his technical examination of this car. Within twenty-four hours his report was made and Chairman Kennerbel of the contest board approved Mr. Edwards' report and the Reliability car passed as a stock model.

It was the desire of the Mitchell Lewis Motor Company to establish the fact that this Light Four 1916 Mitchell was one of their regular stock cars in every sense the word stock implies. This car was registered with the American Automobile Association's Contest Board, which appointed Mr. Edwards to break the seals and inspect the car. The report of his examination disclosed some very interesting facts.

When the seals were broken all evidence of the tremendous task to which this car was subjected, the muddy roads which it had travelled was apparent; the drip pan alone containing over 85 pounds of mud and sand. The engine was dismantled and intake and exhaust valves, pistons, connecting rods, crank shaft, bearings, transmission, clutch and brakes were minutely examined.

After the 7500 Mile Run the effects were scarcely visible. The valves did not need regrinding, having only a very small deposit of carbon, due undoubtedly to the superlative qualities of the Mitchell breaker and distributing system of ignition. The bearings were snug and just beginning to be rolled home. The new type of Mitchell clutch showed no signs of wear and bears out everything claimed for it by engineer Bate. The transmission and rear axle were in excellent shape and the brakes passed inspection, being shy only two rivets.

The Ignition system, the Lighting and Starting System the Vacuum Gasoline feed all mounted under the hood where no adjustments could be made, all stood up to their work in a way that does credit to the Mitchell Lewis Motor Co's selection of equipment.

This car has been passed by the American Automobile Association as a stock car, and when taking into consideration the fact that this 7500 miles was made by a Light Four cylinder Mitchell car, weighing less than 3000 pounds and selling at $1250, with the bonnet sealed so that even cleaning of spark-plugs and tightening of connections were impossible, it bears out every claim made for this new model by Engineer J. W. Bate, of the Mitchell Lewis Motor Company of Racine, Wisconsin.

We are Agents for the Mitchell Car in Monroe, Jackson, Wastenaw and Lenawee counties.

Of all monarchs of Europe the most imposing in his list of titles is Nicholas of Russia, who bears the following honors: Emperor and autocrat of all the Russias, czar of Moscow, Kiev, Vladimir, Novgorod, Kazan, Astrakhan, Poland, Siberia, the Tauric Chersonese and Georgia; lord of Pskow, grand duke of Smolensk, Lithuania, Volhynia, Podolia and Finland; prince of Esthonia, Livonia, Kurland, Semgalle, Samogitia, Bielostok, Carelia, Tver, Perm, Yougoria, Viatka, Bulgaria, etc.; lord and grand duke of Lower Novgorod, Tcheringoff, Riasan, Polotsk, Rostoff, Yaroslav, Belosero, Oudoria, Obodria, Condia, Vitebsk, Mstislaw and all the regions of the north; lord and sovereign of Iveria, Cartalinia, Kabardinia and the Armenian provinces; sovereign of the Circassian and mountain princes; lord of Turkestan, heir of Norway and duke of Schleswig-Holstein, Stormarn, Dithmars and Oldenburg.

SIXTH GRADE ENTERTAINMENT.

A very interesting program was given at the High school Friday evening by the 6th grade.

The subject of the evening was the study of birds, their usefulness and various peculiarities.

These were shown by the reflectroscrope and the pupils had some fine papers on the different birds common to our country.

Prof. Reed and Miss Lulu Brown had charge of the entertainment. A feature of the occasion was the unique style of invitations which originated with the children.

The parents and friends responded to these invitations in fine style, a large number being present.

Much praise is due Miss Brown for her interest in the work of her pupils and Prof. Reed certainly shows a commendable zeal in the welfare of Tecumseh schools.

MRS. CHAS. STRUBLER

We clip the following from an Elkhart paper of Nov. 2, 1914:

Mrs. Charles G. Strubler, 42 years old, died at 2:30 o'clock this morning at her home, 1126 East Jackson street following an illness due to abdominal tumor, which had confined her to her bed for nearly a year.

Mrs Strubler was born in Annapolis Md., on May 12, 1872. She came to Chicago in 1890, where in 1892, she was married to Mr. Strubler. With him she went to Tecumseh, Mich., where Mr. Strubler organized the Stimpson Scale compang. This plant in 1898 was moved to Elkhart, Mr. and Mrs Strubler accompanying it. When, in 1899, the factory was reorganized and moved to Detroit, they removed to that city. In 1906 they returned to Elkhart, where Mr. Strubler organized the scale company bearing his name.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

MANCHESTER vs TECUMSEH

The foot ball team left here Friday afternoon for Manchester to play a game of foot ball.

Those who saw it, say that it was neither exciting nor fast. The line work was poor on both sides. Most of Tecumseh's gains were made by end runs and forward passes. The resulting score was tie, six and six. The return game, which was to have been played here Friday, the 13th, will be played to-morrow (Wednesday), on account of the State Sunday School Convention at Adrian, the last of the week.

BIRD TALKS

Quite a large number of the parents and friends of the pupils of the sixth grade were present at the entertainment given Friday evening at the High School. At the opening of the program, the pupils sung two songs. Then followed the bird talks. The pupils had each chosen a bird to describe, and selected their own material without the help of the teacher. As the pictures were thrown on the screen, the descriptions were given. Another chorus closed the program.

HERE AND THERE

Examinations often have their funny side. A Junior English pupil made this remarkable statement: "Emerson went to Cotton Mather's church until it bored him because he could not conform to the costumes(!)"

The Latin expression, "Quam esse videri," that is "To be, rather than to seem to be," was translated by a Freshman, "To be rather than to think you be."

Those who wish to attend the Sunday School Convention at Adrian, Friday will be excused from their classes.

Thursday morning, Mr. Reed called the High School together in Room 12. He talked to them on "Signs of Progress." He spoke first of the progress in Education and Schools in general, and then of the signs of progress in our own school.

The Latin IV class have finished Liber Primus of Virgils "Aeneid" and are well started on Liber Secundus.

The stereopticon and screen have been moved from the club rooms at the Library to the High School building.

The University Inspector, Mr. Edmondson, formerly of Jackson, visited us Friday and found us in the midst of the mid semester exams.

KOREA AS SEEN BY A MISSIONARY.

A good audience greeted Rev. Carl Critchett Sunday evening at the Methodist Church. When he gave his talk on Korea, its people, their customs and religious life.

Mr. Chritchett spent six years in the Hermit Nation and was well informed on his subject. His lecture was finely illustrated with pictures by the stereoptican, which helped the audience to understand the situation more clearly.

A Modern Fable

Once upon a time there were two men, Mr. Optimistic and Mr. Pessimistic, who made up their minds to go fishing. They expended a large amount for first-class tackle and bait and met on the shore of the lake.

Mr. Pessimistic said, "It smells like rain. It seems to me I can see a cloud in the sky. I am not going out until things look more favorable. The boat might tip over and I would lose my bait and expensive tackle, and even if the boat didn't tip over, I might get wet, catch cold and die, so I am not going out until things look more favorable."

Mr. Optimistic said, "Well, you can stay here, count your worms and eat your frogs. I am going out. I have some good fresh bait and a little cloud does not scare me a particle. Suppose we do have a shower, the sun will soon come out. Besides I want some fish and am going to have them."

All day long Mr. Pessimistic sat on the shore and waited for the storm that never came. His worms dried up, his frogs died and at night when Mr. Optimistc came in with a big string of fish, he cursed his luck and said everything was against him and teased Mr. Optimistic to divide his fish with him.

Depositors in our Savings Department are saved time and any care regarding their bank account.

They need not watch their deposits for fear the interest may stop; nor are they obliged to come to the bank to keep their interest alive.

Regularly on the first of every December and June, we credit on our records all interest then due on savings, so that it may be ready for depositors whenever they call for it.

When interest is not called for, it is added to the depositor's bank account and begins at once to bear 3% interests.

BAD ACCIDENT.

Jesse B. Coller of Jackson was the victim of a serious accident last Friday while assisting his brother Lewis Coller of Macon. He was running the husking machine and when it became clogged tried to clear it while it was still running. The first finger on his right hand was caught and pulled off drawing the cords out from his elbow with it. Medical aid was secured as quickly as possible. He suffers quite severely with the pain.

CLINTON'S LIBRARY.

Some time ago J. R. Benton of New York and a former resident of Clinton offered to Clinton a gift of $15,000 for for a library.

He stated that he was willing to pay this sum or more if necessary for the erection, and establishment of a free public library. There is but one condition to this generour offer which is that the building be erected on the lot where Mr. Benton's parents were buried many years ago, to stand as a memorial for them. The matter is being actively considered and Clinton may soon have a library building to be proud of.

Eighteenth Century Tips.

The tips or "vails" of the eighteenth century were by no means confined to inns. One traveler through this country, La Blanc, says that, after dining with a friend, "you'll find all the servants drawn up in the passage like a file of musketeers from the house steward down to the lowest livery servant, and each of them holds out his hand to you in as deliberate a manner as the servants in our inns on the like occasion." The master of the house turned his head away, pretending not to be aware of what was going forward. Lord Harvey records that George II.'s queen thought it necessary to give vails in town as well as in the country, but the king told her she was a fool to do so.—London Standard.

Tantalus.

The unhappiest natures I know are the natures of keen emotion and swift perception, who yet have not the gift of expressing what they feel for any artistic medium. It is these, alas, who cumber the streets and porticos of literature. They are attracted away from homely toil by the perilous sweetness of art, and when they attempt to express their raptures they have no faculty or knack of hand.—A. C. Benson in Century Magazine.

Darning Stockings.

Before darning stockings hold the card or skein of wool over the spout of a kettle full of boiling water. The steam shrinks the wool, and when the stockings are again washed the mended portion will not shrink and tear the other parts.

Core of the Earth.

"The inner earth is the inalienable playground of the imagination," says G. K. Gilbert of the United States geological survey. "Once it contained the forge of blacksmith gods, or it was the birthplace of our race, or the home or prison of disembodied spirits. Later Symmes hollowed from it a vast habitable empire, concave like the world of Koresh. Science now claims exclusive title, but holds it chiefly for speculative purposes, and the freedom of speculation practically recognizes but two limitations: The inner earth is dense, and it is rigid. As to all other properties opinion is untrammeled. It is my own view that the inner part of the nucleus is not merely hot, but very hot. If the law of compression by pressure and the law of expansion by heat as we know them at the surface apply equally to the nucleus then the mean temperature of the earth must be enormous in order to afford a mean density so low as 5.6. An enormous temperature implies an enormous store of heat."

Thought She Knew Him.

A short time ago a surgeon had three leg amputations in a week. The unusual number caused talk in the surgeon's household, and his little daughter Dorothy was greatly interested. A few days after the last operation the surgeon's wife and little Dorothy were rummaging the attic. In a trunk was found a daguerreotype depicting a girl about eight years of age. The portrait, through a peculiarity of pose, showed only one leg of the subject, the other being doubled under her.

"Whose picture is that, mamma?" asked Dorothy.

"Mine. It was taken when I was a child not much older than you are."

"Did you know papa then?"

"No, dear. Why do you ask?"

"I thought maybe you did, 'cause you've only got one leg."

The Russian Language.

Charles Sarolea in an article in London Everyman on "Thoughts on the Russian Language" notes that in its grammatical structure, as well as in its vocabulary, it is nearer than any other living tongue to the older Indo-European tongues like Sanskrit and Lithuanian, but that as a written and literary language, as a vehicle of prose, the Russian language is almost of yesterday. It is today the dominant language of 170,000,000 of people. "Nor must it be forgotten," he says, "that the Russian is the key to a dozen other Slavonic languages; that it is closely allied to the Bulgarian language and to the Servian language. And, finally, it has to be kept in mind that Salonikl or ecclesiastical Russian is the common sacred language of all the Greek orthodox Slav nations."

Finesse.

Finesse is one of those wonderful French words which seem to mean so much and yet, when one hunts them right down to their fundamental essence, turn out to mean really nothing so very much at all.

The word finesse as originally introduced into this country meant the maneuver in whist by which you take a trick from your opponents with a card lower than your highest—a card inferior also to one possessed by your opponents.

Speaking generally, without chasing the word too near its lair, finesse means the art of doing things niftily—I find it necessary to refer constantly to American slang in order to get the best definition for subtle French expressions.

Now there is, sisters and brethren, an old saying which saith that it isn't so much what you do as how you do it. The thing has a tang of the south about it, and I suspect that it really isn't much older than the Louisiana purchase; but, be that as it may, to lift an expression from the newspaper editorial writers finesse has to do with how you do things.—George Vaux Bacon in Green Book Magazine.

Louis the Magnificent.

As soon as he rose he was dressed by his valet in a coat of blue cloth. Two little epaulets of gold cord were sewed to the cloth. Under the coat was a white waistcoat, which was almost entirely hidden by the ribbons and wide sashes of his orders. His satin breeches ended in a pair of high boots or gaiters of red velvet, which came above the knees and were more supple than leather, for the thickness of leather on legs that were often painful from gout would have created too much friction. He made a great point of these boots. He thought that they made him look like a general, ready at any moment to spring upon a horse, though this was a physical impossibility for him since he was much too fat and too infirm. He used powder with a view to hiding the white locks of age, and this gave his complexion an appearance of youth.—From "The Return of Louis XVIII."

Among the Lions in the Dark.

Lecturing at the Royal Photographic society, reports the Dundee Advertiser, A. Radclyffe Dugmore said that on one night in British East Africa he saw twelve lions and succeeded in photographing ten of them. He set up three cameras near a carcass, connecting them with a flashlight apparatus. He watched through the night in a hiding place, and when a lion appeared he pressed a button, which opened the shutters of all three cameras and ignited the flash powder. Immediately after the flash the lions ran off, growling, and it was then necessary for the photographer to go out with a hand lamp and then reset the instruments. Until a man had done that he never knew what darkness was. Lions at night, said Mr. Dugmore, went by in troops of any number from three or four up to thirty or forty.

His Stock in Trade.

The nervous little man next to the car window sized up the fat man who shared the seat with him and ventured the inquiry:

"How's business?"

"Can't complain," said the other laconically.

"What do you deal in?"

"Mothers-in-law, billygoats, tramps, the weather, stranded actors, candidates, politics and the like."

"Whattyye tryin' to do?" snarled the nervous little man. "Tryin' to kid me?"

"Nope," the fat man grinned. "The things I have named in a large measure comprise my stock in trade. You see, my dear sir, I am a professional writer of jokes and anecdotes."—Youngstown Telegram.

Couldn't Wear Them All.

A small boy was one day asked by a clergyman if he knew what was meant by energy and enterprise.

"No, sir; I don't think I do."

The clergyman said: "Well, I will tell you, my boy. One of the richest men in the world came here without a shirt on his back, and now he has millions."

"Millions?" replied the boy. "How many does he put on at a time?"—Los Angeles Examiner.

Ohio River.

The Ohio river was named from an Iroquois word, Oheo, meaning "beautiful." It appears on various early maps as the Albacha, Cubach, O-o, Ochio, Sabogungo, Causisseppione, Kitonocepe Ohulpeekhanna, Ohio, Opeek, Allwege-sepe, Oheezuh, Hohio and Youghiogheny.

Nonsupport.

"You say that your husband don't buy you any clothes?"

"No, judge. If my tongue were coated it would have to be at my own expense."—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Won't Vote on City Lights.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Saginaw will not vote on bonding issues providing for a municipal electric lighting plant at the November election, as the city commission reconsidered its decision to submit the proposition.

Boy Scouts to Aid Destitute.

PORT HURON, MICH. — The boy scouts of this city and a number of men are arranging to go into the country to pick fruit, donated by the farmers. The fruit will be distributed among the deserving poor of the city.

VITAL FORCE

Disease germs are on every hand. They are in the very air we breathe. A system "run down" is a prey for them. One must have vital force to withstand them. Vital force depends on digestion—on whether or not food nourishes—on the quality of blood coursing through the body.

DR. PIERCE'S
Golden Medical Discovery

Strengthens the weak stomach. Gives good digestion. Enlivens the sluggish liver. Feeds the starved nerves. Again full health and strength return. A general upbuilding enables the heart to pump like an engine running in oil. The vital force is once more established to full power.

Year in and year out for over forty years this great health-restoring remedy has been spreading throughout the entire world—because of its ability to make the sick well and the weak strong. Don't despair of "being your old self again." Give this vegetable remedy a trial—Today—Now. You will soon feel "like new again." Sold in liquid or tablet form by Druggists or trial box for 50c by mail. Write Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Perpetual Motion.

A discovery which seems to be the equivalent of perpetual motion was described by Professor Whitehead at a meeting of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. He declared that by subjecting a closed coil of lead wire to practically absolute zero temperature, and starting a flow of electricity therein by some external means, Professor Kamerlingh Onnes of Leyden, Germany, succeeded in maintaining a continuous current without the expenditure of energy. To obtain the extremely low temperature necessary to make the experiment a success the coil was immersed in liquid helium. The current was started in the wire by magnetic induction, the flow of electricity persisting, it is declared, for four and one-half hours after the magnetic influence was removed. It was stated that if the experiment had not been terminated when it was the current would probably have continued to flow indefinitely.—Electrical World.

Boots and a Bishop.

The bishop of Yukon says that on one of his longest journeys he and his companions were reduced to eating their sealskin coats. They set out to visit the Eskimos along the Arctic coast and, having accomplished this stage of the journey, hoped to cross the great divide over the Rocky mountains in order to reach Dawson City. The sickness of an Indian guide delayed them, the winter set in earlier than usual, and the travelers had to pass through a region which offered scarcely any game for food. When they began to eat their sealskin boots they had less than two pounds of flour, a little bacon and a handful of rice. The boots they toasted, and the bishop remarked that they found them palatable enough. When they came to eat the tops of the boots the bishop recorded the fact that they were "not as good as the soles."—New York Journal.

Dogs of War.

Dogs have gone to the wars from the earliest times. They barked at the siege of Troy. In those early days, however, they were used as sentinels and for purposes of defense. In the middle ages they attacked. The tracking mission of the Scottish bloodhound has been noted, but the dogs were also used to attack cavalry. For this duty they were clothed in coats of mail studded with spikes and scythes to confuse the horses. And when firebrands were also attached to the mail the opposing camp looked for fire extinguishers. That these dogs played no mean part in the field is proved by the fact that Henry VIII. offered the Spanish king, Charles V., 40,000 auxiliaries and 4,000 war dogs to help him against Francis I.—London Chronicle.

Criminals Used a Textbook.

The late Sir Howard Vincent, M. P., when head of the criminal investigation department of Scotland Yard, wrote a very comprehensive book for the benefit of young constables. It told them how to act on every possible occasion, from capturing a burglar to consoling a lost child. But, unfortunately, the information it contained as to police methods was equally valuable to criminals, who profited by its tips to such an extent that the book was suppressed, and thenceforth constables were instructed by word of mouth.—London Express.

Woman So Weak and Nervous Could Not Stand Her Children Near Her—Vinol Changed Everything for Her

Plant City, Fla.—"I wish I could tell everybody about Vinol. For nine years I was in bad health. I got so I could not sleep, and I could not stand it to have my children come near me. I could not even sew or do any heavy housework. I was simply tired all the time. I tried so many medicines I could not recall them all, but nothing did me any good. One day a friend asked me to try Vinol and said it was the best tonic she ever saw. I did so, and soon got the first good night's sleep I had had for a long time. Now I sleep well, my appetite is good, my nervousness is all gone and I am so strong and well I do all my housework and work in my flower garden without feeling tired or nervous. Vinol has made me a well and happy woman."—Mrs. C. H. MILLER, Plant City, Fla.

Vinol contains the curative, healing principles of fresh cod livers (without oil) and tonic iron.

We ask every weak, run-down, nervous person in this vicinity to try Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

Why One Treaty Was Torn Up.

Many wars have flamed up from slight causes. One recalls the quarrel 'twixt that Venetian ambassador and that Turkish grand vizier of the past. The ratification of a treaty was in question, and the Turk asked the Venetian to swear in Moslem fashion—upon his beard and the beard of the prophet. The ambassador would not. "Venetians wear no beards," he remarked. "Neither do monkeys," replied the Turk, and straightway the treaty was torn up and war declared. And that interchange of compliments circling round the bear cost 150,000 lives.

Supreme Test of Friendship.

An invitation to breakfast was, in Macaulay's opinion, one of the supreme tests of friendship. "You invite a man to dinner," he wrote to Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, "because you must invite him, because you are acquainted with his grandfather, or because it is proper that you should; but you invite a man to breakfast because you wish to see him. You may be sure if you are invited to breakfast that there is something agreeable about you."

Moral Twisted.

The telephone in a physician's office rang madly the other day, relates Current Opinion, and the following conversation took place:

"We want the doctor, quick!"

"Who's sick at your house?"

"Everybody except me. I'd been naughty, so they wouldn't give me any of the nice mushrooms papa picked in the woods."

Her Praise Was Premature.

Lost Secret of Greeks.

No greater gift could be made to our modern world than the rediscovery of the Greek physical supremacy. The secret of the method by which for one brief period they realized perfection was long since lost, no one knows how.

At present so little do we understand the principles of training which guided the Greek in his games, in his battles and his dances and made the proportions of his figures different from ours of today that Greek sculpture is in reality a puzzle to us. Certain postures fixed by the Greek sculptor seem to us contortions, bordering on physical impossibilities. There is always a terrific controversy over the restoration of Greek sculpture, and even then the arms and heads and legs we supply never look right.

All this because we do not understand the principles by which the Greek ordered the movements of his body. It was a great secret of bodily co-ordination, and the secret has been lost and with it the ability thoroughly to understand Greek art.—New York Times.

School in the Sixteenth Century.

School life at Shrewsbury in the sixteenth century was a strenuous affair. Mr. Percy Addleshaw in his "Life of Sir Philip Sidney" has an interesting account of the school at that time. "The school year," he writes, "was divided into halves. From Lady day to All Saints' day the hours of attendance were from 6 o'clock in the morning till 11, the dinner hour. In the afternoon the boys studied from 12:45 till 5 o'clock. Prayers were recited at the beginning and close of the day. If a holy day occurred in the week it was a play day, but usually the weekly day for games was Thursday. One custom then begun is still observed. * * * At the earnest request and great entreaty of some man of honor, of great worship, credit or authority an extra holiday was granted to the boys. The judges of assize, when visiting Shrewsbury, are still accustomed to ask for and obtain this boon."—Westminster Gazette.

HEROIC STATUARY AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

AT the great Panama-Pacific International Exposition to open in San Francisco in 1915 almost twoscore of world famous sculptors and a great army of skilled assistants have been at work for more than a year creating marvelous statuary. This photograph shows some of the statuary outside of the sculptural warehouses.

GLOBE trotters and officials from all parts of the world who have visited the Panama-Pacific International Exposition grounds at San Francisco have expressed their astonishment and delight at the wonders already revealed there. "The most stupendous undertaking of the kind in history," "The furthest advanced toward completion" and "The most beautiful site and color effect of any exposition in the world" are a few of the expressions from men who are familiar with all of the great world expositions of modern times.

The exhibit palaces are of vast size. In the Palace of Machinery 20,000 people in masquerade costumes danced all night beneath the illuminated arches over nine acres of floor space. Lincoln Beachey flew an aeroplane in the same building.

No exposition has ever attracted such attention abroad. Thirty-six of the world's nations have accepted America's invitation to participate and will present on an elaborate scale exhibits revealing their progress. The participating nations are as follows: Argentina, Australia, Austria, Bolivia, Brazil, Bulgaria, Canada, Chile, China, Costa Rica, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, France, Great Britain, Guatemala, Haiti, Holland, Honduras, Italy, Japan, Liberia, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Panama, Persia, Peru, Portugal, Salvador, Siam, Spain, Sweden, Turkey, Uruguay and Venezuela.

Work is being rushed on the splendid illuminated towers, fountains and festival courts, where will be shown the masterpieces of architectural, landscape and sculptured decorations and the wonderful outdoor mural paintings, some of them 100 feet long and executed by eleven of America's greatest artists. The garden and landscape effects are almost completed at this writing, over a million rare trees, flowering shrubs and plants being used.

This greatest of universal expositions already gives proof that it will present the masterpieces of the world of art and that in its harmonious beauty, its high educational value and utility it will be unsurpassed in history.

ATTRACTIVE BOOK ON THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION AND PANAMA CANAL MAILED FREE OF CHARGE.

A HANDSOME book of sixty pages, profusely illustrated in colors and giving detailed descriptions of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to be held in San Francisco from Feb. 20 to Dec 4, 1915, and of the Panama canal and canal region, will be mailed by the Exposition free of charge to all inquirers. The booklet is intended as a general guide to prospective visitors and will also contain information concerning the great engineering feat which the Exposition is to celebrate. Write to the Manager, Bureau of Publications, Panama-Pacific International Exposition, Exposition Building, San Francisco, for booklet.

CRUISER EMDEN, SEATERROR, SUNK

German Warship Is Burned by Sydney Off Cocos Island.

ALLIES LINES ARE HOLDING

Ypres Ruined by German Shells—Belgians Reach Ostend—Russ Repulsed in Germany—Koenigsberg Bottled Up—Five Powers Declare War on Turkey.

Repulse of the German advance in the region of Bixschoote, Ypres and Armentieres was announced in the official communique. It was declared that fighting continues with unabated violence between Armentieres and the sea, both sides clashing in offensive movements.

The German cruiser Koenighberg has been chased into port at Mafia Island, on the coast of German East Africa, by the British warship Chatham and bottled up by the blocking of the channel to the harbor.

Berlin reports that the Russians, in an attempt to break into East Prussia by the old route south of Wirballen, were driven back across the border by General von Morgan's army.

The German cruiser Emden, which has been the terror of British shipping in the Pacific, has been destroyed by the British warship Sydney. The Admiralty announced that the Emden had been driven ashore on Cocos Island and burned to the water's edge.

A dispatch from "northern France" to the Chronicle says that advance patrols of Belgians have penetrated to Ostend, which means that the coast line from Dunkirk to Nieuport and Ostend is relieved from the menace of the last two weeks.

LONDON — The allied lines are holding solidly against a fierce continuous attack of the Germans in the vicinity of Ypres. At the war office in Paris it is declared the enemy is bringing tremendous pressure to bear in what would seem to be a supreme effort to crush the allied defense.

Ypres is in flames. The roar of big guns is incessant as the Germans keep up a constant artillery fire under cover of which the infantry assaults are made upon the British and French trenches.

No Loss of Life.

A Chronicle correspondent with the Belgian army near Ypres wires:

"The greater part of this fine old Flemish town of Ypres is in ruins. Early in the morning the Germans managed to get the range with their heavy artillery and from dawn onwards 11-inch and 13-inch shells were poured into the city at the rate of from two to twenty a minute.

"The town itself was completely deserted. No loss of life resulted from the heavy shell fire.

"The objective of the Germans' destructive appeared to be mainly the Halles, the most considerable Gothic edifice of its kind in Belgium. Much of the structural work of this building dates from the thirteenth century, and its destruction ranks in historical importance with that of Louvain and Rheims."

Five Powers Declare War on Turkey.

BORDEAUX — A formal declaration of war, signed by the five allies has been issued against Turkey.

The French declaration is remarkable. After mentioning the Black Sea episode as the direct cause of war, it says that since Turkish warships commanded by German officers, without due cause, had bombarded Russian ports a state of war existed between Turkey on the one hand and the five allies on the other. It then continues:

"It is not the French Republic's intention ever to forget the cordial friendship which for many centuries has linked France with the Ottoman Empire.

"In view of this fact it will not consider the many Turkish subjects at present residing within the French border as hostile enemies, but in the light of true friends."

Ottoman Troops Repulsed by Russ.

PETROGRAD — An official communication from the Caucasian army staff at Tiflis, dated Nov. 8, says:

"At daybreak near Koprukeui the combat was resumed with renewed force when the enemy launched against us troops concentrated in the region of Erzerum, which, in their turn, were re-enforced from the garrison of that stronghold.

Turk Led by Germans.

"To judge from the character of the action and such information as could be gathered, German officers commanded the Turks.

"In the afternoon the fighting assumed a particularly tenacious character when the Turks supported their advance guards by fresh divisions. Their attempted envelopment of one of our flanks failed, however.

Russ Hold Positions Gained.

"Thanks to the valor of our troops we were able toward evening, when the battle moderated to hold all we had previously conquered. One of our columns took possession of positions at KarakilIue (Karakilisse) and Alaschkerska."

Nicholas' Achievement Historic.

The succession of victories gained by Russia in East Prussia, west Poland and Galicia, and the extraordinarily powerful and rapid sweep westward of the Grand Duke Nicholas' main armies is the greatest achievement so far by Germany's antagonists. Military critics pronounce it a miracle of warfare comparable to the greatest operations of modern times. The Russian commander-in-chief has amazed the world by the speed and precision with which he has advanced his masses over a country practically without railroads and devoid of a high road worthy of the name.

Eighteen days ago the Russian armies stood at the river Vistula from Warsaw to Ivangorod and were now gathering momentum for a pursuit of the beaten German armies. In those eighteen days the grand duke has driven them more than 150 miles, so that advance guards occupy strategical positions over the frontier in Posen and Silesia. This applies to the operations of Russia's central army whose primary object is to seize Posen and Breslau. To the north, in East Prussia, and to the south, along the upper Vistula toward Cracow, the advances have been less rapid but equally irresistible.

Anti-War Turks Resign.

WASHINGTON — Three members of the Turkish cabinet who were opposed to war resigned Nov. 1, leaving the war party in complete control according to a dispatch from Henry Morgenthau, American ambassador to Turkey.

LISO ADMITS GIRL'S MURDER

Sentenced to Life Imprisonment on Plea of Guilty.

LA CROSSE, WIS. — Henry Liso, chauffeur for S. Y. Hyde, retired grain dealers, confessed that he killed Miss Petra Selberg, a servant in the family. Liso was taken at once before Judge Higbee in Circuit court, pleaded guilty to murder and was sentenced to life imprisonment at Waupun, all within thirty minutes.

Liso said he killed the girl because she threatened to make trouble unless he gave her $500. All he could raise, he said, was $200. Confronted with bloodstained garments of the girl, Liso broke down and confessed. After killing the girl with an automobile hammer, Liso said he cut her throat with a pocket knife. Then he dragged the body 300 feet through the woods and dumped it into the La Crosse river, where it was found sixteen hours later.

FOUR DIE IN PRAIRIE FIRE

Teacher and Three Pupils Perish Fleeing Flames in North Dakota.

DICKINSON, S. D. — The worst prairie fire tragedy in the history of his county occurred when a teacher in a country school and three pupils were burned to death and three other children were so badly burned that they may die.

Miss Gladys Hollister and twelve school children in the Davis school, twelve miles southwest of Belfield, saw the fire about five miles away coming up the valley toward them. Frantic with fright, they left the building, which stands uninjured, and which would have kept the safe. Five children succeeding in reaching home.

National Mexican Bank Sacked.

VERA CRUZ — Private telegrams say the National Bank of Mexico City has been sacked by a mob led by constitutionalist soldiers.

MAY LIFT STOCK BAN TOMORROW

Chicago Yards May Be Opened to Receive Shipments Thursday.

PRIZE CATTLE WILL RECOVER

Packers Declare There Will Be No Material Advance in Prices—Fresh Meat Is Imported—Thirteen States Under Ban—New Step to Check Hoof and Mouth Disease.

CHICAGO — Heavy importations of dressed beef to maintain the fresh meat supply of Chicago and the announcement that the stockyards probably will be reopened Thursday morning altered the cattle quarantine situation. Packers repeat that there will be no advance in the price of meat.

Bugbears that have loomed up as possibilities within the last few days become more shadowy with the announcement by A. G. Leonard, president of the Union Stockyards and Transit company, that the work of disinfecting and cleaning probably will be completed this afternoon and that if the requisite permission is given by the state live stock commission the yards will reopen to receive cattle for slaughter Thursday morning.

Inspection is Speedy.

As the pens are being inspected as they are cleaned, the inspection will be completed simultaneously with the disinfection.

The reopening order, if it comes, will not include the stockers' and feeders' pens in the south end. This is where cattle brought in for reshipment to other points are quartered. The business done here constitutes about 25 per cent of the total done at the yards.

Even when the yards reopened for the receiving of animals for immediate slaughter the supply is not likely to be as great as it was just before the quarantine.

Thirteen States Quarantined.

The addition of Rhode Island, Delaware and New Jersey puts thirteen states under the federal ban so far as the shipment of cattle is concerned.

New Step to Check Plague.

New steps to check the spread of the foot and mouth disease in the United States were taken when officials of the department of agriculture at Washington, D. C., prepared an order barring all shipments of Canadian livestock. There is no evidence of the disease in the dominion, but infected cars have been sent over the border and the order is designed to prevent this happening again.

All Infected Beeves Shot.

With the exception of the sixty-four sick cattle among the 800 dairy show animals, there is not a case of hoof and mouth disease at the Chicago stockyards, it was asserted, the last infected creature havin been shot and buried in quicklime yesterday. For the first time in more than fifty years there is not a living cow, steer, hog or sheep in the pens. Rats and pigeons have been included in the general slaughter.

Blooded Stock Will Be Saved.

Dr. Joseph Hughes, head of the Chicago Veterinary college, is caring for the sick prize cattle. He says that in many of the cases the disease is mild in form. Many of those first infected are convalescent now.

Red Hills Diamond Star, the $10,000 Ayrshire bull owned by the Strahtglass farm, Port Chester, N. Y., is among those reported on the road to recovery. Dr. O. E. Dyson, state veterinarian, says that the results obtained through the care of the infected blooded stock confirms his belief that the entire herd may be saved.

Michigan Laborer Is Living Off Rents from His Savings.

OWOSSO, MICH. — When the delivery wagon from Collins' grocery store goes by nowadays, the older residents of the city stop and stare after it. Some of them are tempted to rub their eyes.

For a stranger is driving the wagon. The thin figure of Otto Debeaux no longer adorns the front seat. Otto has resigned. He is devoting his time to collecting his rents and looking after his property.

Otto didn't have much education, to begin with; he classes only as a common laborer. He started to work 31 years ago for A. T. Thomas, grocer, who died about two years ago. A quarter of a century or more ago money bought more than it does now. Otto probably started in at $6 or $7 a week. When Mr. Thomas died, Otto's weekly wage was, and has been, $9 a week. He had never received more than that [illegible] working life. [illegible] Collins, who bought the [illegible] raised Otto to $10. But the bulk of his achievements were performed on $9 a week, $37 a month, $468 a year. Today Otto has a rent roll of about $100 a month. He owns eight houses. He has raised two girls to young womanhood, with the help of his frugal, industrious wife. He is a landed gentleman, a capitalist. He has had as much solid happiness out of his life as the most of us. He has helped support the church of which he is a faithful member. He and his family have lived plainly, but well; they were always comfortably clothed. He has accumulated property worth $15,000 on $9 a week.

Ann Arbor Woman Dies Suddenly.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Mrs. Laura E. Pember, 64, is dead here. She was the mother of Miss Fantine Pemberton, superintendent of nurses at a private hospital. Though ill the greater part of a year, her death came suddenly.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Burglars Enter Six Stores.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Grand Rapids played welcome host to a gang of burglars. Six places were entered in one night, including one post office substation where $500 in stamps and money was stolen from the safe. At the Bertsch market, on Monroe avenue northwest, the safe was torn to bits, but $3,000 in cash was overlooked. Two lumber company offices and a garage besides an office building suffered.

Last Chippewa Chief Dies.

CHARLEVOIX, MICH. — Word reached here from Garden Island, fifty miles out in Lake Michigan, of the death of Antoine Peane, Chippewa Indian, at the age of ninety-five. The death of Peane marks the passing of the last of the chiefs of the Chippewa in this section. Peane was rated one of the wealthiest Indians in this part of the country. He owned practically all of Garden Island, which is one of the largest islands of the lakes.

Veteran Engineer Resigns.

DETROIT, MICH.—After forty five years of continuous service for the Grand Trunk railway, a number of which were spent at the throttles of the fastest special trains on the road, John McLarsey of London, Ont., and well known in Windsor, one of the most popular engineers in southern Canada, has resigned.

His ambition as a boy was to some day drive a "flier" locomotive.

Train Cuts Off Man's Legs

ADRIAN, MICH.—Brant Robinson, of this city, lost both his legs when he was run down by a D., T. & I. train less than three blocks from his home. Robinson was walking along the track with a brother when the train bore down upon them. The victim slipped on the ties and before he could scramble to one side the wheels had passed over both his legs.

Nab Colored Preacher in Vice Raid.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.—Reverend Charles Meaux, a colored minister, was arrested here charged with running a house of ill-fame. According to the police he threw a woman, Mrs. Eliza Wells, out of a second story window when the raid was started. The woman landed near Special Officer Ashton, uninjured.

Kalamazoo Girl Badly Injured.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — When her foot caught in the rear wheel of a bicycle she was riding, 12-year-old Helen Jones was thrown violently to the pavement. One leg was broken, her jaw crushed and she was badly bruised and cut. She was picked up unconscious and carried to her home, where it was said she would recover.

Peppermint Foils Suicide.

ROCHESTER, MICH.—Mrs. John J. Blinn, a widow, attempted to commit suicide by drinking carbolic acid and peppermint.

The peppermint neutralized the carbolic acid, and except for a few burns she suffered no ill effects and will recover. She has been suffering from paralysis.

Big Land Deal at Bay City.

BAY CITY, MICH. — One of the largest sales of farm properties in northeastern Michigan has just been closed by Bourell Bros., of this city, who have sold their 1,200 acre farm in Hampton township to Illinois parties, the consideration being in the neighborhood of $125,000.

Passenger Traffic About Over.

PETOSKEY, MICH. — Passenger traffic is practically at a standstill on northern Lake Michigan, according to reports of vessel captains here. Not a single passenger has been left at or taken from Petoskey. In several trips Schedules are being maintained for freight service alone.

Bean Men to Meet.

SAGINAW, MICH. — A meeting of the bean men of Michigan has been called for Nov. 20 in Saginaw to consider the low prices on beans and the marketing of the product. State experts and possibly a speaker from the United States department of agriculture will be present.

No Smoking on Commission.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Battle Creek's city fathers must learn to chew gum and nibble chocolates for the edict has gone forth that there be no more smoking in commission meetings. This was decided when the men met for the first time in the new $200,000 city hall.

Man, Badly Burned, May Die.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — As a result of burns received when a can of gasoline exploded, Jay Jackson, 17, lies near death in Bronson hospital. Jackson was filling an automobile when some of the gasoline slopped over the tank and ran into the rear tail light.

The Headsman's Ax.

In days gone by the London public were always made aware by the manner in which the "headsman of the Tower" carried the ax whether the prisoner, who marched immediately following him in the procession to and from the place of trial, had been sentenced to death or not, for as long as the prisoner had not been convicted or condemned to lose his life the ax pointed forward as it was borne before him by the headsman. But from the very moment that capital punishment had been decreed against him the edge of the ax pointed ominously his way.

St. Helena.

One of the rocks of the island of St. Helena bears a distinct resemblance to the great Napoleon, so distinct, indeed that in the old pre-Suez days passengers on ships bound from India to England were wont to crowd the decks at sunset in the hope of catching a glimpse of the marvelous likeness of the emperor whose facial contour used to appear every evening clear cut in the last rays of the sun.

Time's Changes.

"You don't seem to hold me in the same regard that you did when you married me," said the sentimental woman.

"You must remember," replied her tactless spouse, "that you don't look the same as you did then. Fashions change so remarkably that I don't see how any man and woman can feel really well acquainted."—Variety.

INFLUENCE OF THE RUSSIAN CHURCH

BY
W. BLANCHARD MOORE

One of the wonders of Russia is the numerous churches that are found in all parts of the empire. No matter how small and poverty-stricken a village may be, you will find, comparatively speaking, an expensive church. In the small towns (especially Siberia), the churches are built of logs hewed flat—the floors made of boards, frequently covered with oil-cloth—the walls painted white or light blue and hung with sacred pictures and the domes are painted blue or green. Although the material is cheap, it is the best quality of the kind, more carefully selected and better finished than any building in the village. In large cities, however, especially in European Russia, the material used is of the most expensive character. Many of the churches are built of the finest white marble, beautifully carved, the floor is mosaic and varied colors, the walls are decorated with faces of Christ, the Virgin and Oriental Saints inlaid with jewels and precious stones set in gold, and the great domes are covered with pure gold leaf.

The great dome of every church is surrounded by four or more smaller ones that seem to guard it like sentinels. The great dome extends far above all other buildings, and is the first thing seen as one approaches the city. After the sun sinks below the horizon, the reflection on this golden dome gives it the appearance of a miniature sun, and as the lingering rays mingle with the rays of the moon, this apparent dome of solid gold slowly melts into one of silver.

Contrary to general opinion, there is one place in Russia where all classes are on absolute equality—and that is—at the church. In the most expensive churches, neither money nor birth can secure a favored place. Beneath these gilded domes, noblemen, peasant and beggar, regardless of dress or station, kneel side by side to offer up their prayers.

In Russia, the traveler is not only impressed by the magnitude and wonderful influence of the church, but also by the slavish devotion of the peasants to their religious belief. In the finest mansion or the humblest hut, you will find the gilded Ikon before which the devout Russian prostrates himself from ten to twenty times a day. Before everything he eats or drinks, he will cross himself and murmur his prayers.

In order to become more familiar with the life of the peasant under varying conditions, I spent nearly two days in a fourth class railway coach, which is only one class above the ordinary immigrant car. The majority of the passengers were immigrants and it was almost pitiful to see their slavish religious devotion.

On the Siberian road, stops are few, but long, and at the first opportunity in the morning, these peasants would rush from the car, facing the sun and apparently unconscious of the presence of others, go through their religious exercises. At frequent intervals during the day, standing in the crowded car and without the slightest possible privacy, these simple people cross themselves and earnestly pray from five to ten minutes. They were so intense in their devotion that they seemed perfectly oblivious of their surroundings, and the reverential expression on their faces was ample proof of their sincerity.

Quoting from a writer on Russia—"Owing to the intense ignorance and extreme religious principles of the Russian peasant, he is an easy victim of imposters. As an illustration, a fellow, dressed as a monk or priest, traveled from one town to another and for a small sum, offered to show a few hairs of the Virgin Mary. Only one person was admitted at a time. From a small package, he removed in succession, a series of wrapping papers and in the last one the visitor was invited to gaze upon these miraculous hairs. The paper, of course, was empty, and the peasant would declare he saw nothing. The imposter would then sorrowfully explain these hairs are invisible to sinful eyes and it is only the pious who can see them. The Mujick (Russian peasant), would again look more closely and then loudly and proudly declare he saw them plainly."

In many nations, the church is a secondary consideration, and religion is largely a matter of custom. In Russia, however, the church is first in word, thought and deed, and religion with the masses is part of their life, in fact, the very essence of their inner being.

At Bradley Opera House, under the auspices of the Odd Fellows, Monday Nov. 16th.

It Rained Stars.

In "North Africa and the Desert" the author tells of a wondrous spectacle he witnessed while traversing the desert toward Tougourt. He says:

Then in the last half hour I witnessed a strange phenomenon. The whole sky was powdered with stars; I had never seen such a myriad glimmer and glow, thickening, filling the heavenly spaces. Innumerable, and all at once they seemed to interlink, great and small, with rays passing between them, and while they shone in their places, infinite in multitude, light fell from them in long lines like falling rain down the whole concave of night from the zenith to the horizon on every side. It was a Niagara of stars. The celestial dome without a break was sheeted with the starry rain, pouring down the hollow sphere of darkness, from the apex to the desert rims. No words can describe that sight as a mere vision; still less can they tell its mystical effect at the moment. It was like beholding a miracle. And it was not momentary; for half an hour, as we drove over the dark level, obscure, silent, lonely, I was arched in and shadowed by that ceaseless, starry rain on all sides round, and as we passed the great twin lights of the gates and entered Tougourt and drew up in the dim and solitary square it was still falling."

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

November 13, 1879.

A genuine November rain yesterday.

Last week A. W. Slayton received at his factory 2,000 bed hooks and 4288 castors. All this for the retail furniture trade.

G. W. Lewis, suprentendent of the Clinton Woolen Mills was in town last Saturday. He says the factory has never been so driven with orders as at the present. Week before last they turned out 6400 yards of cloth and are behind in their orders.

Fred B. Wood commenced work last Saturday for Wm. McCowan in the furniture store. Fred is a favorite among the young men of Tecumseh and Mr. McCowan controls one of our most substantial business houses. We doubt not that this new arrangement will prove both congenial and profitable to the contracting parties.

Cass Miller, editor of the Livingston Republican, was in town over Sunday. Cass finds the journalistic profession a very congenial one and is making the Republican a first class weekly.

The prize rifle, won by Co. C. at Jackson, was by a vote of the Company, made private property to the member, who for three successive trials could make the highest score, over all competitors Wednesday afternoon in a fearful gale of wind and rain, the boys had their first trial shoot and Chet Haynes won by a score of 35.

THE GREAT CHICAGO STOCK SHOW

It should be understood that the purpose of the International Life Stock Exposition, which will be held this year from Nov. 28 to Dec. 5, is the improvement of the live stock of the nation. It is educational in its nature, aims methods and results. It brings together annually from 6,000 to 10,000 of the worlds choicest animals, to be judged in upwards of 600 classes, in competition for over 2,600 cash premiums aggregating more than $75,000, besides other numerous valuable prizes, trophies, medals of honor, etc., and holds constant business sessions during the week composed of the foremost live stock representatives of the world, also a serious of brilliant evening horse fairs and displays of premium live stock in the arena with music and special features all for the purpose of instructing the eye and the mind of the producer of live stock to the importance and necessity of better methods and the greater profits to be derived from raising the better kinds of farm animals, thus expanding and improving the industry throughout the nation, and increasing greatly its agricultural prosperity. In short, it is a vast object lesson intended for the improvement of the live stock of the United States, the upbuilding of public confidence in the health and excellence of American animals and meats, and the creation of a better demand for them at home at and abroad.

STATE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONVENTION, ADRIAN.

Tecumseh has been well represented at the State Sunday-school convention in Adrian this week, many going over by train and others by auto. All report a very interesting meeting with good speakers in every department.

Adrian is in gala attire for the occasion to greet the crowds of people who have gathered from all parts of the state. Every available space in opera house or churches has been occupied and many have been turned away from the meetings.

C. H. Mott of Adrian has been chosen as president for the coming year and the next place of meeting will be in Battle Creek

This has been a most successful meeting up to the present time and the meetings this evening will be a grand finis

TECUMSEH AND THE EARTHQUAKE.

Connected with the great earthquake period of 1811-12 occurred one of the romances of American history. It was the lucky prediction of the great earthquake that made the fame of Tecumseh the celebrated "Indian False Prophet," and led to the uprising of the Creek Nation and the terrible Indian war that followed.

"Tecumseh" was a Shawnee warrior and first appeared among the Seminoles in Florida and the Creeks in Alabama and Georgia as early as 1810, endeavoring to form them into a confederacy whose aim it was to rise up against the whites in the northwest and exterminate them.

He failed, and on the breaking out of the war with England in 1812, entered the service of the British and again set out to stir up sedition among the Southern Indians.

He had been told by the English when a comet would appear, and he told his excited Indian hearers that at a certain time they would see his arm stretched over the sky on fire, and that he was going to Detroit to prepare them for their rising against the Americans. When the proper time came he would strike the ground with his foot so hard that he would shake down the houses in their head city.

He left the Creeks, and at the time when he promised to smite the ground, strange to say, came the great earthquake. All the territory bordering on the gulf was agitated. The ground of Alabama trembled like an aspen, while from the earth came terrifying rumblings and groans.

The town of Tookabatcha, the capitol of the Creeks, was shaken to ruins, and as the earth heaved and shook, the frightened Indians ran from their dwellings crying, "Tecumseh is at Detroit! Tecumseh is at Detroit! We feel the stamp of his foot!"

At the same time the comet appeared in the heavens. This was too much for the superstitious Creeks. They rose, to a man, and after two years of sanguinary fighting, they were a defeated and ruined nation.

Tecumseh was killed in the battle on the Thames, in Canada, October 5, 1813, by American troops under the command of Col. Richard Johnson of Kentucky. Tecumseh, who was serving in the English ranks, commanding a band of Indians, was carried off the field by followers, and buried no one knows where.

Why The Youth's Companion Should Be In Every Family.

"If I could take only one paper," said the late Mr. Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court, "it would be The Youth's Companion—a little of everything in a nutshell, and unbiased." The Companion is a family paper in the completest sense It provides reading that, without failing to interest the young, still interests the mature, It unites young and old through their common enjoyment of delightful fiction, agreeable miscellany, and the clear exposition of public questions.

So carefully is it edited, so varied are its contents, that it would easily supply a family with entertaining fiction, up-to-date information and wholesome fun, if no other periodical entered the house.

If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is to-day, let us send Forcast for 1915

New subscribers who send $2.00 for the fifty-two issues of 1915 will receive free all the remaining issues of 1914, besides a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1915.

A Modern Fable

Once upon a time there were two men, Mr. Optimistic and Mr. Pessimistic, who made up their minds to go fishing. They expended a large amount for first-class tackle and bait and met on the shore of the lake.

Mr. Pessimistic said, "It smells like rain. It seems to me I can see a cloud in the sky. I am not going out until things look more favorable. The boat might tip over and I would lose my bait and expensive tackle, and even if the boat didn't tip over, I might get wet, catch cold and die, so I am not going out until things look more favorable."

Mr. Optimistic said, "Well, you can stay here, count your worms and eat your frogs. I am going out. I have some good fresh bait and a little cloud does not scare me a particle. Suppose we do have a shower, the sun will soon come out. Besides I want some fish and am going to have them."

All day long Mr. Pessimistic sat on the shore and waited for the storm that never came His worms dried up, his frogs died and at night when Mr. Optimistc came in with a big string of fish, he cursed his luck and said everything was against him and teased Mr. Optimistic to divide his fish with him.

MORAL—Just because there is a quarantine on the state and the financial condition is not just right, don't give up and say everything is all wrong. The sun will soon shine bright, make your plans for the coming year, as it is going to be a BANNER YEAR for us all

CHARITY BALL

As the winter season approaches there are in our midst many deserving though unfortunate families who are without fuel, proper clothing, or even nourishing food.

There is a society also in our midst whose sole purpose in existing is to alleviate as far as possible these conditions

The Society of Kings Daughters in its efforts to assist the needy and suffering has given each year an entertainment of some kind the proceeds of which are used to put heart or warmth in some "down and out" individual or family.

This year the Kings Daughters will give a Charity Ball on Thanksgiving night Nov. 26th at Witherel Hall particulars of which will appear later.

An invitation and an appeal is extended to every one to attend this party or if not able to do so to aid in some way a cause so well worth while.

WORD FROM OUR TOURISTS.

Through the kindness of Mrs. Wm. Powell we publish the following letter from her cousin Mrs. Fred Stitt who with her daughters and their husbands, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Whelan and Mr. and Mrs Leo Theilan, are on their way to California:

Clovis, N. M., Nov. 8, 1914.

DEAR COUSIN: I suppose you are wondering where we are tonight. Well we have been riding over the prairie most of this last week, but we have had enough of the prairie all at once and now we are ready for something else.

One can see a long way on the prairie, and prairie dogs are about all one see. The boys had some fun trying to shoot them but the little animals were too quick for them.

We saw lots of horses and cattle. Eight hundred calves were in one herd, all of a size and all with white faces. Six cowboys on ponies were driving them.

We came through Canyon City and Amorilla, Texas, yesterday and saw some fine homes. No one can imagine the beautiful sights until they take the trip.

We have crossed several rivers. One was dry and we drove across and in the other the water was quite deep but we went through all right. We came across one on a boat and at one a mule drew the auto across and we rode the cowboys' horses across. Oh! maybe you think we are not having a good time.

Towser rides all the way but he did get out and swim across the river yesterday.

We came 104 miles since noon until 5:30, best time we have made any day yet. I think we will be in the mountains tomorrow if nothing happens.

It is rather cool tonight so we thought we would stop at a hotel, the second one we have stopped at. Room 50c, meals 25c, and we surely get fine meals, a good deal better than one gets in Michigan for twice as much. I was surpised in both meal and price We have met the nicest people all the way through. The roads have been fine most of the way and we are told we will have good roads the rest of our journey.

We intend to stop in Alberquerque a day or two and hope to be there in two or three days.

I would like to send you pictures of some of the places we have visited but it has been hard for us to get any cards with the scenery on, but may be able to get some later on.

Good-by with love, MARGARET.

OWE MY HEALTH to Peruna

I was Gradually Breaking Down From Confinement to Store.

Mr. C. N. Peterson, dealer in fine [illegible], shoes and cigars, No. 132 South [illegible] St., Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes:

"I cannot tell you how much good Peruna has done me. Constant confinement in my store began to tell on my health and I felt that I was gradually breaking down.

"I tried several remedies prescribed by my physician but obtained no permanent relief until I took Peruna. I felt better immediately and five bottles restored me to complete health. I have been in the best of spirits since, and feel that I owe my health to it."

Catch Cold Easily.

Mr. Arthur G. Peterson, R. F. D. 21, Box 21, Omro, Wisconsin. He was in the habit of catching cold easily.

He says: "It has been seven months now since I have taken any Peruna and I haven't felt the least touch of cold since, and I am positive that I am now rid of the tendency to catch cold. Peruna is a wonderful remedy."

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

DE WET DEFEATS BRITISH

Rebels in South Africa Said to Be Victors Over Cronje Command.

LONDON.—General Christian de Wet, rebel leader, says Reuter's Pretoria correspondent, "has been in contact with and dispersed a small government command under General Cronje, a member of the legislature, near Doornberg.

"In the fighting de Wet's son Daniel was killed. The government is sending strong reinforcements to Cronje."

SERVIANS LOSE EARTHWORKS

Points of Capture Near Krupanji Taken By Austrians in Desperate Fight.

WASHINGTON.—The Austro-Hungarian embassy made public the following official wireless dispatch from Vienna: "There is no fighting in the northeastern war theater. Desperate engagements continue in Servia near Krupanji. Earthworks after earthworks and points of support taken by storm."

London, Nov. 11.—Reuter's Nish, Servia, correspondent reports that there was severe fighting Nov. 6 on all the Servian fronts, the Austrians losing 1,000 killed and being compelled to retire to their former positions before Shabatz.

KILLS WIFE; WOUNDS HER BROTHER-IN-LAW

Alleged Undue Intimacy of Victims Causes Family Brawl.

BAY CITY, MICH.—Mrs. Joseph Kosiecki, fifty-seven, died in Mercy hospital from injuries alleged to have been inflicted by her husband, now under arrest, during a quarrel at the Kosiecki farm in Beaver township, 15 miles from here.

Lawrence Sikorski, a brother of the woman's first husband, and whose alleged intimacy is said to have been the cause of the tragedy, was found by Sheriff Fitzgerald at the home of relatives, two miles from the scene of the quarrel. Sikorski is suffering from a gunshot wound in the head, said to have been inflicted by Kosiecki, who, according to reports, fired at Sikorski as he fled from the house. The wound is not serious, however.

After Sikorski had eluded him, Kosiecki is said to have stabbed his wife with a hunting knife and fired a shot at his 15-year-old daughter, who however, escaped injury. When the officers, who had been summoned by Sikorski, arrived, Kosiecki, it is said, was removing bloodstains from his wife's body.

MICHIGAN HAS OLD CHURCH

125th Anniversary Is Celebrated by St. Mary's at Monroe.

MONROE, MICH.—The one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church was celebrated here.

At a solemn high mass in the morning the following dignitaries officiated: Father N. A. Miller, celebrant; Father M. J. Crowley, deacon; Father F. A. Pruess, sub-deacon; chancellor of the diocese, Father Marron master of ceremonies; Father John A. Bolte and Father Clement Wagner, O. S. S. R., assistants to the bishop. A special sermon for the occasion was delivered by Auxiliary Bishop Edward Kelley, of Ann Arbor. Bishop John S. Foley, of Detroit, was not present owing to illness, but extended his greetings. A banquet attended by Auxiliary Bishop Kelley and scores of clergymen was held at 5 o'clock.

IS NOT SO POOR AS THOUGHT

$700 Is Found In Home of Supposedly Destitute Woman.

FLINT, MICH.—Called to the home of Miss Amanda Crapsley, an aged woman, by her serious illness, Poor Commissioner Frank Wells and Health Officer Knapp, while making arrangements for her transfer to a hospital, found she had stored in a pasteboard candy box and an old satchel in her room in a tenement nearly $700 in bills and gold. The money was placed in a bank and she was sent to the hospital.

Relatives and friends expressed themselves as surprised at the finding of the money, as they supposed she had only a few dollars in the world. The hoarding is her life's savings from earnings at house work.

GIRL FINDS MISSING FATHER

Kalamazoo Sheriff's Efforts Make Possible Reunion of Pair.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—A 14-years' search conducted by Mrs. H. D. Howland, of Baltimore, for her father, Emil Krause, has just come to an end. Through the efforts of Sheriff Ralph Chapman, father and daughter will be reunited. Krause left the east in search of work. In some way the father lost the address of his daughter and the daughter lost the address of her father. Although both have made an effort to find the other, it was not until the daughter appealed to the sheriff to find her father, whom she believed to be working near the city, that he was found.

Mr. Krause will leave for Baltimore at once.

RECLUSE BURNS TO DEATH

Saginaw Civil War Veteran Tried in Vain to Escape Flames.

SAGINAW, MICH.—Hiram O. Morgan, 75 years old, a veteran of the Civil war, was burned to death in his home at Carrollton.

His charred torso was found in the ruins where the front door of the house had stood, showing that he no doubt had been awakened by the flames and had tried to escape, as his bedroom was in another part of the dwelling. Employes of the Michigan Sugar company saw the flames, and several attempted to force an entrance but the smoke and fire kept them back. Morgan had lived alone.

The Nurse's Dilemma.

"Habit is a cable," somebody has written, with other and sundry remarks as to this selfsame cable becoming stronger until at last you cannot break it. Be this last so or not, the first portion was never more aptly illustrated than one day recently in one of the board of health children's clinics.

The nurse in charge had fallen into the habit of calling her little patients "dear" and "dearie." Imagine her consternation when, turning to address the physician who was that day in charge, she started off with something like this:

"Dearie, don't you think"—

At this point half suppressed giggles from the other nurses and loud guffaws of laughter from the doctor himself brought the conversation to a sudden pause, while waves of crimson covered her face.—Detroit News.

Not Mumps.

A small boy of Nashville has been afflicted with mumps. The siege was unusually long and disagreeable. One evening recently an aunt who is a newspaper woman called up the boy's mother on the telephone to cancel an engagement. She was absent, and the boy himself answered the call.

"Tell your mother," said the aunt, "that I can't come out this evening because I have taken an assignment. Can you remember that?"

"Yes, ma'am," said the boy. "I'll tell her." When the mother returned he said to her:

"Mother, auntie telephoned that she couldn't come, because she is sick."

"Sick? Why, what's the matter?" she wanted to know.

"I forgot what it is she's got," said the boy. "It's something she has taken, but it isn't mumps."—Nashville Banner.

Life In the Garden of Eden.

The inhabitants of Eden plainly lived without toil. They were born to that leisure for which we strive so fiercely in this workaday world. So far as the man was concerned, the sting of the expulsion was the fact that he had to go forth and eat bread in the sweat of his face. Jehovah did not enforce this sentence at hard labor by putting a guard over Adam. Eve was not placed in charge, nor yet the wily serpent. The offender was merely driven forth from the garden that was full of trees. The trees had made it paradise. Every tree that was pleasant to the sight and good for food was there. The inhabitants walked about in the comfortable shade and ate. When thirst arose there were the juices of fruits and palm wine. The spontaneous products of the garden even supplied the first demand for clothes. On that bitter day of expulsion these erstwhile happy harvesters of treetops were driven forth from this rich and fruitful shade, driven to the fields to eat the herb of the field and to win bread by the sweat of their faces.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Cure For Snake Bite.

Many are the curious methods adopted for curing snake bites, but surely none can be more so than a way of which our Bhavagar correspondent informs us. Two natives in a village near that station were, he says, brought back to life after being bitten by a cobra.

The victims were seated on the ground and there held, while from a height of sixteen feet gallons of hot water were poured on their heads. Presently, according to the correspondent, the victims "took a new lease of life," and are as well as though they had never been in the jaws of death at all.

The explanation to this "cure" probably is that the snake, as often happens, bit its victims, but injected no poison into them. Thus the men were merely terrified and continued to be frightened until the pain caused by the douche of hot water gave them something else to think about.—Civil and Military Gazette.

Woman So Weak and Nervous Could Not Stand Her Children Near Her — Vinol Changed Everything for Her

Plant City, Fla.—"I wish I could tell everybody about Vinol. For nine years I was in bad health. I got so I could not sleep, and I could not stand it to have my children come near me. I could not even sew or do any heavy housework. I was simply tired all the time. I tried so many medicines I could not recall them all, but nothing did me any good. One day a friend asked me to try Vinol and said it was the best tonic she ever saw. I did so, and soon got the first good night's sleep I had had for a long time. Now I sleep well, my appetite is good, my nervousness is all gone and I am so strong and well I do all my housework and work in my flower garden without feeling tired or nervous. Vinol has made me a well and happy woman."—Mrs. C. H. MILLER, Plant City, Fla.

Vinol contains the curative, healing principles of fresh cod livers (without oil) and tonic iron.

We ask every weak, run-down, nervous person in this vicinity to try Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic without oil, on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

Why a Soldier Didn't Like to Talk About His Deed

By F. A. MITCHEL

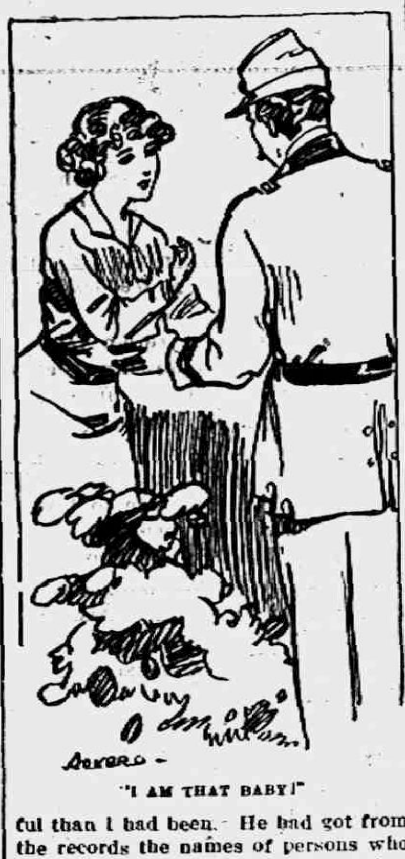
I was born at the time of the war between the states, but what year I have never known till recently. My earliest remembrance is being in a foundling institution in Harrisburg, Pa. How I came to be there I could never find out, for it was, judging from my age, toward the close of the war and when everybody and everything was in a state of commotion. I left the asylum when I must have been about sixteen years old. At any rate, the inmates were not kept there after sixteen, and since there was a record on the books in 1863 of "a female baby apparently about a year old" that was called Betty or Hetty or something like that—the first letter was blurred—and I was called Betty it was assumed that the record pertained to me.

At leaving, being old enough to understand the importance of learning as much as possible about my antecedents, I made every inquiry concerning them, but all I could learn was the above. The clothes in which I was brought to the institution had been preserved, but the only thing on them for identification was the letters "H. C.," which were carefully embroidered.

On leaving the asylum I went to serve as nursemaid with a lady in Philadelphia. She and her husband were refined persons and on hearing my story took an interest in me, expressing themselves ready to help me to find my parents.

One day Mr. Sawyer, husband of the lady by whom I was employed, returned after an absence.

He told me that he had been in Harrisburg and while there, being interested in my case, had gone to the asylum where I had been brought up to make inquiries concerning me. Being a man of affairs, he was more successful than I had been. He had got from the records the names of persons who were connected with the asylum when I was sent there and had advertised for several of them. An elderly woman living in the country not far from Harrisburg answered the advertisement. Mr. Sawyer learned from her that she was at the asylum from 1862 to 1864; that during that time a girl baby was brought in by a Union soldier. That was all she could remember, for she had left the institution soon after the child was received.



"I AM THAT BABY!"

I think Mr. Sawyer took more interest in the matter than I. Perhaps it was a detective instinct in him that led him to busy himself about it. At any rate, his curiosity was aroused, and he kept thinking about it much of the time.

"You're a war baby, Bet," he would say to me. "I have an idea that you got lost somehow during the war. Maybe your father was a soldier and got killed and a comrade took his little girl and not being in a position to care for her left her at the asylum. This theory is supported by the fact that about the time you were taken there General Lee invaded Pennsylvania, and every citizen who could carry a gun turned out to oppose him. We will establish your identity and don't you forget it."

When the war ended, everybody, both north and south, had had enough of it. About fifteen years after its close those who were interested in it began to talk about it and write about it and discuss who should have the credit of this and who was to blame for that, and all the prominent Union and Confederate officers who were living found an opportunity to explain their records. As to those who had died in the struggle, they had nothing to say and were lucky if they didn't have to bear the brunt of blunders committed by those who had lived to tell their stories.

It was about this time, I believe, that people began to take an interest in the battlefields which now are made national parks. When I was nineteen years old there was a gathering of veterans on the field of Gettysburg, and Mr. Sawyer proposed to his wife that they make an excursion and visit the field themselves. Mrs. Sawyer would not go without taking their son, Tommy, now four years old, and that involved taking me along to have the care of him while his father and mother were visiting the scenes of the different fights on the battlefield.

So we all went down together on one of the anniversaries of the struggle, and, since Tommy manifested a desire to go about with his father and mother, I had an opportunity to go too. The veterans we saw moving about in groups locating different scenes of those exciting days of 1863 were not the old men they are today. Many of them had fought as mere boys, and they were fine looking middle aged men.

One Union veteran—he was between thirty-five and forty years old—a friend of Mr. Sawyer, took charge of our party and showed us over the field, telling us in a very interesting manner where this and that engagement had taken place, Little Round Top, Cemetery Ridge and other interesting points, pointing out where his own regiment had fought without claiming that it had won the fight or, indeed, saying anything about its or his achievements.

There was something in his appearance that attracted me, and this refraining from making claims for his regiment or himself added to my admiration for him. I had bemoaned my humble position, but now it was doubly hard to bear, for I could not but think that, though he was courteous to me as to the others, he must look down on me as a simple nursegirl.

After we had seen the scenes of heroism of others I asked our guide to be more exact in the matter of his own participation in the battle. Yielding to my solicitations, he told his story, which was interesting, though he refrained all through it from claiming to have done anything very brave.

After driving about the field we stopped at a farmhouse not far from it for dinner. A woman who served us seemed interested in our chat about what we had seen and, being asked whether she had lived there when the battle took place, said:

"Yes, I lived here, and I wish I hadn't, for there is a matter connected with the battlefield that has been a regret to me ever since and always will be. A lady had come from the city of Philadelphia to be in the country for her health. She boarded with my mother, who lived in a house where part of the fighting took place. We country people didn't know that there was to be a battle here and were not prepared for it. There were lots of soldiers gathering here, and we were all much excited over their coming. This lady from Philadelphia had a baby and had brought a nurse with her to take care of it. The nurse was taken sick and went home. Then the lady hired me to take care of her child.

"One morning I wanted to go to see my aunt, who lived across the field where the soldiers were to fight, and I thought it a good plan to take the baby with me in her little carriage. So I put the bottle in her mouth and started. I was passing along quietly when I heard a lot of firing all about me, and it seemed as if a dozen thunderstorms had broken out at once. I was scared to death."

The woman seemed to live again in the scene she was describing and trembled.

"Then I did what I have regretted all the rest of my life. I deserted the baby, leaving the little thing sucking at its bottle in its carriage, and ran away and hid in the first house I came to. The child was probably killed, for nobody has ever heard of it since."

"I can assure you," said our guide, "that it wasn't killed, for our regiment moved through the trees when you left it. My captain detailed me to take charge of it. I never have since liked to talk about my part in the battle of Gettysburg—at least, to mention this incident—for when I say I was wheeling a baby carriage everybody laughs."

"For land's sake!" exclaimed the woman. "What did you do with it?"

"Put it in a barn till the battle was over, then found it safe and sound, but bawling for more milk. Before the next day's fight came on I had provided for it temporarily, and, after the fighting was over and the Confederates had withdrawn, my captain sent me off to hunt for its mother. I couldn't find her, and I was sent to Harrisburg with it, where I chucked it in an orphan asylum."

"I am that baby!" I exclaimed, much excited and, not realizing what I was doing, threw myself into the arms of the man that had rescued me.

There was a commotion at this, and then the rest of the matter came out. The woman who had been my nurse remembered my mother's name—Chenowith—and I had been baptized Harriet. This corresponded with the initials "H. C." embroidered on my baby clothes.

What remains I will tell in a few words. My mother and father were both living, and I was reunited with them and several brothers and sisters. They were overjoyed at finding me and lavished every blessing on me that they could think of. One day the soldier who had rescued me asked me, "Where do I come in?" and when I inquired of him where he wished to come in he said, "Finders are keepers," which, being interpreted, meant that he wanted me for himself. He didn't have any trouble getting me.

After our marriage we went to the asylum where he had left me more than twenty years before and examined the record. There I saw that the first letter to the name I had been given was intended for a G. I had been called Getty, from the battle of Gettysburg, but the name was soon changed to Betty.

CRIME LAWS NEED PATCHING

Gov. Ferris to Ask Commission for Revision of Penal Code.

LANSING, MICH.—Gov. Ferris will ask the commission on the revision of the statutes to tackle the criminal laws of the state next. The commission, which was appointed under authority of legislative enactment in 1913, is composed of Albert Cummings, of Lansing; Mark Stevens, of Flint, and J. Clyde Watt, of Saranac. It has been working on taxation laws, domestic regulation laws, and the matter of new court procedure, and is about ready to report.

The governor says that there is a strong demand for a revision of the criminal laws, and will ask the commission, if not able to revise them before the opening of the session, to try and have them ready before the close of the session.

HORSE DIES IN ODD MISHAP

Pulls on Strap, Suddenly Released, Rolls Down Bank, Breaks Neck.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Nov. 16.—A valuable horse belonging to Mrs. August Kurz of Chestnut street, fell in such a manner that its neck was broken, the result of an unusual accident. Mrs. Kurz and her daughter were out driving and called at the farm of Mrs. E. M. Quincy on First street North. They tied the horse to a telephone pole, using a short strap. The horse fell to its knees, and being unable to get up a passenger attempted to assist the animal by cutting the strap. The horse rolled down an embankment, breaking his neck and died instantly.

FOUND BOUND; CAN'T EXPLAIN

Police Puzzled by Mysterious Case of Sixteen Year Old Girl.

Adrian, Mich., Nov. 16.—Marion Wilmoth, sixteen years old, was found late at night by her mother, bound and engaged in her own home, when the mother returned from the city. Officers working on the case have been unable to solve the mystery surrounding the incident.

The girl stoutly maintains that she knows nothing of the affair, saying that she was writing some letters earlier in the evening but can not tell what happened after that time.

REPETTO TO HANG DEC. 18

Date of Execution of Convict Who Killed Fellow Prisoner Fixed.

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 16.—Frank Repetto, Chicago convict, murderer of Charles Mastonss, another Chicago convict, will be hanged Friday, Dec. 18.

Judge Frank Hooper fixed the date following the denial of a new trial. Repetto stabbed Mastons while they were at dinner in the prison.

BULL MOOSE OUST CHAIRMAN

Jack P. Mann Failed to Properly Certify Election Clerks.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 16.—At a meeting Vanderburg county Progressives voted unanimously to oust Jack P. Mann as county chairman and expel him from the Progressive club because of his alleged failure to certify election clerks in the election Nov. 3 as required by law.

Progressives charge that Mann appointed more than one clerk each for certain precincts. E. Q. Lockyears was chosen the new chairman.

RIVER PILOT DIES AT WHEEL

Relief Officer Barely Reaches House in Time to Right Dubuque.

Alton, Ill., Nov. 16.—For several minutes the Streckfus line steamer Dubuque, carrying a crew of sixty and ten passengers, plowed through the waters of the Mississippi river near Alton at random, while Charles Martin, sixty-four years old, the pilot, lay dying in the pilot house. Heart disease is believed to have caused his death.

The boat, which was traveling north, reached a dangerous channel, and officers on deck became aware something was wrong. As several of them rushed towards the pilot house the boat nosed against a sand bank and sheered off. Captain Jacob Richtman, relief pilot, who was eating in the dining room, hurried into the pilot house and righted the boat.

Frank Refused New Trial.

Atlanta, Ga., NNov. 16.—The state supreme court refused a new trial to Leo M. Frank, convicted here August 25, 1913, of the murder of Mary Phagan. Frank's attorneys announced that they would immediately appeal to the United States supreme court.

Russ Advance on Danzig

Petrograd, Nov. 16.—An official statement says that the Russian troops are advancing rapidly toward Dnazig, which is their objective point in the campaign in East Prussia. The Austrian army continues its retreat toward Cracow.

Baraga, Mich., Nov. 16.—When William Mathes arrived here this week from Saskatchewan, Canada, he completed a remarkable journey. He made the entire distance in a wagon drawn by two horses. It took him four weeks and three days.

HUNTERS DISOBEYING ORDER

Despite Governor Ralston's Proclamation Hoosier Nimrods Are Active.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Nov. 16.—Rodney Fleming, captain of the staff of the state fish and game commissioners, notified all local hunters that any of them found hunting on Sunday will be arrested. A number of local nimrods left the city on hunting trips despite Governor Ralston's orders preventing hunting during the prevalance of the foot and mouth disease.

Local doctors declare that many residents of Allen county are suffering from a panic which causes them to think that they are suffering from foot and mouth disease.

FIGHT TO SALVE WARSHIP FAILS

Bandmaster of Olympic Tells of Audacious Disaster.

BLOWN UP AFTER EXPLOSION

Superdreadnaught Did Not Sink as Result of Mine, It Is Said, But Was Shattered by Men of Cruiser Liverpool to Remove Ship From Navigation.

New York, Nov. 16.—The American liner New York, in from Liverpool, brought a graphic yarn of the loss of the superdreadnaught Audacious, spun by James Rupert Beamr, formerly bandmaster of the White Star liner Olympic, which made a valorous but vain effort to save the great battle ship several hours after she hit a German mine off the northern coast of Ireland on Oct. 27. The bandmaster was corroborated by an assistant, Hugh Griffiths, and neither would consent to talk until assured that the story of the disaster had been printed here, as they had pledged themselves to secrecy. They were observers of the gallant work of their intrepid commander, Capt. Herbert J. Haddock and they talked with petty officers and sailors of the Audacious who were taken aboard the great merchantman.

Many Battle Ships at Scene.

The story of the musicians makes it clear that the Audacious was but one of a squadron of colossal battle ships in the vicinity of the position where the lost sea fighter foundered and that when she hit the mine the rest of the squadron, in pursuance of the orders of the British admiralty steamed away each to save herself from possible destruction by German submarines as, at that moment, none among the squadron knew that a mine had smashed the Audacious. When the Olympic came to the help of the Audacious she found all her officers and men lined up on deck and her commander walking to and fro with his hands clasped behind his back, awaiting the event of death in the traditional way of Britain's blue jackets going down with their ship.

Liverpool Blows Up Audacious.

The Audacious did not, according to the story of the Olympic's men, go down just after an accidental explosion in her stern, but was deliberately blown up by the men of the cruiser Liverpool to remove her from the track of navigation. The Liverpool had taken off her commander and those of the crew who had remained aboard after the Olympic had to abandon her effort to tow her into shoal water.

GLOOM OVER ROBERTS' DEATH

People of Ascot Ask That Body Be Interred There.

London, Nov. 16.—The death of Lord Roberts has created sadness throughout England. No date has yet been set for the funeral. The people of Ascot, Lord Robert's home, have asked that the body be interred there. Field Marshal Roberts died in France from pneumonia. The place where Britain's aged hero passed away is not known definitely. It is supposed to have been somewhere along the Belgian-French frontier, where the British have been fighting for weeks.

Field Marshal Roberts, who was colonel in chief of the Indian troops had gone to France to give them his greeting. Soon after his arrival he became seriously ill. He suffered from a severe chill on Thursday and pneumonia rapidly developed. His great age—eighty-two years—militated against his recovery, the crisis in the disease coming quickly.

STEEL MILLS AT GARY OPEN

Order Indicates Nearly Full Capacity Will Be in Operation.

Gary, Ind., Nov. 16.—Orders have been issued to resume operations at the Gary steel plant today. Three blast furnaces, twelve open hearth furnaces, 215 coke ovens, and all rolling mills except the rail mill will be active for some days.

ALL AMENDMENTS IN MICHIGAN DEFEATED

Returns from 34 Counties Indicate Their Fate.

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 16.—Secretary of State Martindale has compiled figures from thirty-seven counties showing the vote on the four constitutional amendments and the indications are that all are lost, unless it be the proposition for students and traveling men to vote while away fom home. The vote on the four amendments from the thirty-seven counties is as follows:

Bonding for permanent improvement of highways—Yes, 41,024; no, 57,259.

Construction of drains and improvements of agricultural lands—Yes, 40,826; no, 57,600.

Right of students and traveling men to vote while away from home—Yes, 48,507; no, 51,413.

Fraternal insurance amendment—Yes, 21,734; no, 81,293.

These figures show the fraternal insurance amendment was fairly snowed under and there is little indication that even the student right to vote amendment will carry, as a majority of the counties reporting show slight majorities against the proposition. The complete figures will probably be obtainable within a week.

BELIEVE CASHIER IS O. K.

But People Continue to Sue Missing Montrose Bank Man.

Flint, Mich., Nov. 16.—The third attachment suit begun against Clarence G. Stevens, the Montrose State Savings bank cashier, who disappeared Monday, was filed in the circuit court by Sanford R. O'Brien. The suit is to recover for lumber alleged to have been sold Stevens and is said to be for less than $500.

Ira T. Sayre said that he does not believe Stevens owed any money except for the amounts obtained on notes signed "Sayre, Kerr and Stevens," and put through the Montrose bank, and the lumber bill. Sayre also stated that he believed there would be no further trouble, and that the people of Montrose are all "with" Stevens and believe he has done nothing wrong.

VILLA ASKS U. S. TO STAY AWHILE

Great Protest Against Leaving Vera Cruz to Carranza.

AMERICANS ALSO IN PROTEST

It Is Feared That by Such Recognition of Carranza Authority, Revolutionists Would Seek Revenge on Americans Throughout Mexico—Would Deal Villa Blow.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 16.—Protests against turning the port of Vera Cruz over to the Carranza government are being made by representatives of the Guerriteras and Villa factions in Mexico. The protests are being supplemented by protests by Americans having interests in Mexico. From Aguas Callentes reports were received of a vigorous protest which amounts practically to a threat that if the port is turned over to the Carranza faction it will be regarded as evidence of favoritism and the Villa supporters will withdraw the protection they have been giving American interests. It is seen that Villa is especially disturbed over the prospect of having to lose Vera Cruz just when he is about to assault Tampico. Americans coming out of Mexico say it will be disastrous to American life and property in Mexico for the port of Vera Cruz to be given into Carranza's hands as it would immediately cause anti-American uprisings in territory where Americans, for some time, have enjoyed protection.

Carranzistas Elated.

Carranzistas on the border are elated over the announcement that the American troops will withdraw shortly. It is seen by the Carranza supporters that with Carranza in possession of Vera Cruz it will be possible for him to make a successful campaign against Villa by enabling the Carranza army to get abundant ammunition and food supplies. With Vera Cruz in Carranza's hands, it is seen that Villa could not hold Tampico for any length of time.

More Fighting Despite Aruce.

The truce declared to have been arranged by the Aguas Calientes convention and the Gueriteras government is not expected to prevent fighting during the twenty days designated. Villa is continuing to move his army toward Tampico and advices from the south say he is meeting with practically no opposition. Carranza forces, it is ssaid, are being concentrated at Queratаro and both factions continuing active preparations for battle.

JOHN BUNNY INJURED WHILE ON JOY RIDE?

Portly Gentleman Said to Be Commedian Has Arm Broken.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 16.—Travis Beal, son of Robert Junius E. Beal of the University of Michigan, nine chorus girls and a portly, round faced gentleman, said to have been John Bunny, movie comedian, were thrown from Beal's automobile early Sunday morning when it collided with another machine just west of Wayne.

The portly gentleman, it being denied that it was John Bunny by the management of the Lyceum, where he is playing, sustained a broken arm as the result of the collision. He was attended by Dr. Howard Post and Post is willing to swear that it was Bunny. The doctor also admits he knows Bunny.

NEW FINANCIAL ERA IN U. S. HAS BEGUN

Federal Reserve Bank Opening Augurs Much, Say Experts.

New York, Nov. 16.—A new era in the business and banking of the country begins this morning in the opinion of the greatest bankers and business men of New York with the opening of the federal reserve banks.

The most striking summary of the probable effect of the reserve system that has yet been heard in Wall street is a quotation from the director of the Bank of France made during one of the financial crises in this country.

"If you gathered your reserves and concentrated your banking resources" he said, "your country would not have to seek money from us. That would not be the only result—your country would in fact be lending money to us."

The value of the system, say bankers, is chiefly that it enables a speedier turnover of merchants' capital and stock, bringing greater profits, creating larger wealth and all the time keeping the resources of the country in a condition to be quickly turned into cash or credit.

Call money will be available in every part of the country, instead of being confined to the stock market in New York, where, as one banker indicated, call money disappears entirely within half an hour after a panic starts and securities become unsalable.

SALOONS QUIT, FEE TOO HIGH

Buckner, Ill., Proprietors Agree to Suspend Until License Is Reduced.

Duquoin, Ill., Nov. 16.—A unique situation exists among saloon keepers at Buckner, east of here. The dram shop proprietors believed they were being assessed too much for their license and decided to suspend business until the council reduced the fee. Each of the saloon men deposited $25 with their treasurer as a forfeit against breaking their agreement.

Buckner is the only wet town in Franklin county.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Learning Authorship

A Young Girl Takes a Lesson With an Unexpected Result

By MARTHA V. MONROE

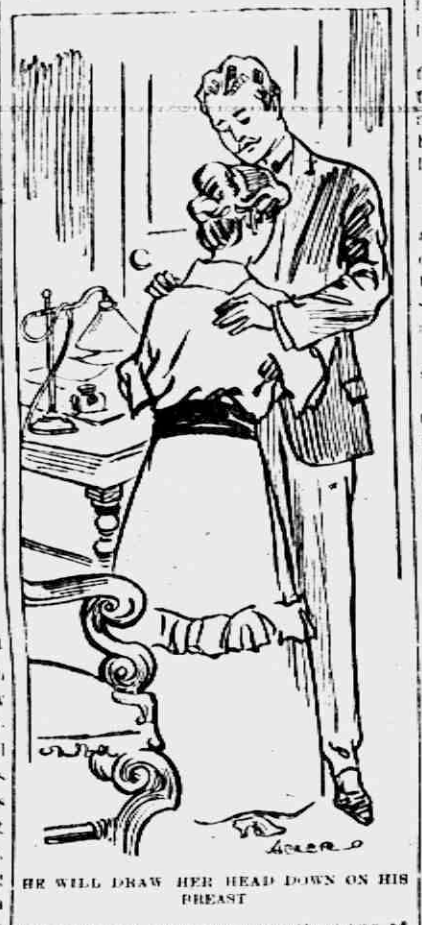
Louise Brewster's father died when she was seventeen years old, and her mother had then been dead some years. Louise was left with a competence which needed taking care of as well as herself. Her father had appointed Harold Vandeveer to administer her estate during her minority, and Harold's mother was to have the care of the young lady herself, she taking up her residence in the Vandeveer home.

Harold Vandeveer had been a chum of Mr. Brewster, though he was ten years younger than Brewster. When Louise went to live with his mother he was between thirty-five and forty. He was a literary man and made his living by writing fiction. He was a dignified man, methodical and, when composing, unapproachable. When not at work he was quite genial.

Vandeveer looked upon Louise much as he would have regarded a niece. She was to him a child and to be treated as a child. Neither she nor any one else was permitted to enter his study when he was at work, and when he had finished his daily labor, about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, he usually went out for recreation; consequently Louise saw very little of him except at dinner.

Such was the routine of the Vandeveers and Louise Brewster. Mrs. Vandeveer was occupied with the care of the house and Louise's requirements. Their son was absorbed in his literary work, while Louise—well, Louise's mind should have been upon her studies.

But, as has been mentioned, Louise was at an age when girls, to say nothing of boys, must needs poke into every cranny with a view to discovering what is there. No one has ever yet been able to name an age when one of the softer sex is insensible to notice or indifference. Louise did not like it that this, to her, wonderful creator of imaginary beings should treat her as something of far less importance than the most insignificant of his puppets. She once asked him at the dinner table if he would not put her into one of his stories. He looked at her thoughtfully for a short while, then said: "No. I can't see that I could use you." Possibly if the author could have looked within her he might have seen how she could use him.



HE WILL DRAW HER HEAD DOWN ON HIS BREAST

Half a year after Louise had gone to live with the Vandeveers she had a birthday. She was eighteen years old. Mr. Vandeveer was in his study working up a scene between an old bachelor and a pert young girl in which the former was good humoredly quizzing the latter. The door opened, and in walked Louise. The author frowned, but his ward was not dismayed.

"Guardy," she said—wards usually call their guardians guardy, at least in story books—"I am eighteen years of age today and have made choice of a profession."

"A profession!" exclaimed the astonished scribbler, turning in his chair to face her.

"Yes. I have chosen literature."

Mr. Vandeveer opened his eyes still wider. "What branch of literature, may I ask?"

"Fiction."

"You don't mean it."

How apropos this scene, coming as it did when the author was drawing one of the same type! Loads of material were at hand. He was the old bachelor; Louise was the pert girl.

"Yes," added Louise, "and I have come to ask you to be my instructor."

"Indeed—I'm—are you aware that story writing requires experience, some knowledge of human nature, a bit of humor, pathos"—

"A sort of literary salad," Louise broke in.

"Quite right." Mr. Vandeveer was a trifle taken aback by the interruption.

"No, I was not aware of all this or of anything else concerning the art of writing. If I had been I should not have come to you for instruction. I am profoundly ignorant of the matter."

Mr. Vandeveer was turned from getting material for his quizzing scene to a problem. How could one be taught to write? Beyond the proper use of language he saw nothing to teach. If there were would there not be schools for the purpose?

"The only way I know of to learn to write," he said, "is to write."

"Well?"

"Suppose you start by writing a story. First you must get your motif, then locate the story. Begin to write on the germ of a plan and the germ will increase and multiply. After you have finished cut out all that is superfluous."

"I've thought of a motif already. A girl of my age is in love."

"You mean a girl several years older than you is in love."

"Didn't I tell you I am eighteen to-

"So you did. Well, with whom is this girl in love?"

"With a man in love with himself."

"That's not a bad theme," said the author, all the while more and more surprised at his ward's sudden development, "but it has its difficulties. You must show the fellow to be conceited by what he does and says, an attractive contrast between his pomposity and the girl's real simple worth."

"But the man is very learned, and the girl knows nothing. She is not bright, either."

"I thought you said the man was in love with himself."

"I meant he was absorbed in himself."

"Oh, that makes a great difference! In that case I would invent some act by which the girl by her heroism or devotion attracts his attention from himself to her and, seeing her superiority, is convinced of his own unworthiness."

"But he is greatly her superior."

"Perhaps you meant that he was absorbed in his work—not in himself."

"Of course I did."

"This involves another change. A girl is in love with a man whose mind is so absorbed in some great purpose that he does not notice her. Invent some way by which she may befriend him or save him from a great calamity. Then wind up your story with an effective scene between the man and the girl who has been devoted to him."

"But the girl wouldn't be capable of a heroic act; she isn't brave. She would feel proud and happy to have the hero love her, but wouldn't be competent to do anything to make him love her."

Mr. Vandeveer looked a bit discouraged. He knew how to construct a story, but telling some one else how to do it was another matter.

"Have you any real persons in view for your hero and heroine?" he asked.

"Yes."

"In that case you have an advantage in real persons for models, but you must not hesitate to make them fit your literary purpose; otherwise you will get no story."

"Won't the girl's love for the man count for a good deal?"

Mr. Vandeveer was puzzled how to explain that her love must be expressed, that there were various ways of bringing it out, and doing so was dependent upon the skill of the writer.

"It seems to me," he said thoughtfully, "that you are attempting a theme that is very difficult. A heroic man absorbed in a noble purpose is loved by a simple girl not especially brilliant"—

"She is stupid."

"You can't manage these two as they are. You must make some change in one or the other. I've been studying the art for years, and I couldn't make a story out of a stupid girl in love with a man engrossed in a noble purpose."

"You might make him treat her with some consideration, couldn't you?"

Now, there was nothing in the words to make Mr. Vandeveer start. Louise bit her lip at having said them, for she found herself unable to speak them without a slight tremor in her voice. The author started because this love story he was trying to teach the girl to write was suddenly made to appear very near home. Louise turned to leave the study. He arose from his chair, stepped forward and placed himself between her and the door.

"Louise," he said, "I fear I have not realized that a girl of eighteen is not a child."

She put her hand on the doorknob to turn it. He stopped her by placing his own hand on the knob. But there was not room for the two hands, and his rested on hers.

"I will not let you go," he said, "till this matter is cleared up. You have intended to show me in an indirect way that you are not satisfied with my treatment of you; that I have looked upon you as a child, while you should have the consideration of a woman. Forgive me. I will mend my ways."

What there was to make the girl cry a story writer, who has long studied feminine emotions, would perhaps find it difficult to analyze. Vandeveer didn't try to analyze the cause. An author may sit at his writing table sucking the end of his pen handle trying to conjure some light touch to explain why his heroine weeps, but put that same author in the place of his hero, beside the weeping heroine, and he will do just what the hero did—he will draw her head down on his breast, and the rest of it. At any rate, this is what Vandeveer did, and that's the end of the story.

You're Being Talked About.

We do not wish to alarm you unduly, but do you know that you are being criticised? It may be that you do not care, either because you are so abandoned and so bent upon an evil course as to be lost to all sense of shame or because you are so immaculately virtuous as to leave not a single vulnerable point of attack for the slanderous tongue. The fact remains that uncomplimentary things are being said about you, things that do not at all agree with your estimate of yourself. Not one of your friends but objects to something about you. Maybe you do care. If so we are sorry for you, because you cannot stop it. It would be a good thing for you to mend your ways, but don't expect to stop the talk in that way. Figure your life out the very best way you can and then expect your neighbors and friends to disapprove in all possible combinations and permutations.—Life.

Early Earrings.

The earring is not a modern invention, for more than twenty centuries ago the daughter of Aristotle wore golden hoops. The philosopher's daughter's earrings were found in her tomb near Chalcis, in Euboea, by exploring archaeologists, and certainly modern workmanship cannot produce their equal. In each golden hoop swung a tiny dove, with precious stones for eyes and bands of minute gems to give the color of the iridescent breast and wings. The feathers were of granulated gold, and the tail feathers were so marvelously wrought and adjusted that they acted like a balance, as in a living bird, so that the exquisite miniature creatures whenever the wearer moved or laughed or tossed her head would move and balance themselves upon their pendent perches.

MRS. I. P. KEYSER.

After a lingering illness Mrs. Martha Keyser fell asleep Sunday evening at her home on Evans street at the age of [illegible] years. She leaves to mourn her loss a daughter Miss Martha, two sisters Mrs. Harriett Sutfin of Tecumseh and Mrs. Vescelius of Crystal, and a brother George Mangus of Milan.

Her funeral will be held at the home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Wm. A. Rex will officiate with burial in the family lot at Brookside.

MRS. GEORGE HAWKES.

Harriet Amelia Hawkes passed away at her home Sunday morning after an illness extending over only a week, at the age of [illegible]. She leaves the husband, a son Milburn of Detroit, a brother Friend McNiel and four sister, Lydia, Tensie and Sarah McNiel and Mrs. Marietta Wright to mourn.

The funeral was held this afternoon at the Universalist church with Rev. F. Hewitt officiating. Burial in Brookside cemetery.

Y. M. C. A. CONFERENCE IN ANN ARBOR NOV. 27

Nov. 12.

Announcement was made today by J. A. VanDis, boys' work secretary for the Michigan Y. M. C. A. that Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris and Senator Charles E. Townsend would deliver addresses at the Older Boys' Conference at Ann Arbor Nov. 27. Both men will be the principal speakers at the Friday evening session, the first big meeting of the three day session. The speaking program will take place, it is announced, at Hill Auditorium on the campus of the University of Michigan.

With the addition of Gov. Ferris and Senator Townsend, the program for the conference of Michigan boys this year contains a larger list of notables than ever before. Secretary of State W. J. Bryan has consented to speak on Saturday night of the conference. In addition there will be Fred B. Smith one of the famous leaders of the Men and Religion Forward Movement in Michigan and other states, who will hold the boards at the Sunday afternoon meeting.

Registrations now being booked by local committees at Ann Arbor indicate an unusually large attendance. Four thousand boys of Michigan signed the petition to Mr. Bryan to speak to them, and it is known that approximately half of these are making an effort to attend the conference sessions.

LENAWEE COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

At the Lenawee County Sunday-school convention held in Adrian in connection with the State Association, the following officers were elected for the coming year:

President—Rev. W. B. Hartzog, Tecumseh.

Vice Pres.—Rey. Albert Balgoogan, Deerfield.

Rec. Sec'y—Mrs. A. L. Rangburn, Adrian.

Cor. Sec'y—Miss Edyth L. Ingersoll, Tecumseh.

Treasurer—G. Roscoe Swift, Adrian.

The next meeting of this association will be held in Deerfield, Sept. 1-1 and 2nd, 1915.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION RALLY.

C. H. Rutledge, a distinguished platform orator and temperance leader, will speak at the Tecumseh Baptist church tonight at 7 p. m. A thoughtful discussion and patriotic appeal. Do not fail to hear him! Admission free. All are welcome.

MAKE THE MAP ALL WHITE BY CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Thirty-six states can do it. Over 46,000,000 of the population of the United States live under prohibition. Over 71 per cent. of the area is prohibition territory. One half of all the people now living in license territory, live in four states, New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois and New Jersey.

One fourth of all the people of the United States who live in saloon territory, live in six cities, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Boston and Cleveland. There are fewer saloons south of Mason and Dixon line altogether than there are in the city of Chicago.

The nine Prohibition states are Maine, Kansas, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Mississippi, Georgia, North Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia.

Thirty-six states can be selected that have a total number of saloons less than New York City and these 36 states can adopt the Sheppard—Hobson amendment.

SOCIAL GATHERING.

The old time friends of Clinton gathered with Mrs. W. D. Reed last Thursday for one of their social meetings which binds the band together. Those present were Mesdames A. L. Parsons, Fred Ellis, C. E. Hause, H. R. Hause and Mary Elizabeth, Frank Parker, C. L. Knight, J. L. Tuttle Jr., Charles Silvers and Marvin Pardee.

This is the old Co. V. of their school days and they gather at the different homes for an old time visit.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

As a result of the visit of the University Inspector, several changes have been made. All accredited High Schools are required to have a study room and also a reference library in the High School building.

Room 12, the room on the first floor will serve as a study. All pupils must sit in this room during their study period and the various teachers will have charge of the room in their vacant periods. The classes will be held in the other rooms. Thus, there will be no classes to distract the pupil while he is studying, and no pupils in the classrooms to interrupt the classes as they are reciting.

The reference books for the English, History and Economics classes have been moved from the library and placed in the study room.

Every effort is being made to improve conditions in the High School in spite of the present state of the building.

An [illegible] Revolving Duplicator has been purchased for copying examination papers, etc.

A few pupils were excused Friday afternoon to attend the S. S. convention at Adrian.

Mr. [illegible], the University Inspector, said he was going to interest the State Antiquary Society in our ancient temple of learning. It is to be hoped that it can be sold for a good price.

A PROCLAMATION: BY THE GOVERNOR

In all the years since eighteen hundred seventy-six there has been no greater reason for giving thanks to Almighty God than in this year nineteen hundred fourteen. The United States is at peace with all the nations of the earth. The stars and stripes symbolize to all the world "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Sunshine, rain and toil have given us an abundance of the good things of life. Our glorious nation has gone forward unswerving towards the goal of civic justice and civic righteousness. We, the people of Michigan, are happy in joining every other state in reverent and hearty thanksgiving.

Therefore, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris, Governor of the State of Michigan, do hereby join the President of the United States in designating Thursday, the 26th of November, as a day for all the people of this commonwealth to celebrate in thanksgiving and prayer.

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this 14th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1914 and of the Commonwealth the 78th.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
Governor.
Frederick C. Martindale,
Secretary of State.

THE MONDAY CLUB.

The Monday Club held a very enjoyable meeting at the home of Mrs. R. S. Moore Monday afternoon with a fine attendance. Miss Ruth Keeney was elected to membership.

A fine program was then given with Mrs. R. S. Moore leader. Mrs. W. E. Slayton read a paper on "The Growth of Oratorio and Opera" and Mrs. Jennings a paper on "Cherabini." These were followed by a musical with selections from the Italian composers of the 17th century by Mesdames Chas. Rothruff of Jackson, R. T. Meade and R. S. Moore and Miss Etna Taylor.

The next meeting will be "Sunshine Day" and will be held at the home of Mrs. R. B. Gillespie. A picnic supper will be a pleasant feature of the afternoon.

M. A. C. vs PENN.

Again the Pennsy foot ball team has been beaten by Michigan in the game played on the Pennsylvania State College grounds last Friday when the score was 6 to 3 in favor of M. A. C. It is claimed that a large black haze settled over the mountains at the close of the game.

Miss Lou Arner had the misfortune to slip and fall on the side walk near her home Monday evening and broke both bones in her left wrist. This is doubly unfortunate as Miss Arner has been in poor health for a long time and is illy prepared for further suffering.

Fifteen of the schoolmates of Miss Lillian Witherell helped her celebrate her eleventh birthday last Friday evening at her home west of town. Games furnished the amusements of the evening. A dainty birthday supper was served with a large birthday cake with the eleven candles. Miss Lillian received many pretty gifts from her young friends.

HAVE YOU TAKEN NOTICE?

The foot and mouth disease has broken out in Tecumseh. It is not confined to cattle however, but seems to have broken out upon the mouth of a large proportion of the young men of this town. You can scarcely go anywhere but you see evidences of the disease, and unless it is checked, we fear it will be beyond control. Most of them are "REAL CUTE" and as the shadow deepens on the upper lip, we see in embryo, a dear little mustache, the pride of the wearer.

THOSE PRIZES.

Not a little excitement was manifested in Tecumseh, Saturday afternoon among those who are gathering up silver stamps from the various stores, when it was known that the several stores carrying these stamps were giving out prizes.

A large crowd gathered and passed from store to store to see who would be the lucky one. At Miss Ida Chase's Novelty Store Mrs. John Frost captured a large jardiniere. Mrs. Ripley secured a cracker jar at E. J. Peters & Co's. and a fine rocking chair at the Anderson grocery store. At the fruit store Mrs. Beaublen was given a fine box of candy. There were two lucky ones at C. A. Wright & Son's: Mrs. Acel Kelley who had a hand mirror and Mrs. Chas Sutton a pack of playing cards. Mrs. Arthur Gove was the lucky winner of the upholstered rocker at the Jones Toggery Shop. As an advertising scheme this surely was quite unique

LECTURE ON SIBERIA

It is a matter of deep regret that so few were out last evening to hear W. Blanchard Moore in his lecture on Siberia. Mr. Moore is a most talented speaker and well informed on his subject. He has traveled widely and unlike most travelers he takes the unbeaten paths, living with the people and making a thorough study of them. It is not often that Tecumseh has such an opportunity to hear of these countries in such an interesting manner.

WIT AND WISDOM

The meeting of the Wit and Wisdom Club Monday evening was held at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Hartzog with a good attendance. At the business meeting Rev. and Mrs. Geo. W. Jennings were added to the membership.

Several fine papers were presented: Mrs. W. A. Rex had a paper on "Child Labor" and Mrs. Lamkin on "Child Welfare," both of which were deeply interesting and claimed the close attention of the company. F. S. Turner had a paper on "Judge Ben J. Lindsley and his work in Denver."

Roll call called out many funny stories of child life from the pathetic to the ridiculous.

The pumpkin pies were excellent as was also the beverage that went with them.

F. S. Turner and family motored to Detroit Saturday and between Ypsilanti and Detroit they passed 495 cars evidently headed for Ann Arbor for the foot ball game. These were mostly large cars and figuring at $1200 per car represented nearly $600,000 rolling stock. The average number of passengers was four or 1980. Figuring at $2.00 per head to enter the grounds the amount would be $3960.00.

Rise of the Plebeians.

Plebeians were the commons of Rome, who were originally forbidden all political rights. They were for the most part poor and were not allowed to intermarry with the patricians. They served in the army without pay and were sold into slavery for debt and could even be cut into pieces for distribution among their creditors. Finding their condition intolerable, the plebeians in 497 B. C. seceded to Mons Sacer, near Rome, where they resolved to build a new city. But this step so alarmed the privileged classes that they granted to the commons the right of annually choosing from their own numbers two magistrates, called tribunes, with power to protect them against the aggressions of the patricians. After the lapse of about 200 years the disabilities of the plebeians were almost entirely removed, and between the years 356-300 B. C. they secured the dictatorship, the censorship and the praetorship as well as the right to be pontiff and augur. Thus the Roman republic, after two centuries of existence, finally secured a democratic form of government.

Coal and Smoke.

Smoke is caused by failure to burn the combustible gases that arise when fuel is exposed to the flame. The editor of Power describes these gases as "a complex mixture of various hydrocarbons, from some of which carbon separates on cooling in the form of lampblack or soot. The smokier fuels also give off tarry vapors, which condense and help to gather the carbon particles into flakes or smuts.

"For the burning of these gases as they are evolved from the coal three conditions must exist: Air must be supplied above the fuel bed, the temperature must be high enough to insure ignition and there must be time or space for combustion before the mixing currents of gas and air are cooled by flowing into or among the tubes of the boiler."

Firing coal in large quantities produces so much gas that neither air supply nor combustion space is great enough for its burning. Therefore coal should be put on in small quantities at frequent intervals.

Secret Writing.

The ordinary solver of a letter or document in secret writing should remember that success in this direction, as regards almost every kind of cryptogram, depends to a great extent upon the knowledge of how often each individual letter of the alphabet is used in ordinary speech or correspondence.

D, h, o, c and u are in third place as regards ordinary use; t, s, a, i and r are in second place, being used a very little oftener; l and m are in fourth place, with f, g, y, c, p and b close afterward; j and k are not common as compared with the rest, while z, q and x are used least of all.

The letter e is in first place, being used far oftener than any other letter in the English language, and once the "e" is found and the letters that hold second place discovered in their proper order, the solution is certain.—London Answers.

How Do You Laugh?

Refinement can be indicated as strongly by the manner in which a person laughs as by the tone of the speaking voice.

If some people could hear the tone they use while laughing they would doom themselves to perpetual sadness.

A real hearty laugh is like a tonic to the system. It not only does the person good who enjoys it, but it does every one good who hears it.

Of such a laugh there is no criticism. But there are people who do not enjoy laughing, but who laugh in a forced and artificial manner, and generally at the most impossible moment.

An affected laugh by either a man or a woman is a counterfeit of the true feelings. There is no necessity to laugh loudly, the heartiest laugh is the softest in tone.

Remember, when laughter is natural it is irresistible and beautiful, and when it is forced it falls like rasping brass upon refined ears.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

CHICAGO STOCK YARDS OPEN

Cattle Are Again Pouring in After Federal Quarantine.

Chicago, Nov. 16.—After ten days of comparative idleness, the stock yards are receiving shipments of cattle and hogs for immediate slaughter. The railroads have been notified the ten day quarantine has been lifted. All the packing plants, newly scrubbed and disinfected, have received the federal government's official O. K.

Local stockmen who thought the quarantine on Illinois cattle should be more severe made a final effort to obtain a more stringent ruling from the state veterinarian, but their request was refused by Dr. O. E. Dyson. The cattlemen, represented by T. W. Jerrems and S. B. Stafford, wanted affidavits of immunity from state veterinarians as well as from the shippers themselves.

Peter the Great was once traveling incognito in a part of Finland when he met a very fat man, who told him that he was going to St. Petersburg.

"What for?" asked the czar.

"Do you know any doctor there?"

"No."

"Then I will give you a line to my friend, Prince Menschikoff, and he will introduce you to one of the emperor's physicians."

The traveler went to the prince's house with a note. The answer was not delayed. The next day, tied hands and feet, the poor man was dragged off on a cart to the mines.

Two years after Peter the Great was visiting the mines. He had forgotten the incident of the fat man, when suddenly a miner threw down his pick, rushed up to him and fell at his feet, crying:

"Grace, grace, what is it I have done?"

Peter looked at him, astonished, until he remembered the story.

Brazil's Name.

Long before the Portuguese colonized the coast of Brazil adventurous Bristol merchants had equipped expeditions in a vain search for the supposed island of Brasyle. Who gave Brazil her present name is unknown to fame—the early Portuguese called it Terra da Vera Cruz—but whoever baptized the country took the name from the East Indies. For many years before the discovery of Brazil merchants had brought from the east for the use of dyers a wood which yielded a beautiful red color—brasil or brasilly. The West Indies have trees of the same sort, but Brazil contains them in more abundance than any other country. So that Brazil wood is not called so after the country. The country is named so because of its red dye trees.—London Chronicle.

Travels of Roots.

Roots travel amazing distances in search of their requirements. A timber merchant, excavating for a sewer in England, found an elm root one and a quarter inches in diameter and sixty three feet long, running through a bed of sawdust from the tree to the nearest water.

The aggregate length of root thrown out by some plants is almost incredible. A cucumber will, within its short life of about half a year, throw out from ten to fifteen miles of roots.

Clover roots will go straight down to a depth of six to nine feet in search of moisture, and coltsfoot, one of the most powerful and persistent of weeds, sends its suckers down to an even greater depth.—London Stray Stories.

Lost the Point.

The Teacher—Now, children, listen to this. Thomas Campbell, the famous poet, once walked six miles to a printing office to have a comma in one of his poems changed to a semicolon. Why did he take all that trouble? Bright Boy—'Cause he didn't have no tellyphone.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Publicity.

"It's a bad thing to talk about your neighbors."

"That's right," replied the man who is all business. "Publicity is worth something these days. I shouldn't think of talking about anybody except at advertising rates."—Washington Star.

HOW TO CURE A CHRONIC COUGH

Told in the Following Letter by a Jackson Man Who Knows from Experience, His Word Is Good,

Jackson, Miss.—"I am a carpenter, and the grippe left me not only with a chronic cough, but I was run-down, worn out and weak. I took all kinds of cough syrups but they did me no good. I finally got so weak I was not able to do a day's work, and coughed so much I was alarmed about my condition. One evening I read about Vinol and decided to try it. Before I had taken a quarter of a bottle I felt better, and after taking two bottles my cough is entirely cured, all the bad symptoms have disappeared and I have gained new vim and energy."—JOHN L. DENNIS, 711 Lynch Street, Jackson, Miss.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because the active medicinal principles of cod liver oil contained in Vinol rebuilds wasting tissues and supplies strength and vigor to the nerves and muscles while the tonic iron and wine assist the red corpuscles of the blood to absorb oxygen and distribute it through the system, thus restoring health and strength to the weakened, diseased organs of the body.

If Vinol fails to help you, we return your money.

HALVOR GUNDERSON'S DOG

Or the Story of a Troubled Conscience

By JOHN C. WADE

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Halvor Gunderson had first noticed the dog behind his wagon when he stopped to rest his team on the Steven hill.

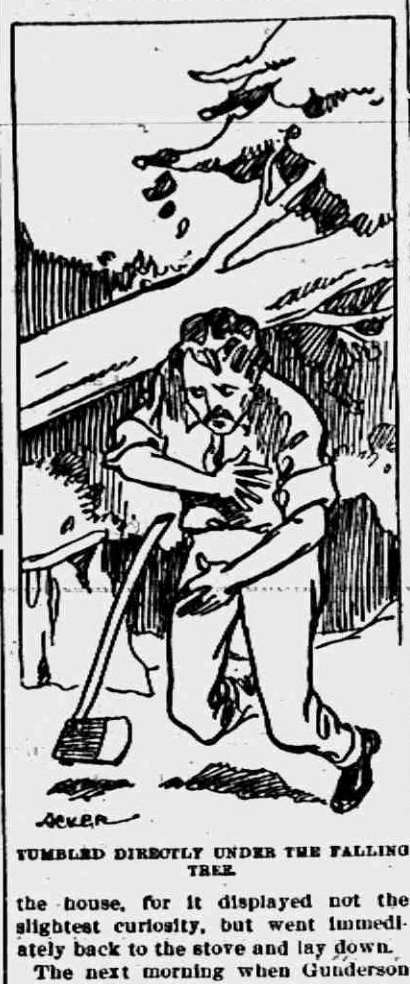
On stock days farmers from twelve miles back in the hills brought hogs and calves to town, and strange dogs were plentiful along the main road.

When well out of the ridge he again glanced back to see that he was losing none of his purchases out of his hog rack and saw the dog still following. He now looked at it more carefully.

It was a large shepherd dog with a full chest, a long, slim body well above the ground and coarse tawny hair that was nearly black on the neck and back.

When he turned into the short byroad leading to his house he whistled to the dog, but the latter had already turned with the wagon and was evidently intending to follow it wherever it went.

When he went to supper he took the dog with him. Its previous owner must have allowed it the freedom of the house, for it displayed not the slightest curiosity, but went immediately back to the stove and lay down.



TUMBLED DIRECTLY UNDER THE FALLING TREE.

The next morning when Gunderson took the cows to the pasture the dog fulfilled all his expectations. He showed perhaps a trifle too much eagerness and ferocity in driving the cows.

The dog was always with him from morning until night—among the corn rows, in the hayfield, at milking time. No matter where he went or what he was doing, it was always near by and always seemed to be looking at him.

There was a haunting familiarity about the dog's gaze, but Halvor could not place it.

Halvor watched the dog very carefully all summer, never allowing him off the farm if possible. One October morning, however, he escaped his vigilance and followed him halfway to the cheese factory before Halvor noticed him.

He was too far on the road to be sent back, so was allowed to continue. At one of the houses on the highway to the factory was kept a dog, a hound, that Halvor disliked very much. This dog would rush out furiously at all teams, baying noisily, but always keeping out of reach of the whip. Today, as usual, he came running across the fields, but when he saw the shepherd dog he turned toward him with unabated speed, his head low and tongue lolling.

The shepherd evaded the rush and slashed him in the shoulder as he passed. The hound turned to rush again, but the shepherd met him before he could even start, tearing him about the head and neck with quick, wolflike snaps.

The aggressor tried to fight back, but could not get an opening, and in a few seconds the shepherd had carried him off his feet and was trying for his throat. The hound was a powerful brute and was up again in an instant, but he had apparently abandoned all thought of fighting, for he started back across the field toward the house, even faster than he had come.

The shepherd followed him a short distance and then returned to the wagon. Halvor was mightily pleased with the discomfiture of the hound and the splendid fighting qualities displayed by his dog. His sheep would surely be safe with such a guardian.

Gunderson had been worrying considerably about them lately, for the sheep raising farmers in the hills north of his place had been having their flocks depleted the entire fall by a sheep killing dog.

Late in October Mrs. Gunderson received a letter from the small fishing village of Halleberg, which is on a fiord in northern Norway. The writer, Mrs. Gunderson's sister, among other things, said that Johann Jorgenson had left the previous spring for America, and she had heard that he had rented a farm near Seaton, Wis.

Halvor thought of the last time that he and Johann had spoken to each other on the beach at Halleberg, twelve years ago, when Johann said that he would settle his account with him if it took a lifetime. Seaton was but twenty-five miles north of Gunderson's place, and in this country of easy communication he would soon learn of him.

As the days went by Halvor brooded more and more over this disconcerting news. He watched all passing teams with feverish anxiety. Naturally of a morbid temperament, he gradually grew more sullen and morose. His horses and cattle felt the effect of this change and shunned him even more than before.

One cold November morning several of the cows had got out of the barn lot and wandered across the creek. The bridge was but a few hundred yards away, but Halvor ordered the dog across the stream after them.

The shepherd went to the edge of the icy water, but refused to go farther. He ordered him in again and again and, angry, furious at his refusal, picked up a pitchfork handle and hit the dog between the eyes, knocking him down.

The animal was on his feet in an instant and with a snarl of rage sprang furiously at his master's throat. Halvor again swung the handle, this time blindly; but, fortunately for him, he again hit the dog in the forehead and with such force as to stun him for several seconds.

The shepherd finally got up, shook himself and walked slowly away. Halvor leaned against a fencepost, feeling a trifle weak, not so much from fear of the dog as from the look in his eyes when he sprang at him.

Twelve years before, on the beach at Halleberg, he had faced such a look from Johann Jorgenson, who fiercely struggled to free himself from the men who held him that he might again attack Halvor, whom he accused of refusing, though in a boat near by, to heed the cries of himself, his father and brother when they had been run down in their heavily loaded fishing boat the night before in a storm by a tourist steamer coming up the fiord.

One night as Halvor was coming down the valley road from a small town about six miles north of his farm he saw in the moonlight against the snow a dark form running swiftly through the trees along the hillside above him. It had the gait and appearance of a gigantic wolf, but he instinctively knew it to be his dog. He whistled and called, but it neither slackened its speed nor looked around. In a few minutes it had disappeared over the ridge.

He thought of his grandmother's tales of the werewolf, the man wolf, who could change from man to wolf at will. He had been thinking of these tales often lately. Her stories of warlocks, the storm wind and sea trolls had never so impressed his childish mind as these.

When told on a stormy December night in half whispers, the low room lighted only by the open fire, the sea raging on the shore before the house, the wind moaning through the trees on the mountain side behind, he could vividly see the werewolf—the man in the wolf form—skulking along the edge of the forest and watching the village for his enemies.

He had all the ferocity of a wolf and the cunning of a man. He was the "hunter who never fails." Halvor knew his American neighbors with their automobiles and telephones would laugh at such an idea, but he had been raised by the sea and had all the superstition of a seafaring people deeply implanted in him.

The refusal of the dog to eat fish confirmed his fears!

Johann Jorgenson would never eat fish, explaining laughingly that as he spent about sixteen hours a day with them it was too much like eating his friends.

Halvor now found it necessary to watch the dog all the time; he never turned his back to him for an instant.

As week after week went by the strain showed in his appearance—gray began to appear in his hair, his face became more haggard.

One gray January afternoon he was chopping on a hillside, with the dog sitting in the snow a short distance away, watching him.

He was wondering how much longer he could continue under the present state of affairs. He must end it some way. Perhaps one of his neighbors could be persuaded on some pretext to attempt to shoot the dog.

The idea appealed to him; he thought it over carefully. He became so engrossed with it that he forgot for some minutes to look up. Just as the large red oak that he was chopping was about to fall he raised his eyes and saw the dog was not in view.

Glancing fearfully over his shoulder, he saw that which he had so long expected to see—the dog within a few feet of his back!

With a startled cry he sprang forward, but in so doing slipped on the icy hillside and tumbled directly under the falling tree.

When he was found many hours later by the party of neighbors with lanterns, who had been summoned by his wife, he was pinned fast under the tree trunk and had apparently been dead for hours.

His dog was shot that same night while attempting to enter a sheepfold.

A farmer living some miles north of Gunderson's identified the dog as one that he had formerly owned and that had run away the previous spring after having been whipped for worrying sheep.

How Stilton Cheese Is Made.

Stilton cheeses differ from ordinary cheeses in the method of manufacture. Each Stilton is made in a circular mold, or vat, two feet deep and about nine inches in diameter, perforated at the sides and bottom. When the milk has been turned into curd by means of rennet it is transferred into the vat, which is lined with a coarse woven cloth, with a ladle. When a thin layer of curd covers the bottom of the mold a little dry salt is sprinkled over it. This is supposed to create the blue mold often found in Stiltons. Then more curd is added in layers until the vat is full. The whey gradually drains through the cloth and out of the holes into the pan in which the vat stands. After the curd has stood for twenty-four hours a tin disk is laid on the top and a weight applied to hasten the expulsion of the whey. When quite firm the cheese is removed from the vat and placed on a shelf to dry. After some days the cloth is taken off and the cheese is left to ripen in a special room, the temperature of which never varies.—London Answers.

CRACOW ABLAZE UNDER RUSS GUNS

Fall of Silesia Capital Is Expected at Any Time.

GERMAN RANKS PAY HIGH TOLL

100,000 Men in Four Days Is Teuton Loss in Flanders—Invaders Feeling Strain—Battle Continues Despite Blizzard—Baltic Fleet Clears For Action.

With the fighting from Nieuport through Dixmude and on the Ypres almost entirely confined to cannonading, the German and allied armies on the Aisne and in the Argonne are showing greater activity. In the Argonne the German trenches were blown up by mines planted by the French.

A naval battle is believed imminent in the Baltic Sea. Unofficial advices received from Copenhagen declare the German fleet in those waters is about to be engaged by the Russians. The Russian fleet has left Helsingfors. The squadron was steering southeast.

The Nieuwe Rotterdam Courant quotes a letter from a Galician priest stating that 40,000 Austrians have been buried in one day in a grave six and one half feet wide and a little more than four miles long. The bodies, the letter says, were laid next to each other in three layers. These men were killed, it is stated, during a battle lasting only a few days.

The British cruiser Glasgow, which took part in the naval battle off Coronel, Chile, on Nov. 1, has arrived at Rio Janeiro.

The prince of Wales has achieved his ambition to go to the front. He has left London to join the headquarters staff in France. The prince wished to go to the front at the outbreak of the war, but Lord Kitchener would not allow him to do so.

VENICE — A portion of the City of Cracow is in flames and the inhabitants have fled panic stricken before the advancing Russian army.

Advices by way of Trieste say the investment of Cracow began Saturday. The Russian force, advancing upon the Austrian stronghold from the north, opened the bombardment as soon as their big guns were brought up from Miechow. The northern section of the city was soon in flames.

Capture Is Expected.

Violent assaults upon all defenses are now being made by the Russians. The force advancing from the east, which has now passed Tarnow is moving rapidly, and the capture of Cracow is expected momentarily.

For the Russians the fall of Cracow means the key to industrial districts of Silesia, striking a vital economic blow at Germany.

Germans Lose 100,000 in Four Days.

LONDON — The German losses during the last four days' fighting in Flanders are estimated at 100,000 by the correspondent of the Daily Mail at Dunkirk.

Despite the blizzard which has prevailed, fighting has continued. The Germans directed a fierce attack upon the allied lines near Ypres. This was repulsed and the allies in turn assumed the offensive. Casualties in the allied ranks were heavy, but favorable progress was made.

Weather Conditions Terrible.

All reports from the scene of fighting in northern France indicate that the weather conditions for the last few days have been terrible. Heavy rain, falling continuously for thirty-six hours, has turned all the roads into quagmires, while the trenches are flooded and the lowlands everywhere are largely covered by water.

Everything possible is being done to make the troops comfortable to prevent their being flooded out of the trenches and to avoid caves-ins. The trenches are being shored and braced and the bottoms covered with brush and straw. Meanwhile the artillery battle continues.

A correspondent at Sluis, Netherlands, says artillery fire was again audible yesterday and the Germans are renewing their efforts to cross the Yser near Nieuport.

Dixmude Entirely Destroyed.

Dixmude, including the villages in its environs, has been entirely destroyed.

The Germans, in the opinion of officers at the front, are begining to show signs of the terrific strain they have undergone for a month past in Flanders, and these officers expect that General Joffre's plan of holding the line and permitting the German pest to wear itself out in vain but costly assaults will soon bear fruit.

Kaiser Takes 23,000 Russ.

BERLIN — The war office announces: "In the battle of the last few days in continuation of our successes at Wloclawek, in Russian Poland, on the Vistula, thirty miles northwest of Plock, we have made 23,000 prisoners and captured more than twenty machine guns."

The Russians near Kopreukeui in Transcaucasia lost 8,000 men in killed and wounded. The Turks took 500 Russian prisoners and captured 10,000 rifles and large quantities of ammunition. The Turks are advancing on Batoum.

According to reports reaching here from Constantinople, Abbas Hilmi, the Khedive of Egypt, will leave the Turkish capital shortly to assume command of the Turkish operations against Egypt. He will be accompanied by a suite of fifty persons.

The khedive has been in Constantinople since the outbreak of hostilities. Dispatches from Constantinople a month ago said the British government had ordered him not to return to Egypt.

The wise man expects everything from himself; the fool looks to others.
—Jean Paul.

BELIEVE CASHIER IS O. K.

But People Continue to Sue Missing Montrose Bank Man.

FLINT, MICH. — The third attachment suit begun against Clarence G. Stevens, the Montrose State Savings bank cashier, who disappeared Monday, was filed in the circuit court by Sanford R. O'Brien. The suit is to recover for lumber alleged to have been sold Stevens and is said to be for less than $500.

Ira T. Sayre said that he does not believe Stevens owed any money except for the amounts obtained on notes signed "Sayre, Kerr and Stevens," and put through the Montrose bank, and the lumber bill. Sayre also stated that he believed there would be no further trouble, and that the people of Montrose are all "with" Stevens and believe he has done nothing wrong.

ROB LANSINGITE ON TRAIN

Pickpockets Jostle Man and Obtain Wallet With $230.

LANSING, MICH. — If the story told by James F. Powers of this city is true, he was neatly trimmed by two pickpockets on a Grand Trunk train while it stood in the Lansing station.

At all events he is minus $130 in cash and a draft for $100, and Lansing police are hunting the two men described by Powers. Powers boarded the train here. As he was going through the narrow passageway around the smoking compartment, he met two men. They jostled him, but finally got past and jumped off as the train was pulling out. He went to a seat and in a few moments missed his wallet.

FIVE MEN IN SMALL BOAT ARE NEAR DEATH

Return Safely After Being at Mercy of Gale 30 Hours.

ROGER CITY, MICH. — For nearly thirty hours five men lay shivering in an ice covered gasoline launch, while the staunch craft rode out a fierce Lake Huron gale, and when the waves subsided brought the boat to port here.

Caught by the storm, which came up over the lake at dusk, the party bound on a hunting trip to Drummond island, forty miles off shore, had only time to rig a sea anchor and get to the scant shelter of the cabin before huge seas began to buffet the tiny boat and a blinding snow storm blotted out the sight of land.

The party consisted of Alfred Dueltgen, his nephews, Rudolph and Carl Dueltgen and Harold Lehndorff, and a friend, Max Kohnert, who owned the launch. The small cabin of the boat was unheated and they lay in blankets, while ice caked over the doors and windows. All night they waited for the storm to abate. Morning found the snow gone but the waves were still so high that the hunters could not see over them to shore. Only after starting the engine did they make out land.

SUES DOCTOR FOR KISS TALE

Eighteen Year Old Detroit Girl Demands $5,000 Damages.

DETROIT, MICH. — Miss Myrtle Fisher, a beautiful girl of eighteen, commenced a second suit to recover $5,000 from Dr. Edmund Viertel and his wife, because the former told mutual friends that Myrtle told him she'd kiss him if he were not married.

Myrtle charges the offense occurred in 1913. A jury awarded her the $6,000 at a previous trial, but the verdict was set aside. A new trial was started at the last term of the circuit court and Myrtle fainted on the first day. The judge ordered the case adjourned to this term. Dr. Viertel is white haired and insists that he did not deviate from the truth when he told friends that he was approached by Myrtle with "I would give you a kiss if you were not a married man." He also says she made another proposal. Myrtle indignantly denies the accusation and keeps a handkerchief constantly at work drying outraged tears.

TWIN LAKE MAN IS MISSING

Disappears With $2,500 in Cash; Wife Fears Foul Play.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — With about $2,500 in currency in his pockets, Edward Rice of Twin Lake is being sought by the local police at the request of his wife, who fears he has met with foul play. Rice left his home Saturday with an affable stranger. It is understood he received the money from the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad in payment for injuries he received about a year ago, when struck by a freight car at Twin Lake. Rice was shabbily dressed and unshaven when he left home.

The wife asserts Rice did not leave her a cent of the money he received, although their home is mortgaged and she has been forced to work.

Michigan Grower Figures His Net Profits on Acre $111.

LANSING, MICH. — The claim of the upper peninsula to being a potato growing district par excellence has been nobly upheld by August Ohman, of Skanee, this county.

On a single acre of ground this season he raised 556 bushels of tubers, which he sold for $228. He figures his net profit at $111.

ALL AMENDMENTS IN MICHIGAN DEFEATED

Returns from 34 Counties Indicate Their Fate.

LANSING, MICH. — Secretary of State Martindale has compiled figures from thirty-seven counties showing the vote on the four constitutional amendments and the indications are that all are lost, unless it be the proposition for students and traveling men to vote while away from home. The vote on the four amendments from the thirty-seven counties is as follows:

Bonding for permanent improvement of highways—Yes, 41,024; no, 57,259.

Construction of drains and improvements of agricultural lands—Yes, 40,526; no, 57,660.

Right of students and traveling men to vote while away from home—Yes, 48,507; no, 51,413.

Fraternal insurance amendment—Yes, 21,734; no, 81,293.

These figures show the fraternal insurance amendment was fairly snowed under and there is little indication that even the student right to vote amendment will carry, as a majority of the counties reporting show slight majorities against the proposition. The complete figures will probably be obtainable within a week.

CHICAGO STOCK YARDS OPEN

Cattle Are Again Pouring In After Federal Quarantine.

CHICAGO — After ten days of comparative idleness, the stock yards are receiving shipments of cattle and hogs for immediate slaughter. The railroads have been notified the ten day quarantine has been lifted. All the packing plants, newly scrubbed and disinfected, have received the federal government's official O. K.

Local stockmen who thought the quarantine on Illinois cattle should be more severe made a final effort to obtain a more stringent ruling from the state veterinarian, but their request was refused by Dr. O. E. Dyson. The cattlemen, represented by T. W. Jerreme and S. B. Stafford, wanted affidavits of immunity from state veterinarians as well as from the shippers themselves.

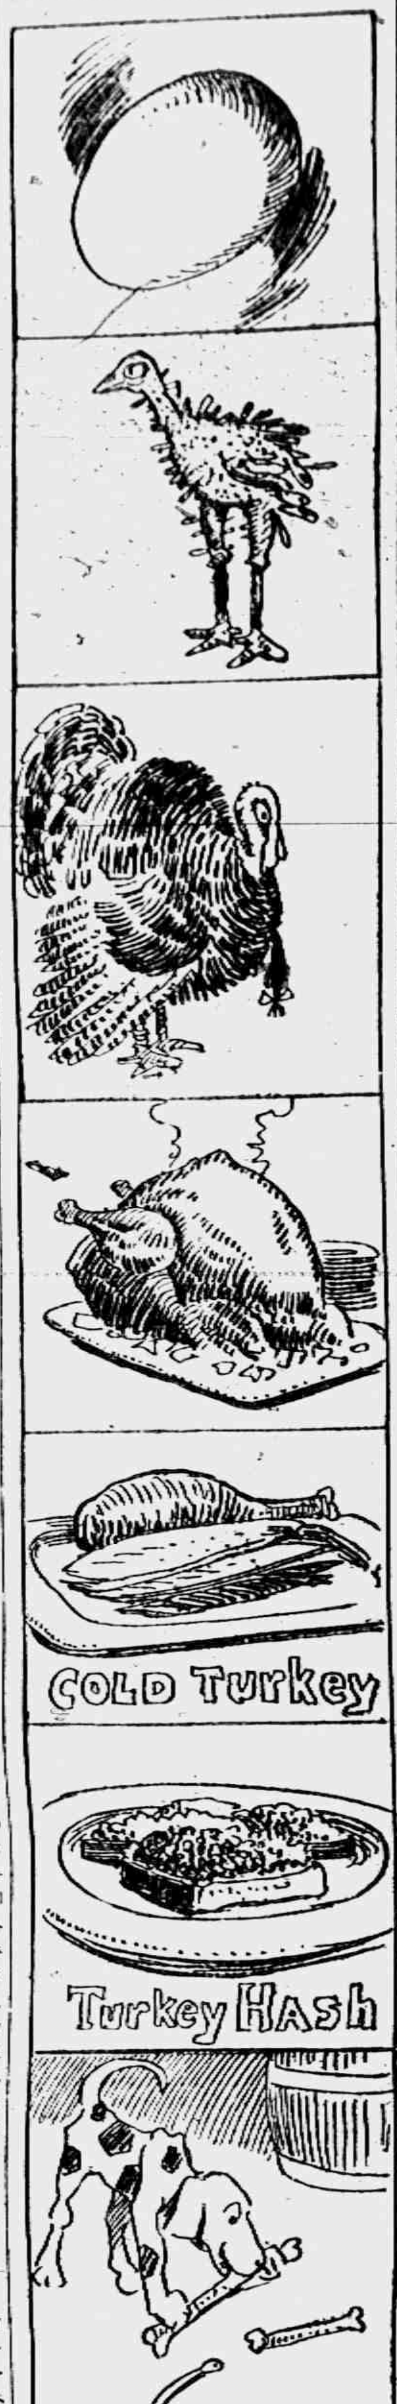
Anonymous Work.

The work that does most of the world's good is anonymous. It is always astonishing to learn how unknown are most of the people who are doing the important things. They love their work more than their name.—The Christian Register.

Seven Ages of the Thanksgiving Turkey



The King of Festivals.

The king and high priest of all festivals was the autumn thanksgiving. When the apples were all gathered and the cider was all made and the yellow pumpkins were rolled in from many a hill in billows of gold and the corn was husked and the labors of the season were done and the warm late days of Indian summer came in dreamy and calm and still, with just enough frost to crisp the ground of a morning, but with warm traces of benignant, sunny hours at noon, there came over the community a sort of genial repose of spirit, a sense of something accomplished and of a new golden mark made in advance, and the deacon began to say to the minister of a Sunday, "I suppose it's about time for the Thanksgiving proclamation."—From Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Old Time Folks."

Our First National Thanksgiving.

The immediate occasion of the first thanksgiving was the surrender of General Burgoyne to General Gates in the fall of 1777. Thursday, the 18th of December, was designated, and in compliance with the order of congress the army at Valley Forge duly observed the day, the army that had tracked its way in blood. It was ordered by the Continental congress.

Asked to Blow Up Train.

MARQUETTE, MICH.—Edward Peters, copper miner, and member of the Western Federation of Miners during the copper strike, in the trial of John Huhta, one of the four men charged with complicity in the so called Painesdale murders, testified that William Rickerd, president of the Calumet local of the Western federation, had asked him to put explosives on the railroad tracks in the yards at Calumet to blow up a train that was bringing in strike breakers.

Vote Close; Asks Recount.

ANN ARBOR, MICH.—Herman Lindenschmidt of Saline was elected sheriff of Washtenaw county by three votes over Ross Granger. This is the official count returned by the board of county canvassers. Mr Granger will ask for a recount.

"Minor Injuries" Fatal to Nurse.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—Miss Susan Smith, aged thirty-five, a nurse in the Kalamazoo state hospital, died from injuries received when she was struck by a street car. Physicians at first said she was suffering only from minor bruises.

POLLY'S THANKSGIVING

How a Little Girl Got a Holiday All For Her Very Own.

SUCH a funny little roly poly Polly as she was, with her big china blue eyes, that were forever seeing something to wonder about, and her round, red cheeks, that always grew redder when anybody spoke to her, and her crinkly, flaxen hair, that never would stay in place. Such a queer dumpling of a Polly!

All the same, she liked nice things to eat as well as any one could, and when once upon a time somebody gave her the measles just in season for Thanksgiving day she felt dreadful about it and cried as hard as she knew how because she couldn't have any turkey nor pudding nor mince pie for dinner—nothing at all but oatmeal gruel.

But crying didn't help the measles a mite, as, of course, Polly knew it wouldn't. But she couldn't have helped crying if she wanted to, and she didn't want to.

"Most anybody 'd cried, I wouldn't wonder," she said a day or two after, when the measles had begun to go away again, "not to have a mite of any Thanksgiving for dinner—not any pie, not any cranb'ry sauce, not any—oh, dear!"

"Well, well," said Polly's mother, laughing. "I guess we'll have to have another Thanksgiving day right off."

"Oh, can we?" cried Polly, brightening up.

"Not unless the governor says so," answered her father, with a twinkle. "The governor makes Thanksgiving days, Polyanthus."

"Where does he live?" asked Polly, with an earnestness that was funny. Everybody laughed.

"At the capital," said Polly's Uncle Ben Davis. "Do you know where that is?"

"I guess I do," said Polly, and she asked no more questions.

But what do you guess this funny Polly did? By and by, when she felt quite like herself again, she borrowed pencil and paper and shut herself up in her own little room and wrote a letter that looked a little queer, 'tis true, but still made her wishes known;

DeRe MisTeR GUVNER will yOu PleAse Make AnoTHeR THANKSGIVING DAY be Caws I haD THE MEESLES the LAst One. Polly Pinkham.

Then she folded the letter and put it in an envelope and sealed it and took 2 cents out of her bank for the postage and ran away as fast as she could run.

Mr. Willey kept the postoffice, and if he himself had been behind the glass boxes that day I don't believe Polly's letter would ever have gone out of Tinkerville. But Mr. Willey's niece was there. She read the address on the envelope Polly handed in, and her eyes danced, it looked so funny:

Mister GuvNER, at the CAPITLE.

One or two questions brought out the whole story.

"The governor shall have your letter, Polly," roguish Miss Molly said as she stamped it and postmarked it.

And so he did, for, not quite a week later, a letter came in the mail for Polly—a great white letter with a picture in one corner that made Polly's father open his eyes.

"Why, it's the state's arms!" said he. "What under the sun"—

But I think he suspected. Oh, how red Polly cheeks were and how her small fingers trembled when she tore open her letter! It was printed so that she could read it herself, all but the long words:

Dear Miss Polly—Your letter received. I am very sorry you were so ill as not to be able to eat any Thanksgiving dinner. It was quite too bad. I hereby appoint a special Thanksgiving day for you—next Thursday, Dec. 5—which I trust may be kept with due form. Your friend and wellwisher, ANDREW COLBURN.

"Oh, oh, oh!" said Polly, hopping on one foot. "Will you, mother? Oh, mother, will you? I wrote to him myself. Oh, I'm so glad!"

"Did you ever!" cried Polly's mother. "Why, Polly Pinkham!" But Polly's father slapped his knee and laughed.

"Good for Governor Colburn! I'll vote for him as long as he wants a vote. And Polly shall have a special Thanksgiving worth telling of, so she shall!"

And so she did have, the very best she ever remembered.—A. C. Stoddard in Youth's Companion.

Fasting and Feasting.

A fast and a feast kept close company in Puritan calendars. A fast frequently preceded Thanksgiving day and was sometimes appointed for the day succeeding the feast, a clever plan which had its good hygienic points.

Though in the mind of the Puritan Christmas smelled to heaven of idolatry, when his own festival, Thanksgiving, became annual, it assumed many of the features of the old English Christmas. It was simply a day of family reunion in November instead of December, on which Puritans ate turkey and Indian pudding and pumpkin pie instead of "superstitious meats," such as a baron of beef, boar's head and plum pudding.

Many funny stories are told of the early Thanksgiving days, such as the town of Colchester calmly ignoring the governor's appointed day and observing its own festival a week later in order to allow time for the arrival, by sloop from New York, of a hogshead of molasses for pies.—From "Customs and Fashions In Old New England," by Alice Morse Earle.

Monroe Murderers Given Life.

MONROE, MICH. — At the November term of the circuit court which convened here with Judge Edward R. Gilday presiding, Frank Kasru, twenty-nine, and Joseph Dudas, twenty-three, Hungarians of Milan township, pleaded guilty to the charge of murder and were sentenced to Marquette prison for life. Kasru made a murderous assault upon his divorced wife, Mary Tedt, thirty-one, by shooting her twice with a revolver Oct. 12, while Dudas shot Julia Kasru July 31, and then attempted to kill himself because she had spurned his love.

Saves Four From Coal Gas.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — A neighbor, becoming uneasy because of the long continued quietness in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Shinn of Salem, gained access to the house and found Mrs. Shinn and her three children all unconscious on the kitchen floor and the house filled with the fume from coal gas.

Help was summoned and after working several hours, all were gotten out of danger. Mr. Shinn was in Detroit on business.

RESEARCH CIRCLE.

The regular meeting of the Research Circle was held Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. L. Mangus as hostess. The leader for the afternoon was Mrs. H. R. Conklin. The subjects taken up were "Important movements of our time." Mrs. Pangborn read a fine paper on "Peace." Mrs. Raymond presented the subject of "Prohibition" in a very able manner. Mrs. Wilson's paper treated the subject of "Medicine and Surgery." The paper on the "Topography of Michigan" by Mrs. Laura Temple was read by Mrs. Andrew Taylor. Social conversation then followed on First experiences in housekeeping which brought out many laughable trials and tribulations. At roll call each member gave some useful items of housekeeping, worth knowing by all. The next meeting will be held with Miss Mary Whitlock as hostess and Mrs. Guy Belding as leader.

MRS. GEORGE HAWKES

Mrs. Amelia McNeil Hawkes whose passing away we mentioned in our last issue was born in Tecumseh in 1845 and most of her life has been spent here. She received her education in our public schools and at an early age began teaching school. Among her papers was a certificate dated 1865, bearing a stamp as was required at that time. She taught both in Michigan and Indiana.

After her marriage to Mr. Hawkes they resided for about thirteen years in Britton where she was a member of the Christian church.

Hers was a kind and loving nature and she endeared herself to all with whom she met as neighbor and friend. By her sudden taking away a husband is left desolate and her children mourn the loss of a loving mother. Her brother and sisters grieve over another taken from their circle. Only her memory is left, but how uplifting is its influence.

"She saw a hand we could not see
That beckoned her away,
She heard a voice we could not hear
That said she must not stay."

Smooth the locks of silver hair
On this mother's brow with tenderest care,
Gather the robe in final fold
Around the form so still and cold;
Lay on her bosom, pure as snow,
The fairest, sweetest flowers that grow,
Kiss her and leave her—our heart's delight,
Her pain is over, she sleeps tonight.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors who so kindly stood by us in our late bereavement, those who sent the beautiful flowers, the pastor and the singers for their comforting words.

GARLINGHOUSE—BRYAN.

Married, at the home of the bride at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Nov. 19, 1914, Mrs. Frances E. Bryan and Guerdon B. Garlinghouse, Rev. W. B. Hartzog officiating.

The wedding was a very quiet one, only Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Finch, Mrs. Hartzog and Mr. T. C. Mills, father of the bride being present. They left this morning on a short wedding journey.

Both parties have been residents of Tecumseh all their lives and have a host of friends who will unite in wishing them a happy life together.

Lavern Wheeler has secured the job of painting the new scenery for the Hudson Opera House. An addition of thirty feet is being built for a stage which will be furnished with entire new scenery. Mr. Wheeler will commence work in a few days.

The removal of John F. Murry to Detroit suggests the query would it have happened if Tecumseh were a better railroad center.

W. W. Meeker of Chicago is making his Tecumseh friends a short visit this week. He is one of the managing clerks in the office of the North Chicago Street Railray Co, a position of much responsibility. He has been in their employ with good acceptance for several years.

Dr C. M. Woodward came home from the north part of the state last Friday bringing with him a buck which weighed 180 pounds. He shot two while there. The Doctor looks hale and hearty after his weeks hunt in the north woods.

The young people of St. Peters church will give a social at the residence of E. A. Tribou next Wednesday evening, Nov. 26th. All are invited to attend and also to bring with them a pound of something which will be disposed of at auction for the benefit of the Society. A good musical and literary program will be presented.

RED CROSS CHRISTMAS SEALS

What are they?
Messengers of Good Health.
How much are they?
One Cent Each.
What is the Money used for?
To stamp out Tuberculosis in Michigan.
How are they used?
On the backs of Letters, Packages, and wherever they will stick.
Who uses them?
Everyone during December.
Where are they Sold?
Everywhere—or Should Be.

Pennants or banners will be given by the American Red Cross and The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis to the seven counties, cities, towns and villages in the United States selling the largest number of Red Cross Christmas Seals per capita before January 1st, according to an announcement from headquarters in New York today.

In order to make the competition even in all parts of the country the counties, cities and towns have been grouped according to their population in 1910 into seven classes, as follows: From 500 to 2000; from 2000 to 8000; from 8000 to 25000; from 25000 to 50000; from 50,000 to 150,000; from 150,000 to 500,000; and over 500,000. A specially prepared pennant will be given to the county, city, town or village in each class anywhere in the United States selling the largest number of seals per inhabitants.

Last year Cody, Wyoming was among the largest buyers per capita selling over 22,000 with a population of 1200. Some cities in New York, Wisconsin, and Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and other states sold from three to six per resident. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, which is carrying on the promotion of the sale consipers that any city of 10,000 to 100,000 population ought to sell at least three cents worth of seals per inhabitant.

CARD PARTY.

The ladies of St. Elizabeth's church gave a card party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Deery on Wednesday evening with about 70 in attendance. Progressive pedro was the chosen game. James Geehan won first prize, Miss Edna Sims second prize and A. Dewey was consoled.

Connected with this was a sale of fancy work and aprons, the ladies realizing a neat sum. Refreshments were served at the close of the games.

M. E. CHURCH FAIR.

The ladies of the M. E. church held their chicken-pie dinner and fair on Thursday. There was a good crowd for the dinner and the fair was a great success, everything being sold. The different booths were tastefully arranged, especially the vegetable department which was quite attractive. The ladies realized nearly $85.00

T. B. A.

Miss Bessie Spayde was hostess to the T. M. B. Club Tuesday evening. The fateful number of thirteen were present but everything passed off in a most harmonious manner. All sorts of fancy work and animated conversation made the evening a very pleasant one. Dainty refreshments were served during the evening and when good nights were exchanged, each one expressed themselves as delighted with the evenings cheer.

ANNUAL STATE BOYS' CONFERENCE, Y. M. C. A.

Registrations for the 12th Annual State Boys' Conference have already broken all previous records. They are now in from 150 different towns and cities in the State. Over 50 different counties representing both Upper and Lower Peninsulas will have older boys present. Indications point to an attendance far beyond the 2000 mark.

Among the speakers will be many of national fame with Wm. Jennings Bryan to head the list. Some 80 boys will be on the program representing clubs, Sunday-schools, Scouts, high schools, Y. M. C. A.s, etc.

All registrations should be sent to Sec'y J. A. VanDis, Ann Arbor, this week to secure a place in the conference.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT.

Mrs. Mary A. Seitz of Tecumseh is plaintiff in a suit against the Village of Clinton for injuries received over a year ago by falling over a defective sidewalk. G. A. Rathbun is her attorney. Mrs. Seitz is asking for $2000 for the injuries received which were broken bones in the first finger of her right hand and a sprained wrist. The suit is being tried in Adrian this week.

HARD COAL AND SOLVAY COKE

We have recommended this mixture to quite a number of customers this fall and are hearing the best of satisfaction from the use of the same. At times hard coal is too slow, by using part coke you can get a hot quick fire, being mixed the fuel lasts longer than straight coal.

To get the best results you must use our kind of Hard Coal and the Genvine Solvay Coke.

Ask for a trial, we know how to mix the right proportion.

MERKLE—BRONSON

Married Tuesday Nov. 17, 1914 in Grand Rapids Fred Merkle of base ball fame and Miss Ethel Bronson, a former employe of the Tecumseh Herald. We clip the following from the Free Press: Grand Rapids, Mich. Nov. 18. "A romance which begun when Fred Merkle, Star first baseman of the N. Y. Giants, was a member of the Tecumseh Club of the Southern Michigan league of 1908, resulted Tuesday in the marriage of the ball player to Miss Ethel Bronson of this place, formerly of Tecumseh.

The fact was not made public until today. Merkle has spent the last two winters as a compositor on the Fennville, Michigan Herald and came into Grand Rapids to do his wooing. Merkle and his bride will take a short wedding trip before settling in their future home in Toledo, O.

IMPROVEMENTS AT ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT AND STANDISH DAM.

On the night of May 11th the waters of the Raisin River destroyed the race at the electric light plant and further on down stream completely destroyed the Standish dam owned by Levi Hayden.

The damage was great and thousands of dollars have been spent during the summer months to repair the damage done in one night. The electric light plant has been operating since the flood by steam power but in a few weeks the water will again be turned into the new race and will furnish the power to light our village.

The company has arisen to the occasion and have rebuilt better and stronger than before. A new addition to their building has been built, 48x21 ft. in size, to cover and house the new machinery purchased and being installed by the Tecumseh Electric Co.

Two new water wheels of the latest pattern built by James Laffel of Springfield, O., have been installed, one with a capacity of 332 horse power and the other 169 horse power. Two new generators located directly above the water wheels are being installed, the larger one developing 200 K. V. A. and the smaller one 100 K. V. A. Power is transmitted to the generators from the water wheels by a perpendicular shafting, thus being able to utilize the maximum efficiency of the power produced. These generators are of the latest pattern and were purchased from the Allis Chalmers Co. of Milwaukee, Wis.

The new governors being installed were built by the Lombard Governor Co, of Aspland, Mass., and are of the oil pressure type considered to be the best and most accurate type made. Their purpose is to open and close the gates to the water wheel and will close the gates from full open in one second's time.

The smaller wheel and generator will produce sufficient current to carry the lighter load used during the day light period while the larger one will be called upon to carry the heavier load at night time. When completed the company will have one of the best and most modern plants of its size in the country.

Down the river a new dam has been built to replace the old Standish dam and this work as in the case of the Electric Co. has been built better and stronger than ever before. This new work has been put in at a cost of $10,000.00 and is built entirely of reinforced concrete. One thousand lbs. of cement was used in its construction and it is 84 ft. from one side of the river to the other.

The plans for the work were prepared by the Fargo Engineering Co. of Jackson, Mich., who also superintended the construction of the dam. Eighty feet of the race-way was washed out and had to be rebuilt. This new dam is the fifth which has been built at this point and is considered to be the strongest and best on the River Raisin

YOUNGEST BUSINESS MAN IN TECUMSEH

Without doubt the youngest business man in Tecumseh is Santo Coscarelli, a young Italian boy of 15 years. Santo is in full charge of the fruit store which is located just east of Heesen & Heesen's clothing store in the Service building. He does all of the buying, settles all accounts and takes care of business as carefully as an older head. He is a clean, bright little chap and one who would attract favorable attention at once.

Besides looking after the affairs of his store Santo attends to his school duties for he is in the fifth grade in our school and we hear that he is giving as careful attention to his school work as he does to his business affairs.

Santo hires an older boy by the name of Sam Randall to help in the store.

Geo. Coscarelli, his father, opened this store the 2nd of last May and father and son conducted the business together until July 28th when the former left for Italy leaving the son in full charge. Santo says his father will not return before March 1st.

Santo was born in Lansing, Mich., and later his family moved to Mason where the father conducted a fruit store. Selling out in Mason, the family, father, mother and six children, went back to Italy. The mother being in poor health, remained in Italy, keeping with her five of the children, and the father and son returned to the States and came to Tecumseh where the business was started.

Inquiring about business Santo says it is good and he is well pleased. He is gradually adding to his stock of fruits, candies, nuts, etc., and is already a great favorite with our Tecumseh people.

COLDS

An up-to-date remedy for colds. That is what Peruna is. In successful use over 50 years.

Colds are caught in many ways: Illy ventilated rooms; rooms that have direct draughts; crowded rooms; damp houses; stuffy school rooms; offices illy heated.

A dose of Peruna at the right time, at the first symptom of cold, before the bones begin to ache, before the sore throat manifests itself, or the cough, or the discharge from the nose, just a dose or two of Peruna before these symptoms begin is generally sufficient. But after the cold is once established with the above symptoms prominent, a bottle of Peruna, or maybe two, will be necessary.

Baiting the Bull.

In the interior of Venezuela and Colombia toro coleado is a feature of fiesta days. A principal street of the town is roped off and a wild bull is liberated. From eight to ten mounted horsemen enter the improvised arena, their only defense against attacks of the bull being their superb horsemanship and a knowledge of how to twist the bull's tail in such a manner as to cause him to tumble over. While the attention of the bull is attracted by some of the party a horseman dashes from the rear at full speed, gives a dextrous twist, and over rolls the bull. This sport is not without its danger, and almost every coleado festival adds to the hospital list. The honor of being champion bull tail twister develops keen competition, for the winner is crowned with flowers by the prettiest girl in the village. Some performers become so expert as to be sure of their twist at a specified point, the great achievement being to bring the animal to the dust just in front of the balcony of one's ladylove.—Argonaut.

Reforming the Boarders.

The boarding house had changed hands, and the regular boarders were changing some of their habits to suit the aggressive new landlady. The sword had fallen rather promiscuously during this pruning of bad habits, but they were all amused when it struck the haughty young professor. Sitting with his head bowed gracefully on his shapely hand, it was his custom to pay no attention to the things that were passed around the breakfast table.

The landlady brought in a plate of hot biscuits and held them in front of him. He did not look up. She jogged his elbow, and, looking up, he said loftily: "I do not care to be disturbed when meditating."

The regular boarders stopped eating, awaiting her reply. She stared at him for a second, then said decidedly: "Hereafter you do your meditatin' somewheres else. I want these biscuits et."—Indianapolis News.

Message of the Telephone.

There is nothing in the sound of the shrill little telephone bell to warn us of the import of its message. More's the pity. It may be that bore whose telephone conversation begins: "Well, what do you know today?" It may be your lawyer to say you've inherited a million. Hence the arrogance of the instrument—it knows its voice will never willfully go unanswered so long as the element of chance lies concealed within it.—American Magazine.

CARRANZA SOON TO STEP ASIDE

Reported Ready to Retire in Behalf of Gutierrez.

VILLA AGREES TO QUIT COUNTRY

Provisional Head Chosen by Mexican Convention Prepares to Take Reins and Assures Bryan Foreign Interests Will Be Protected—Villa Asks Neutral Board For Vera Cruz.

WASHINGTON D. C.— Administration officials are delighted at the receipt of a dispatch at the state department announcing that Carranza has declared his willingness to resign the provisional presidency of Mexico. This came from the state department's special agent, Mr. Canova, at Aguas Calientes and was based on a dispatch received by General Gutierrez, who was elected president of Mexico by the Aguas Calientes convention.

The belief that a renewal of internal warfare in Mexico at his time has been averted was strengthened by unofficial reports reaching Washington declaring that General Villa had consented to resign his military command and leave Mexico in the interests of peace.

Gutierrez Telegraphs Bryan.

Another development here in connection with the Mexican situation was the receipt by Secretary Bryan of a message from General Gutierrez formally announcing his election to the presidency and his intention to set up a government in Mexico City soon. He gave the president assurances that the government which he heads will afford full protection to foreign life and property in Mexico. Should Carranza and Villa act in accordance with the intentions attributed to them there is little doubt entertained here but that the Gutierrez government will soon be a reality and it is regarded as more than probable that the Gutierrez government will be the one to take over Vera Cruz from the custody of the United States on the evacuation of that port next week.

The dispatch from Canova announced by Mr. Bryan sent under date of 7 o'clock Sunday night from Aguas Calientes was as follows:

"Everything is arranged satisfactorily. Carranza has telegraphed Gutierrez his willingness to retire."

It is presumed here that Carranza will leave Mexico upon relinquishing his claims to supreme power in the government.

Will Protect Foreigners.

General Gutierrez's communications to Secretary Bryan consisted of two notes. One announced his accession to the provisional presidency and the other gave assurances of his intention to afford all due protection to foreign life and property in Mexico. The messages were transmitted through Agent Canova at Aguas Calientes. In the second message he reviews briefly the crisis which the republic has undergone in the last few years, the efforts made to establish a government acceptable to all and says:

"I will strive to adopt the policy of the government to the needs of the country with respect to legitimate rights of the nationals, set up the reforms that the revolution demands and scrupulously guarantee the life and property of foreigners who have come under the protection of our hospitality and laws, to co-operate with us in the aggrandizement of the nation.

"The new government in my charge will move to Mexico City and achieve the complete pacification of the country, for besides having reason, right and public opinion on its side, it will try to meet the just demands of all the inhabitants of the land, though without swerving from the performance of its duties."

Villa Asks Neutral Vera Cruz Board.

EL PASO — General Villa, in dispatch received here, urges the relinquishment of Vera Cruz by the United States to a neutral commission. He suggested that the United States before withdrawing its troops might secure from Provisional President Gutierrez and General Carranza promises not to occupy the port until one faction or the other were in complete control. In the meantime, a neutral commission would administer the affairs of the port, including the collection of import duties and would be bound to turn over the funds to which ever party ultimately came into control of the government. Queretaro is to be the provisional capital of Mexico pending the retirement of Venustiano Carranza according to advices received here. General Eulalio Gutierrez will leave for Queretaro in a day or two.

Francisco Villa and Venustiano Carranza have both agreed to leave Mexico each conditional upon the absolute retirement of the other, according to advices received here by E. C. Llorente, appointed by the Aguas Calientes conference as its agent at Washington.

Are You Suffering From Auto-Intoxication?

The dictionary says that Auto-Intoxication is "poisoning, or the state of being poisoned, from toxic, substances produced within the body." This is a condition due to the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver, or pores of the body failing to throw off the poisons. More than 50% of adults are suffering from this trouble. This is probably why you are suffering from nervousness, headaches, loss of appetite, lack of ambition, and many other symptoms produced by Auto-Intoxication. Your whole system needs stirring up.

French Dueling Methods.

Many of the duels in France end without bloodshed. When the offense is not very serious it is agreed beforehand that the words of command shall be given so rapidly that the duelists will not have time to take good aim. Sometimes three shots are exchanged without a hit, and then the seconds step in and "honor is satisfied." At the word "Fire!" the pistol is raised instantly, and it must be discharged no later than the word "Three!" so the speed with which these words are given regulates the time in which it is possible to take aim. Therefore the speed with which they are spoken is agreed on beforehand, this depending upon the seriousness of the duel. The words are timed with a metronome. If the encounter be very serious this is set at the lowest speed, eighty beats a minute, which gives time for taking accurate aim. A speed of 140 beats a minute allows no time for aiming, and, therefore, is used when seconds think the duel should be made as little dangerous as possible.—Philadelphia Record.

VICTIM OF FRIEND MAY DIE

Pittsford Man Rushed to Escanaba on Special Train

ESCANABA, MICH. — The first accident to a non-resident deer hunter in Delta county during the present season occurred when Clyde Bacon of Pittsford, Hillsdale county, was accidentally shot through the thigh by Neil Horton, a companion.

The shooting occurred near Wolverine after the two men had returned from this city. Horton's rifle was over his shoulder and pointing in Bacon's direction and in some unknown manner it was discharged. The injured man was rushed to this city and to the St. Francis hospital on a special train. He is in a critical condition.

HOW TO CURE A CHRONIC COUGH

Told in the Following Letter by a Jackson Man Who Knows from Experience. His Word Is Good.

Jackson, Miss.—"I am a carpenter, and the grippe left me not only with a chronic cough, but I was run-down, worn out and weak. I took all kinds of cough syrups but they did me no good. I finally got so weak I was not able to do a day's work, and coughed so much I was alarmed about my condition. One evening I read about Vinol and decided to try it. Before I had taken a quarter of a bottle I felt better, and after taking two bottles my cough is entirely cured, all the bad symptoms have disappeared and I have gained new vim and energy."—JOHN L. DENNIS, 711 Lynch Street, Jackson, Miss.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because the active medicinal principles of cod liver oil contained in Vinol rebuilds wasting tissues and supplies strength and vigor to the nerves and muscles while the tonic iron and wine assist the red corpuscles of the blood to absorb oxygen and distribute it through the system, thus restoring health and strength to the weakened, diseased organs of the body.

If Vinol fails to help you, we return your money.

A Conversion From Vanity

A Story For Halloween

By MARTHA V. MONROE

A young artist sat before an easel in one of the great galleries in Florence, Italy. He was an American studying art in that city, which contains one of the most valuable collections of art treasures in the world. Visitors were passing through the rooms, looking at the paintings hung on the walls, some stopping to cast a glance at the unfinished picture or, rather, copy on the canvas before the artist. He worked on without noticing any of them till he had finished a certain feature he was putting in, then leaned back in his chair for a brief rest.

At the moment a party of visitors passed, among them a girl just turning into womanhood. Her features were marvelously beautiful. A man was pointing out the pictures to the group, directing their attention to the most celebrated.

"Hello, Bert!" he exclaimed, noticing the artist at the easel. "You here? I thought you were working in your studio."

"I have accepted an order to copy this Titian. For heaven's sake, who is your girl friend?"

"A Miss Townsend of New York."

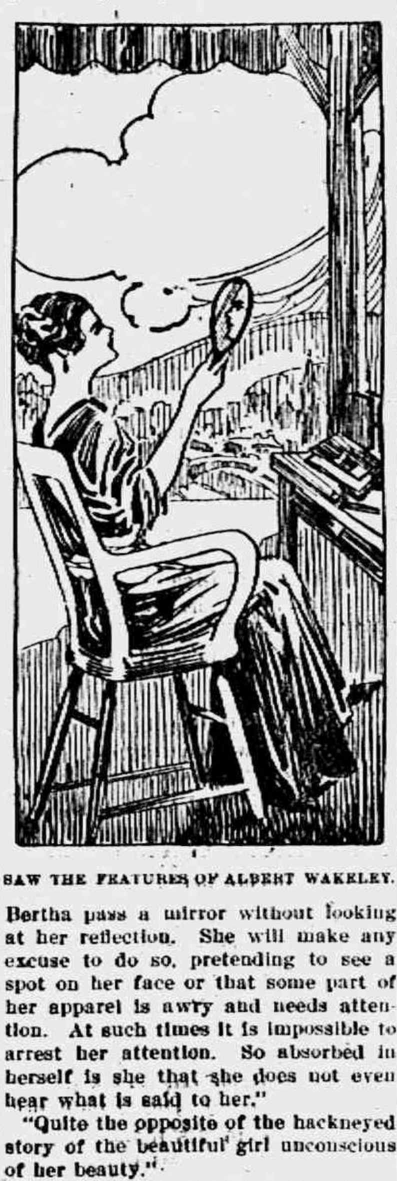
"Never before have I seen such a marvel of beauty."

Meanwhile the party had moved on.

"Unfortunately," replied Frank Kimball, "she is so absorbed in it that she spoils it for others. From a little girl it has been so admired that she could not remain unconscious of it. Had I been her father I should have shut her up where no one could have seen her and where she could not have seen the reflection of her features. Her admiration for them is her only fault, and were it eliminated she would be as lovely within as she is without."

"How do you know that she admires herself?" asked Albert Wakeley.

"How do I know! I visit the family quite frequently and have never seen Bertha pass a mirror without looking at her reflection. She will make any excuse to do so, pretending to see a spot on her face or that some part of her apparel is awry and needs attention. At such times it is impossible to arrest her attention. So absorbed in herself is she that she does not even hear what is said to her."



SAW THE FEATURES OF ALBERT WAKELEY.

"Quite the opposite of the hackneyed story of the beautiful girl unconscious of her beauty."

"I don't believe that girl ever existed. Bertha is a good girl, and I have often thought that I should like to make her sensible that physical beauty cannot last. I have told her she will some day be either a fat or a skinny old woman, but have failed to impress her."

"Well," replied Wakeley, "any one so beautiful as she is excusable for admiring herself. I am quite sure I shall never forget her face now that I have seen it, and I could love her if she had every blemish in Pandora's box."

Kimball cast a glance at the young artist. He was double Wakeley's age and very fond of him. He did not relish the idea of his friend falling in love with one who was wrapped up in her own features.

"Take care, my boy," he said. "Men have fallen in love at sight, and you are not immune."

With that he passed on and rejoined his party in the next room.

William Townsend had retired from business and was spending his time in Europe. He was not a globe trotter. Having intellectual tastes, he visited the principal points of interest, remaining a long while in each. He had taken a villa in Florence, or, rather, on one of the verdure clad hills by which it is surrounded, and was familiarizing himself with the city and its art treasures. He was as much wrapped in his daughter as she was wrapped in her own beauty. Indeed, he was largely responsible for her consciousness of it, for almost from her birth he had expressed his own admiration of it.

Wakeley importuned his friend to secure him an invitation to the Townsend villa. Kimball, who discerned Bert's infatuation and did not approve of it, put him off for awhile, then consented on Wakeley's promise not to express any admiration for Bertha's beauty, but, on the contrary, to ignore it.

The young artist after this spent considerable time at the villa, and though his infatuation for Bertha deepened, he kept his promise to appear unconscious of her beauty and, since he was poor and was too honorable or proud to make love to her, refrained from doing so. Bertha, who had been used to having every one who came near her express admiration in looks if not in words, was taken aback at this first experience of one who showed no consciousness of her gift. Whether she was antagonized or piqued or in different she did not make known. She certainly displayed no interest in Wakeley whatever.

Kimball, being a friend of both parties, observed the situation with interest. It occurred to him that possibly Wakeley might be made use of to win Bertha from her fault. The artist's control of himself in concealing his admiration for what had enthralled him promised to be an element of success. Kimball laid a scheme first to give Bertha a glimpse of what she would be as an old woman, then to make a match between her and Wakeley.

The hot season in Italy was over and gave place to that mellow autumn which renders Italy famous for its soft skies. Bertha was sitting one evening in the gloaming on a terrace without the Townsend villa, situated on a height from which she could look down on the city of Florence. On the embankments of the Arno the lamps were being lit, faint in the still strong twilight.

Bertha's gaze was fixed on the Ponte Vecchio (bridge), the Duomo (cathedral) and other monuments of medieval times, growing dim in the advancing night. But none of these interested her as her own beauty. From a table beside her covered with books and periodicals she took up a handglass with a view to getting a glimpse of her features while it was yet possible to see them. She was about to replace the mirror on the table when there came a flash of dazzling light.

In the mirror she saw a mingling of two faces—one her own, the other that of an old woman. The skin was wrinkled, the cheeks were hollow, the eyes sunken, the teeth discolored. With a cry she threw down the mirror and ran into the house.

From the time she saw the spectral reflection she was changed. Her treatment of Wakeley lost all antagonism, but it was still indifferent. Those who knew of the young man's adoration for her could not see that there was in her any response. Wakeley himself was quite despondent and so expressed himself to Kimball.

"Cheer up," said the latter. "I have done a part of my work and am waiting for an opportunity to attempt the rest. If I have luck I shall render you great assistance."

A few evenings after this Kimball was sitting on the terrace with Bertha where she had seen her face reflected as an old woman.

"Tomorrow at this time," he said, "will be Halloween. Do you propose to try the usual method to see the features of your future husband?"

"I shall never look into a mirror again except when making my toilet."

"Why so?"

"That I do not care to tell."

"I should suppose you would make an exception of Halloween. Come out here at dusk tomorrow evening, look into a mirror, and I fancy you will see the face of the man you shall marry."

Bertha made no reply to this, but Kimball was confident she would do as he had suggested.

True enough, just before dark the next evening she went out on to the terrace. Kimball, who had been dining at the villa, followed, unseen by her, and stood back in a vestibule through which she had passed. She sat for some time looking out on the view before her and when darkness had settled down upon it took up the hand mirror and held it before her face.

Kimball raised his hand; there was a flash, and in the mirror Bertha saw the features of Albert Wakeley.

Bertha, who had believed that the former flash was not supernatural, turned quickly to see who was responsible for the light, but so vivid had it been that her vision was dimmed. Kimball had no difficulty in getting away before her eyes were capable of revealing him to her.

From this time Bertha seemed more sensible to Wakeley's attentions, and it was not long before the encouragement he received was sufficient to warrant his declaring his love for her. He was accepted, and when Wakeley finished his art studies they were married. After the wedding Wakeley said to Kimball:

"I am sure I owe the change in my wife from vanity and the fact that she is mine to you. Tell me how you did it."

"I employed an artist to blend a picture of Bertha in youth and old age in a mirror, the duplicate of the one she kept on the table on the terrace, and substituted it for hers. Then I flashed a light behind her when she was looking into it. Next I substituted a mirror on which your features had been painted. This she saw on Halloween."

Sensation of Drowning.

This is how a correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette describes the escape from drowning:

"I and a party of friends had rowed far out into the bay. We all plunged into the sea and swam about. I went farther than my friends and I imagine I got tired. I went deep down and came up again, and I remember the look of the sky. Then I went down again, and I distinctly heard a sound of most lovely singing. I imagine this was from my ears. I had not the very slightest feeling of suffocation or fear. Only I thought that my husband, who was not with us, would be so grieved. The music became louder and more beautiful, and I saw a dazzling light. The next thing I felt was agony. My friends had missed me, and as I came up for the last time they saw my head. I was hauled into the boat, and then came indescribable agony as I was brought back to life. The lungs filling again was torture."

FIGHT IN POLAND MAY DECIDE WAR

German Advance Checked, but Battle Rages On.

RUSSIANS ADVANCE ON WINGS

Campaign in East Prussia and Against Silesia Awaits Fate of Armies Battling in Center—If Russ Win All Eastern Germany Is Open to Them.

London, Nov. 23.—It is admitted in Berlin that the German armies in Poland have not been able to break through the Russian defense. The German government makes no claim to victory and says, in the latest statement that the issue has not been determined.

The freshest official statement from Petrograd claims little more, although it was reported Sunday that the Germans had been driven back near Lodz and that the Geman advance has been definitely checked. It is obvious, therefore, that the real situation shows the immense forces of kaiser and czar in a death grip all the way from the Baltic sea to the passes of the Carpathians, with no vital advantage to either side.

Russ Within East Prussia.

Official German reports show that Russians are well within East Prussia and are in far greater force than was the case in the early part of September; but the Russian advance in East Prussia has a long way to go before the Dantsig-Thorn line is really in danger or the railroad system affected. Moreover, the nature of the country, which is marked with small lakes and marshy plains, as well as by numerous streams, is very favorable to the defenders. It is recognized that the Russian advance can progress only if the invaders are in greatly superior numbers.

All Hinges on Battle in Poland.

However, the campaign in East Prussia is being fought on the plains of Poland, as is the campaign in Galicia. Upon the outcome of the battles now raging between the Rivers Warthe and Vistula and just east of Czenstochova and Cracow depend whether or not Russia will be able to maintain a hold on German and Austrian territory.

Beaten in Poland, Russia will have to withdraw her central army to the Vistula for the defense of Warsaw and Ivangorod. A great hole will have been torn in the now connected line. Victorious in Poland, Russia will be able to advance her central army once more to the very border of Posen and Silesia; perhaps to overflow those provinces; at all events her whole connected line will have been straightened and the advance could begin solidly from north, center and south.

2,000,000 Men Fighting.

At least 2,000,000 men are fighting in Poland, the Russians probably having an advantage in numbers, although General Von Hindenburg, the German commander in chief, has been sending fresh troops to Poland from Germany's seemingly inexhaustible store. Some authorities estimate that Russia has about 1,200,000 soldiers in Poland alone, while the German strength is estimated at probably 800,000. The heaviest fighting is along both banks of the Vistula, near Plock, where the river flows nearly eastward; near Lowiscz, an important city of western Poland and about fifty miles from Warsaw; between Lowiscz and Lodz, and on the line of Czenstochova and Cracow very near the frontier of Silesia. Apparently the Russians have been worsted slightly near Plock, have gained some advantages between Lowiscz and Lodz and are on even terms with the Germans at the Silesian frontier.

Alumnus Killed and Students Hurt at Crossing.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 23.—A big red Mercedes racing car containing three students of Lafayette college and two from the U. of P. was struck early in the morning at a local grade crossing of the Lehigh Valley railroad here by a freight locomotive, and John Clymer, aged twenty-two, of Riegelsville, Pa., a graduate of Lafayette college, was killed, his head being severed from his body. H. M. Miller of Philadelphia, a Lafayette student, suffered a fractured right leg and James McCandless of Honolulu, Hawaii, a student at the University of Pennsylvania, has a severely lacerated right hip. Harry Chidsey of Easton and Lafayette college and Harold Kelly of Duluth, Minn., a member of the University of Pennsylvania foot ball and track team, escaped injury.

The men, following the Lehigh-Lafayette foot ball game at Easton, went on a trip to Allentown and were on their way home when the accident occurred.

Mr. Burnett was the "Little Lord Fauntleroy" of his mother's story. Upon returning from their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Burnett will live at 145 East Forty-ninth street.

DUMA MEMBERS ARE ARRESTED BY POLICE

Eleven Persons Charged with Fostering Revolution.

Petrograd, Nov. 23.—A revolutionary plot in which several members of the Duma are alleged to be implicated has been discovered by the police, according to a semi-official statement issued here and warrants have been issued for eleven persons, some of whom already are under arrest.

At the beginning of the war, the statement says, most of the Russian people were conscious of the necessity of defending the dignity and integrity of the fatherland and were unanimous in assisting the authorities in the accomplishment of the tasks incurred by the operations of war.

"An altogether different attitude," the statement continues, "was observed by some members of the Social Democratic association, who continued in activity aiming at the downfall of Russia's military power by means of an anti-war agitation, the distributing of secret proclamations and the conducting of a propaganda by word of mouth.

"The government on October last learned of a scheme to convoke a secret conference of delegates of the Social Democratic organization to discuss measures aiming at the ruin of the Russian state and the speedy realization of revolutionary designs.

"On Nov. 17 the police discovered that a meeting of the said conference was to be held in a house in Viberg road, eight miles from Petrograd. A detachment of police arrived on the scene and found there eleven persons, including the following members of the duma: Messrs. Petrovsky, Badaveff, Mouranoff, Samoeloff and Chagoff."

SHOTS BY TURKEY FRIENDLY

Ambassador Morgenthau Forwards Sultan's Explanation of Incident.

Washington, Nov. 23.—The order to the commander of the cuises Tennessee and Noth Caolina to take no action in regard to the situation in Turkey without specific instructions from Washington has been modified by Secretary Daniels. The latest instructions to the commanders of the two war ships are that they shall take no action involving the United States except in case of a real emergency endangering the lives of Americans in Turkey.

Ambassador Morgenthau has forwarded the voluntary explanation of the Turkish government to the effect that the shots were fired toward the Tennessee's launch to warn her against entering the mined and closed port. Administration officials are inclined to regard the emergency of the Tennessee incident as being over and to consider that the situation in Turkey reverts to its former status, that is, a situation in which the United States is interested only for the purpose of securing protection for the lives of Americans.

THREE LAKE SHIPS ARE BELIEVED LOST

Twenty-six Deaths Are Toll of Great Storm.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 23.—The last two days have revealed little information to clear up the mystery surrounding the fate of the steamer C. F. Curtis and the lumber-laden schooners S. E. Marvin and Annie M. Peterson, in tow of the Curtis, which were caught Thursday in the season's most severe storm on Lake Superior. That the Peterson went down in "the grave yard of the Great Lakes," near Grand Marais, seems absolutely certain in view of the bodies and wreckage which have been washed ashore.

Two of the eight bodies recovered were identified as members of the Peterson's crew. Whether some of the other bodies were from the Curtis or Marvin remained to be determined after identification had been made. Four more bodies, among them that of Capt. J. P. Jennings of the steamer Curtis, were later picked up by life savers.

The three missing vessels carried twenty-six persons in their combined crews. The fact that two of the bodies recovered were those of unidentified women caused many to believe the Curtis met the same end as the Peterson, inasmuch as it was thought one or both of the women had been employed on that vessel. The sailing records did not reveal any women hands on the two schooners.

ELEVEN TO HANG SAME DAY

Arizona Governor Refuses to Overrule Vote to Save Doomed Men.

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 23.—With the statement that his heart had been saddened by the verdict of the people in refusing at the recent election to abolish capital punishment, Governor Hunt declared that he would let fourteen condemned prisoners die on the gallows on the dates originally set.

"As Dec. 19 has been designated as the execution date for eleven of them, there will be eleven hangings in Florence penitentiary on that day," said the governor. "I do not have the power to commute sentence, because I put the question up to the people and they have given the verdict."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional treatment, Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destoying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials

Thanksgiving's Boys

"COUNTRY boy with cheek of tan"
(So the old time poem ran),
You're the one to catch our turk;
Hope you find it easy work!
Hold him tight as you are able,
Lest he never reach our table!

CITY kids who hold the bird
Never of his birthplace heard,
But they know how good he tastes,
How he makes expand their waists!
Fowl that joins us folks, of all ranks,
For your toothsomeness we give thanks!

A THANKSGIVING DAY "SERMON"

MY friends: Thanksgiving day comes, by statute, once a year. To the honest man it comes as frequently as the heart of gratitude will allow, which may mean every day, or once in seven days, at least.

Now, I propose, my friends, to state a few of the things for us to be thankful for—when we are in the mood, of course, for when we are not inclined who can make us give thanks for anything? We should be thankful that we know more than anybody else, for are we not capable of talking and giving lectures upon every subject ever talked of?

We should be thankful that we are all good looking. Ain't we? Just look around this audience and see if you can "spot" the person who is, in his own estimation, not good looking. It would be a curious study, to be sure, to find in what particular some people are good looking, but it's none of our personal business if a man has carroty hair, eyes like a new moon, nose like a split pear, mouth like a pair of waffle irons, chin like a Dutch churn, neck like a gander's and a body like a crow bar. Comparatively he is good looking—that is, there are homelier men and animals than he—so everybody is good looking and has a right to put on airs.

We should be thankful that we are more pious than any one else. That we are pious is evident from the manner in which we treat poor creatures who have most unfortunately been driven to sin; from the fact that we pay our preachers occasionally and always require them to be unexceptionable in all respects, from the fact that we don't work on Sunday and eat the big dinners which it has made the women folks almost tired to death to prepare. Who is the person in this room who is not pious? I do not care to know him for the present.

We should be thankful that this world was especially created for our own comfort, convenience and use; that we have a perfect right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, no matter if these do conflict with some other person's wishes and happiness and rights.

I hope you will thank me for this recognition of your good qualities, your rights, your glory and trust. I shall be permitted to say of myself when I retire:

"Here lies an honest young man."—Author Unknown.

Thanksgiving Among the Greeks.

The Greeks held the grandest feast of all the year in honor of Demeter, the goddess of the harvest, and the Romans, who borrowed most of their customs from the Grecians, also held a grand celebration in honor of the same goddess, whose name they changed to Ceres. They went in long processions to the fields, where they engaged in rustic sports and crowned an or their household gods with flowers. Both of these feasts were held in September.

THANKSGIVING.

Come forth, come forth, to the festal board
As our sires were wont in the days of old;
The reapers are home with their harvest hoard,
The herds have hied to their wintry fold,
And the cullers of fruit our vaults have stored
With the wealth of the orchard's freight of gold.
—Hannah E. G. Arey.

AN OLD THANKSGIVING FAVORITE

By LYDIA MARIA CHILD.

OVER the river and through the wood
To grandfather's house we go.
The horse knows the way
To carry the sleigh
Through the white and drifted snow.

Over the river and through the wood—
Oh, how the wind does blow!
It stings the toes
And bites the nose
As over the ground we go.

Over the river and through the wood
To have a first rate play.
Hear the bells ring,
"Ting-a-ling ding!"
Hurrah for Thanksgiving day!

"THROUGH THE WHITE AND DRIFTED SNOW."

Over the river and through the wood
Trot fast, my dapple gray!
Spring over the ground
Like a hunting hound,
For this is Thanksgiving day!

Over the river and through the wood
And straight through the barnyard gate.
We seem to go
Extremely slow—
It is so hard to wait!

Over the river and through the wood—
Now grandmother's cap I spy!
Hurrah for the fun!
Is the pudding done?
Hurrah for the pumpkin pie!

MRS. JAMES SILVER

Mrs. Ida Silver passed away at her home Monday evening at 10:10 after an illness of several months.

Ida Sutfin was born in Tecumseh July 6, 1869. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. John Sutfin. She was united in marriage to James Silver Feb. 28, 1889. Besides her husband she leaves to mourn, her mother Mrs. John Sutfin, a brother William Sutfin of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and a sister Mrs. Stella Jones of Morenci.

The funeral will be held at the home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock and will be private except to relatives and near friends.

MISS ROSIRA KINGSTON

Miss Rosira C. Kingston passed away at her home Sunday morning at 12:30 aged 81 years, 9 months. She has been in a feeble condition for several years but has been able to be up and around her home until within a few weeks.

The funeral was held this afternoon at 1:30 from the home, Rev. Geo. W. Jennings, her pastor, officiating.

A PROCLAMATION
By the Governor

We often speak of inalienable rights among which are "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Liberty and happiness will follow if we put the emphasis on life. For centuries man has sought happiness and ignored the essentials of life, attributing to Providence physical suffering and death. Why not attribute physical vigor and the joy of good health to Providence?

The ravages of the "White Plague" are appalling. Hardly a family in Michigan, hardly a family in the United States that has not suffered directly or indirectly from this plague.

Cleanliness in birth, cleanliness in person, cleanliness in the use of air, water, food, clothing, shelter, work, thought and purpose make for godliness.

Teach and train all of the people to think less of physical sins; teach and train all of the people to think more and known more of the laws of health. The industrious world is fast coming to appreciate the tremendous value of all sanitary agencies. The right of an industry to exist rests on the necessity of conserving life, rests on the necessity of enriching life physically, mentally and morally. Physical righteousness exalteth a nation.

Therefore, I, Woodbridge N. Ferris Governor of the State of Michigan, urge the observance of Sunday, November the 29th, Tuberculosis Day.

[SEAL] Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this 18th day of November, in the year of our Lord 1914 and of the Commonwealth the 78th.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS,
Governor.
Frederick C. Martindale,
Secretary of State.

Made the Most of It.

A famous big game hunter visited the Swazis one winter, and the king took a liking to him and loaned him, on his first hunt, the court praiser. The praiser's business was to laud the king and the king's favorites. The white hunter on his expedition had bad luck. He only shot a rabbit. But as he passed with his retinue through the Swazi village on his return the praiser marched before him chanting in a loud voice:

"The great white huntsman has killed a rabbit! Let all the Swazi people hear. It was as big as an ox, as fierce as a lion and as swift as a buck. The brave white huntsman killed it alone and unaided. He killed it with his thunder tube. Listen, ye people. The white huntsman has killed a rabbit! It was as terrible as a tiger, as large as an elephant, and yet the huntsman from afar, the great white slayer, he alone has killed it!"

"Hocking Valley."

Broadway near Forty-second street, New York, always in July is known as "Hocking Valley." You see, most of the actors and actorines have been out of work for a few weeks, and during the month of July it is a case of all going out and nothing coming in, with the result that they are "hocking their cracked ice."

Diamonds are the savings banks of all Broadway talent, and they are the next best thing to real money when their owners are broke. Nearly every theatrical person hits hard pan in July. They may need only a few hundred beans to tide them over until they sign up and it's so easy to slip off a ring or stickpin and get the kale from "uncle" when they are visiting "Hocking Valley."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

The Mandolin.

The mandolin is of Italian origin, though it is impossible to give the time or place of its first use. From Italy the instrument was gradually introduced into France and Spain, from which countries it made its way to the rest of Europe, reaching this country with the coming of the Spaniards at the beginning of the sixteenth century. —New York American.

Where the Injunction Failed.

"Why, Willie," said the teacher, "have you been fighting again? Didn't you learn that when you are struck on one cheek you ought to turn the other one to the striker?"

"Yes'm," agreed Willie, "but he hit me on the nose, and I've only got one." —Kansas City Star.

New Zealand's Great Pine.

The kauri pine, discovered in New Zealand in 1772 by the explorer, Marion du Fresne, has, according to botanists, a long and honorable lineage. One specimen growing at Mercury bay, with a trunk twenty-four feet in diameter, is said to be 1,300 years old.

Symbol of the Key Ring.

The key ring symbolizes the old custom of handing over the keys of the house to the lady. This was more often a design used for the wedding ring, but occasionally for the betrothal. Sometimes the key was merely attached to the ring.

Desert Sand Pits.

In the Arabian desert the sirocco, or sand storm, often digs pits 200 feet deep, scattering the sand for miles around.

The force of example is powerful. We are creatures of imitation.

SLUMBER PARTY.

Miss Lydia Babcock was hostess to a number of her young friends Saturday night for a slumber (?) party. A merry time was enjoyed by all present.

At midnight an appetizing lunch was served, after which further stunts were performed before the party laid themselves down to peaceful slumber.

Breakfast was served at the UNusual hour after which the time was spent in social visiting until the call came for dinner which was pronounced one of the best ever.

Those present were the Misses Florence Aten, Mabel Ager, Mary Avery, Ione Sisson, Myrna Service, Anna Mitchell, Bonnie Brown, Harriet Teachout of Toledo, Gertrude Scudder of Macon, Mrs. Dale Hodges and baby Helen and Mrs. Duaine Service joined them for dinner.

MERRY GO-ROUND

The Merry Go-Round Club were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Rathbun and Mr. and Mrs Paul Fowen Monday evening at the home of the former couple. Ten tables of 500 were played Mrs. F. S. Anderson and Floyd Heesen winning the prizes. A most delightful turkey dinner was served and the evening was a fine social event

THE MONDAY CLUB.

A typical "Sunshine Day" greeted the members of the Monday Club as they met at the home of Mrs. R. B. Gillespie Monday afternoon. The meeting was for the scattering of sunshine among the poor and lonely ones for Thanksgiving Day.

The leader for the afternoon was Mrs C. H. Bramble. About sixty of the members of the club were present. After the business meeting the program was taken up.

The first speaker was Miss Florence Frensdorf of Hudson who urged the ladies to do away with useless Christmas giving and remember those less fortunate than themselves. She also spoke of the condition and needs at the Lenawee County Infirmary.

A vocal duet by Mrs. R. S. Moore and Mrs. Fred Dickinson, with Mrs. F. B. Wood at the piano, followed.

Mrs. F. P. Dodge, president of the Adrian Woman's Club, gave a talk on the county infirmary and Mrs. C. A. Wright spoke of "Our Neighbors across the Water." Several selections were played on the Victrola. At the conclusion of the program, a potluck supper was served.

A goodly number of gifts were left to be sent to the county infirmary to bring a little Thanksgiving sunshine to its inmates.

Out of town guests were Mrs. F. P. Dodge of Adrian, Mrs. H. B. Steck of Chicago, Mrs. E. B. Peck of Indianapolis, Mrs. E. S. Tate of Clinton, Miss Florence Frensdorf of Hudson, Mrs. Jesse Rogers and Miss Alma Rogers of Palmyra.

Mrs. Bert Lowe went to Chicago today to attend the wedding of a friend

R. N. Lowe leaves on a hunting trip this week.

John Avery is away on a hunting trip and Herbert Orr is filling his place at Rude's restaurant.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Molles visited his sister in Adrian Sunday.

Mrs. B. J. Pulver and baby Latona returned from a five weeks' visit in Lansing Sunday evening.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

The harvest the past season has been most bounteous and the corn has been gathered into the granaries.

And while we live in one of the most fruitful countries throughout all the land, still there are unfortunate ones amongst us.

There are those poor and needy ones who have no fire wood for the winter season, and who have no grain stored for food and who have but scanty clothing for their little ones.

Therefore, it seemeth wise and good to set apart the coming Thanksgiving Day and proclaim that besides a day of thankfulness it be also designated as a day to give from our abundant stores to the poor who abide within our gates

You are therefore entreated to open up your hearts on this great day and give a measure in the name of The King to the King's Daughters' society whose mission is to relieve want and destitution

NO LIVE STOCK EXPOSITION

Union Stock Yards, Chicago Ill
Nov. 19, 1914.

To the Editor:

It is with extreme regret that I have to announce that the International Live Stock Exposition for 1914 has been declared off, by reason of the appearance of the dreaded "foot and mouth" disease in the East and this middle Western country.

ONE THING YOU SHOULD KNOW

Is that Chiropractic will help you. This may seem too strong a statement to apply in a general way, but is based alone on the evidence of what Chiropractic is doing where consistently tried out.

Chronic cases are the Chiropractor's stock in trade, not because he is specially desirous of having such cases to the exclusion of the acute, but because people usually try every one and everything else before consulting the Chiropractor,

However the recovery of a chronic case at the hands of a Chiropractor is the best proof that Chiropractic is right. Such recoveries are being witnessed in many quarters over a wide range of territory every day. Chiropractic will help you when everything else fails, but it is to your interest to not wait for further experiment with methods that are known to be failures. Any so called mode of healing that does not remove the cause of illness is a failure. Chiropractic removes the cause.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready-made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it. It is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

Naval Code Books.

On every ship in the American navy the commanding officer and the second in command are each furnished with a copy of the secret naval code of the government. These books are bound not as ordinary books, in cloth covers, but in heavy metal backs. The object is to prevent them from falling in the hands of the enemy, for their weight is so great that when thrown into the water they sink immediately, whereas if bound in the usual manner the spreading leaves might keep them afloat long enough to permit a vigilant enemy to pick them up.

These officers are commanded first of all things to throw these books overboard before surrendering their vessels or whenever there is danger of an enemy getting aboard. The capture of one of these books, it is considered by the naval authorities, would be more disastrous in time of war than the loss of a battleship.—Washington Star.

"BON VOYAGE"

Local Talent in a Musical Comedy Make a Big Hit

FRIDAY EVENING, NOV. 20.

About the funniest performance ever pulled off in Tecumseh in the line of a home talent was the show "Bon Voyage" given Friday evening by the Young Men's Club Every seat below in the opera house was taken and nearly all of the gallery.

The scene was a ship's deck with the ladies and club fellows grouped about in steamer chairs and officered as follows: Captain, Oley Hanna: 1st mate, Fred Dickinson, and 2nd mate Ernest Church.

The deck hands, Ki, Enne, Pepper, Chili, Con and Carne (Harry Wells, Chas Hanna, Don Heesen, Ed Rogers, Ralph and Don Smith) furnished their share of the fun with their sallies at local folks and the hair breadth escape from drowning which "Pepper" experienced.

During Part I a number of musical selections were rendered by Sheldon Southwick, Chas. Hanna, Ernest Church, Fred Dickinson, Harry Wells, Ralph Smith and the Misses Edna Gaston and Bonnie Brown. The two latter were assisted by a ballet of six young ladies (?) (Howard Wilson, Dale Hodges, Glen Bowen, Wilfred Orr, Fred VanTyne and Eslie Marsh) who have scarcely regained the use of their lungs even now. With their little waists; long hose, bare necks and arms, short skirts, big sashes and beautiful curls they were sure some fetching young ladies.

As a grand finale "Chic" Coller, Paul Hunt, Misses Alma and Doris Kloffenstein put on a sketch "The Coming Woman," which brought down the house. The heroic Suffragette, who occupies the office of police captain of our city in 1920 and willingly braves the dangers of capturing a band of counterfieters, faints at sight of a mouse. We looked for something fine from "Chic" and were in no ways disappointed.

A big feature of the show was the fine music given by a ten-piece orchestra directed by Duaine Service whose fine musical talent came into play splendidly.

The affair will be more appreciated when the fact becomes known that the boys made up the performance themselves under the able management of their president, Lester J. Heesen.

On account of illness two of the parties who were to take part in the play were not able to be present.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

T. H. S. FOOTBALL,

Last Wednesday, the foot ball team went to Ypsilanti to try their luck. They returned defeated, 20-7

On Saturday, their luck was no better. They played a return game with Blissfield, at the latter town, As part the team failed to appear, substitutes had to be put in. The signals were all confused many fumbles were made and all opportunities to score were lost. Blissfield took advantage of the weakness in our team and gained three touchdowns and goal kicks. The final score was 21-0. The other game with Blissfield was played October 16, and the score was 33-12 in favor of Tecumseh.

On Thursday morning the County Y. M. C. A. Secretary, Mr. Arnott, talked to the students, the boys especially, about the coming Boys' Conference, to be held Nov. 27-28 at Ann Arbor. He said that every High School, every High School class, every Y. M. C. A. organization was entitled to two delegates between the ages of fifteen and twenty, and that he hoped that some Tecumseh boys would take advantage of this opportunity.

Quite a number of boys in the Junior class are wearing triangular brass watch fobs with the letters, "T. H. S. '16."

The Stereopticon has again been moved this from Room 12 to the Junior Room.

The English III class had a test yesterday morning on the New England groups of authors, including Longfellow, Holmes, Whittier, Lowell and others.

School will be dismissed Thursday and Friday of this week for the Thanksgiving recess. This is something for the students in the public schools to be thankful for.

Mr. and Mrs. George Zimmerman entertained Miss Franc Bierman last week. She left for her home in Indianapolis Thursday.

When the Ancient Jews Gave Thanks.

Three thousand years ago witnessed the Jewish feast of tabernacles, with its magnificent ritual, melodious choirs and picturesque festivities. For eight days the people ceased their work to "eat, drink and be merry." During the time great throngs gathered in and around Jerusalem for several days, living in booths formed of the branches of the olive, pine, myrtle and palm and decorated with fruits and flowers. Grand public pageants were held, and, in addition to these, every household had its worship, its sacrifices and its banquet.

Indict Three Michigan Men.

DETROIT, MICH. — Indictments have been returned by the federal grand jury here against Edwin F. Taylor, Robert W. Fishback and Delbert H. Cummings, officers of the insolvent Savage Motor Car company, charged with using the mails to defraud.

Fifteen witnesses from Wisconsin and Iowa testified before the grand jury that they had paid the Savage Motor Car company from $100 to $500 on motor cars they never received.

Just as Advertised.

The proprietor of a restaurant had just issued a new advertisement intended to call attention to a reduction in rates. After quoting the prices of various articles to demonstrate the fact that everything was cheap he added at the end of the advertisement, "Bread, butter and potatoes free."

He knows better now. On the third day a solemn looking man came in and after taking his place at a table pointed to the advertisement, asking if it meant what it said. He was assured by the waiter that it was exactly true.

"Then give me some bread, butter and potatoes," said the solemn man.

"Yes, sir. What else?" asked the waiter.

"Nothing else," replied the man. "Is there anything else free?"

The waiter had to call the proprietor to smooth matters, but the solemn man pointed to the advertisement, and the proprietor, who was a man of humor, let him have the bread, butter and potatoes free and even threw in a cup of coffee.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BLOCKADED

Every Household in Tecumseh Should Know How to Resist It.

If your back aches because the kidneys are blockaded.

You should help the kidneys with their work.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for weak kidneys.

Recommended by thousands—here's testimony from this vicinity.

Mrs. E. B. Black, 33 E. Henry St., Adrian, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills for kidney complaint and have received satisfactory results. Another of my family complained of weak and disordered kidneys and I induced him to take Doan's Kidney Pills. Since he used this remedy his condition has improved in every way. I allow the publication of this statement for the benefit of other kidney sufferers and I will be glad to confirm it to anyone who calls on me."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Black had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for Croup

Croup scares you. The loud hoarse cough, croupy cough, choking and gasping for breath, labored breathing, call for immediate relief. The very first doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will master the croup. It cuts the thick mucus, clears away the phlegm and opens up and eases the air passages.

TRY THIS FOR YOUR COUGH

Thousands of people keep coughing because unable to get the right remedy. Coughs are caused by Inflammation of Throat and Bronchial Tubes. What you need is to soothe this Inflammation. Take Dr. King's New Discovery. It penetrates the delicate mucous lining, raises the Phlegm and quickly relieves the congested membranes. Get a 50c bottle from your druggist. "Dr. King's New Discovery quickly and completely stopped my cough," writes J. R. Watts, Floydedale, Texas. Money back if not satisfied, but it nearly always helps. adv

Tea Drinking In Russia.

It is not correct to say that Russians like their tea without sugar; on the contrary, they usually take several big lumps. The peasants bite pieces off the sugar instead of putting it into the glass. A slice of lemon is usually, though not always, put in the glass, but orange, jam, bits of apple and even strawberries, when in season, are very popular substitutes and make a drink which most people would consider uncommonly nasty. Hostesses who wish to be quite comme il faut in this matter should note that Russian tea must be served to ladies in cups, not glasses; gentlemen drink it from glasses with silver or plated holders. The long handled spoon used for stirring the tea is left in the glass, and to manipulate it properly while drinking requires some little dexterity. Failing the glassholder, a saucer may be used, and in less exalted circles it is permissible, and even customary, to drink the tea from the saucer.

Breaks Only the Best.

They were preparing to move, and the mistress herself was packing the china. She had reached a set of bread and butter plates in which she particularly delighted—a simple white and gold pattern of exquisite fineness—and one was missing. She hunted through the kitchen and half empty pantry and as a last resort unpacked a neatly closed box she had just finished. She thought of asking Delphine, the faithful old deaf maid, but the effort required to make her hear seemed too great.

Delphine, however, whose keen eyes missed nothing, when she saw her mistress on the point of losing her patience came over to her and explained:

"I'll have to tell you now. I broke one o' them things t'other day. I don't break anything very often, but when I do it's something of some consequence."—New York Sun.

Plant Protection.

Many plants are equipped with wonderful weapons for their defense. The thorns of the rose bush, bramble and gorse prevent cows and horses from eating them, as well as keep off snails and slugs.

Cactus plants have a formidable armor of prickles and daggers. The plant known as the Spanish bayonet is armed with taper pointed spears that have filelike edges.

Some plants, such as the ragged robin, have sticky stems covered with fine hairs, to which insects stick if they climb up to try to steal the honey.

The sun spurge has a poisonous juice which kills insects, while the poisonous properties of the deadly nightshade are well known. The bracken fern has such a bitter taste that cows and sheep will not touch it.

An Immense Help.

A society woman at a tea in Newport praised the toilets of a Baltimore girl.

"She dresses exquisitely," said the guest, who, dressing exquisitely herself, is an admirable judge. "Her hats, her shoes, her coiffure—it's all exquisite.

"And I like to see her take such pains with her appearance," the guest added. "It is wise. For a girl can't help her looks, but her looks can help her."—Exchange.

Her Sympathy.

Old Gentleman (who had just finished reading an account of a shipwreck with loss of passengers and all hands) —Ha! I am sorry for the poor sailors that were drowned. Old Lady—Sailors! It isn't the sailors; it's the passengers I am sorry for. The sailors are used to it.—New York Globe.

Manhattan Island.

Manhattan Island is bounded on the north by the Harlem ship canal (formerly Spuyten Duyvil creek), on the east by the Harlem and the East rivers, on the south by New York upper bay and on the west by the Hudson river. Its area is twenty-two square miles.

Diplomacy.

"What did you tell your wife when you got home from the club last night?"

"I told her she was the sweetest woman in the world."—San Francisco Chronicle.

TERROR REIGN IN MEXICO CAPITAL

City Has Been Experiencing Period of Great Turbulence.

WORST SINCE MADERO SIEGE

Looting Went Unchecked by Constitutionalist Soldiers Is Report—Foreign Resident Unable to Secure Protection—Blanco Jails 500 Rioters—Gutierrez Starts for Capital.

Aguas Calientes, Mex., Nov. 23.—Mexico City has been in the past few days experiencing the most turbulent period of its existence, save only for the ten days' reign of terror when President Madero was besieged in the national palace. The censorship which has been applied to newspaper correspondents in the capital by the Carranza authorities has now been relaxed since General Villa's army has advanced sufficiently close to the capital to open up frequent communication.

Looting Unchecked.

Advices received from Mexico City state that the city has been in a state of terror in the past two weeks, with frequent rioting, accompanied by bloodshed, and by wholesale confiscations of portable property, looting of houses and stores and open robbery of people on the streets. The blame is laid at the doors of the constitutionalist soldiery who, knowing they were soon to leave the capital, gave up all pretense of maintaining discipline or order. Civilians, terrorized, are hiding in the houses and scores of business places remain closed, except when broken open by marauding bands. Protests by foreign diplomats against the treatment of their nationals were received with promises that adequate protection would be given, but no protection was forthcoming, it is said.

Carranza Troops Add to Terror.

Disorders reached their climax on Thursday night when Carranza troops, marching through the city to entrain for the evacuation of the capital, discharged volleys of bullets in the streets, resulting in much damage to property and the wounding of no inconsiderable number of people, reports from the capital state.

On Friday diplomatic representatives of nearly all foreign countries at present represented at the Mexican capital met at the end of a long discussion, renounced all relations with the Carranza government, appealing directly to the commander of the federal district garrison, General Lucio Blanco, to safeguard the city.

Blanco Jails 500 Rioters.

General Blanco, having previously repudiated the Carranza government and announced his allegiance to the new provisional government of Provisional President Gutierrez, replied by bringing into the city from the suburbs ten thousand cavalry, leaving the defense of the outlying districts against the Zapatists and outlaw bands to the militia. The regulars are now patroling the streets and arresting criminals, rioters and inciters of disorder. More than five hundred have been jailed within the past forty-eight hours, the advices state. While the uneasiness of the populace has by no means subsided, it has been much relieved. Business will probably remain at a standstill until after the occupation of the city by Villa's army, the vanguard of which is expected to arrive soon.

In the meantime the attacks of Zapata's western army have largely been suspended with the announcement that Mexico City would be yielded peaceably to the forces of the new provisional government.

Gutierrez Starts for Capital.

President Gutierrez, his cabinet and the members of the convention who are not with their commands, have left for Mexico City. They will make brief stops in Irapuato and Queretaro, but are expected to overtake General Villa's command before Villa himself enters the capital.

FRANK JAMES IS STRICKEN

Once Notorious Outlaw Reported to Be in Dying Condition.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Nov. 23.—Frank James, famous as a member of the band known as "the James gang," who terrorized the southwest during a period immediately following the civil war, was stricken with heart disease and is in a critical condition at the James homestead, nine miles from this city. His condition showed improvement, physicians say.

James, who is seventy-three years old, has been living the life of a quiet farmer for more than thirty years.

East Prussians Flee Russ.

Rome, Nov. 23.—Berlin dispatches received here say that 40,000 refugees from East Prussia, panic stricken by the Russian invasion, have reached Insterburg. The inhabitants of Insterburg, the dispatches add, are preparing for flight.

Are You Suffering From Auto-Intoxication?

The dictionary says that Auto-Intoxication is "poisoning, or the state of being poisoned, from toxic substances produced within the body." This is a condition due to the stomach, bowels, kidneys, liver, or pores of the body failing to throw off the poisons. More than 50% of adults are suffering from this trouble. This is probably why you are suffering from nervousness, headaches, loss of appetite, lack of ambition, and many other symptoms produced by Auto-Intoxication. Your whole system needs stirring up.

DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY
(In Tablet or Liquid Form)

will remedy the trouble. It first aids the system to expel accumulated poisons. It acts as a tonic and finally enables the body to eliminate its own poisons without any outside aid. Obey Nature's warnings. Your dealer in medicines will supply you, or you may send 50c for a sample package of tablets by mail. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The latest edition of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser should be in every family. No reason why you should be without it when it will be sent free to you if you will remit cost of wrapping and mailing—31 one-cent stamps—to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Dutiful Son.

R. Caton Woodville in his book, "Random Recollections," gives some of his experiences in Albania.

Mr. Woodville wanted a certain man to come and cook for him on a journey. The man was doubtful whether he could leave his mother, who was very old and infirm, but he said he would try to follow Mr. Woodville in a day or so. Eventually he arrived, and Mr. Woodville asked what arrangements he had made about his mother.

"He replied," says Mr. Woodville, "that the old woman was very decrepit and that she could not last long. I knew all that, but I wanted to know what he had done for her during his absence. He went on telling me how hard it was to get a living until at last I got impatient. Then he told me quite calmly that as his mother was so old and useless he had thought it best to poison her and that he had stopped behind, as a good son should, to have her buried properly."

Mr. Woodville adds that the man was such a liar that he didn't believe he had done anything of the sort, though he was quite capable of it.

MORE STRENGTH FOR OLD PEOPLE

Mrs. Hutchison—Eighty-One Years Old—Uses No Other Tonic but Vinol and Recommends It to Friends.

Greenville, S.C.—"It is with pleasure I tell others of the great benefit I have derived from Vinol, for the past several years. I am 81 years old and I find Vinol gives me strength, a healthy appetite and overcomes nervous disorders. Vinol is the only tonic reconstructor I have used for several years. I have recommended it to a great many of my friends and it has always proved satisfactory."—Mrs. M. A. HUTCHISON, Greenville, S. C.

Such cases as the above are constantly coming to our attention. If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

It is the tissue building, curative elements of the cod's livers, aided by the blood making strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol, that makes it so successful in building up strength for old people, delicate children and for all run-down conditions. Vinol is also a most successful remedy for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis. If it fails to benefit any one who tries it we return your money.

The Thankful Heart

For all that God in mercy sends,
For health and children, home and friends;
For comforts in the time of need,
For every kindly word or deed,
For happy thoughts and holy talk,
For guidance in our daily walk,
In everything, give thanks.

For beauty in this world of ours,
For verdant grass and lovely flowers,
For songs of birds, and hum of bees,
For the refreshing summer's breeze,
For hill and plain, for stream and wood,
For the great ocean's mighty flood—
In everything give thanks.

For the sweet sleep which comes with night,
For the returning morning light,
For the bright sun which shines on high,
For the stars glittering in the sky—
For these, and everything we see,
O, Lord, we lift our hearts to thee;
In everything, give thanks!

THANKSGIVING AT THE WHITE HOUSE

"HAIL to the chief!" That particular line of the patriotic hymn certainly applies at this season to the national bird—the turkey, and not the eagle. From the sun kissed sands of the gulf to the snow clad mountain crests of Alaska, from the burning deserts of Arizona to the bleak, storm washed rocks of Maine, the turkey is king. Millions of Americans will pay him tribute. On the plain dinner table of the farmhouse, on the silver laden board of the city banker, in the cabin, in the mines and cars whirling along their tracks of steel, beneath the glow of electric lights and the sounds of music floating from behind palms or with the gleam of the tallow dip, the sovereign is the same, proudly resting in his bed of brown gravy, his portly sides cracking with deliciousness.

IN THE STATE DINING ROOM OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

Thanksgiving is a great day at the White House. The turkey intended for the president each year is a magnificent one, weighing about twenty-eight pounds. It reaches the White House a few days before the great dinner by express, already killed. When roasted it is truly a sight to make Lucullus' mouth water with envy.

The turkey is cooked in a kitchen which is a model for cleanliness and comfort. On one side of the room is an immense range, at least twelve feet in length, and above hangs a large iron hood, which carries off any odor. The tables are two in number and covered with zinc. Above them is a hanging rod full of hooks, from which depend rows of shining saucepans of all sizes. The floor is covered with linoleum in a pretty design, and the whole place is lighted by electricity. There are three cooks, but the number of "help" at the White House is sixteen, which includes the maids, laundresses and waiters.

The dishes are washed in a patent affair. By means of a dumb waiter the meals are taken right up to the butler's pantry, which adjoins the dining room and contains the presses full of china of all administrations and of every variety of beautiful design. There are historic sets which have come down from the earliest days, for nearly every president's wife has added to the collection. Of china used by Lincoln there are about 100 pieces left, the figuring and coloring being quaint and the dish bordered by a rippling design inside of which is a broad band of color.

There are about the same number of pieces left of a set which was bought and used by the Grants. Roosevelt paid the sum of $22,000 for a set of white and gold china, which numbered 8,000 pieces. One of the prettiest sets is that purchased by Mrs. Benjamin Harrison. The edge is a wide band of blue, and in the white center of the plate appears an exquisitely dainty picture of the American eagle resting on a shield.

The fish sets are all decorated with painted pictures of all kinds of specimens of the finny tribe, and the china used for game has pretty pictures of wild fowl in the air or standing among the reeds. There is even a plate which once belonged in the Confederate White House and one given to Washington by the Society of the Cincinnati. All of the silver at the White House is marked "The President's House."

Other than having a monster turkey to grace his table, the president's dinner will be about the same as that of any other well to do American.—Washington Star.

TREE OF THOUSAND GRAFTS

Originally a Crabapple, It Now Bears All Kinds of Apples.

Alpena, Mich., Nov. 23.—"The tree of a thousand grafts" has completed another season's work. It bore twenty different varieties of apples this year and Charles T. Park, in whose yard the tree makes its home, is satisfied, although he plans to make further grafts.

Originally a crabapple, the tree, now twelve years old, bears grafts of the following varieties added by Captain Park year by year: Banana, Liveland raspberry, Jonathan, Stayman's winesap, Grimes golden, Wisner dessert, senator, delicious, famous, northern spy, Tallman sweet, pound sweet, crab, Canadian red, yellow transparent, wealthy, maiden blush, King David, bellflower, Spitzenberg, York imperial, Black Ben. Not a branch of the original tree but bears its graft, and this year all but the pound sweet and Canadian red bore fruit. In the fall the tree presents a beautiful sight with its many-colored fruit.

WRECKS CAR; SAVES PEOPLE

Milwaukee Bridge Tender Prevents Plunge Into River.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 23.—John Chambers, bridge tender, wrecked a street car on the bascule bridge at West Water street to save sixty persons from death in the waters of the Menominee river. The motorman and one passenger were seriously injured and twenty others, mostly women, received minor hurts. The car ran on to the north bridge approach as the leaf was being raised. The car was only a few feet from the yawning space when Chambers dropped the south leaf, crushing the front vestibule of the car.

Chambers says the alarm bell was ringing and other signals were properly displayed.

TERROR REIGN IN MEXICO CAPITAL

City Has Been Experiencing Period of Great Turbulence.

WORST SINCE MADERO SIEGE

Looting Went Unchecked by Constitutionalist Soldiers Is Report—Foreign Resident Unable to Secure Protection—Blanco Jails 500 Rioters—Gutierrez Starts for Capital.

AGUAS CALIENTES, MEXICO — Mexico City has been in the past few days experiencing the most turbulent period of its existence, save only for the ten days' reign of terror when President Madero was besieged in the national palace. The censorship which has been applied to newspaper correspondents in the capital by the Carranza authorities has now been relaxed since General Villa's army has advanced sufficiently close to the capital to open up frequent communication.

Looting Unchecked.

Advices received from Mexico City state that the city has been in a state of terror in the past two weeks, with frequent rioting, accompanied by bloodshed, and by wholesale confiscations of portable property, looting of houses and stores and open robbery of people on the streets. The blame is laid at the doors of the constitutionalist soldiery who, knowing they were soon to leave the capital, gave up all pretense of maintaining discipline or order. Civilians, terrorized, are hiding in the houses and scores of business places remain closed, except when broken open by marauding bands. Protests by foreign diplomats against the treatment of their nationals were received with promises that adequate protection would be given, but no protection was forthcoming, it is said.

Carranza Troops Add to Terror.

Disorders reached their climax on Thursday night when Carranza troops, marching through the city to entrain for the evacuation of the capital, discharged volleys of bullets in the streets, resulting in much damage to property and the wounding of no inconsiderable number of people, reports from the capital state.

On Friday diplomatic representatives of nearly all foreign countries at present represented at the Mexican capital met at the end of a long discussion, renounced all relations with the Carranza government, appealing directly to the commander of the federal district garrison, General Lucio Blanco, to safeguard the city.

Blanco Jails 500 Rioters.

General Blanco, having previously repudiated the Carranza government and announced his allegiance to the new provisional government of Provisional President Gutierrez, replied by bringing into the city from the suburbs ten thousand cavalry, leaving the defense of the outlying districts against the Zapatists and outlaw bands to the militia. The regulars are now patroling the streets and arresting criminals, rioters and inciters of disorder. More than five hundred have been jailed within the past forty-eight hours, the advices state. While the uneasiness of the populace has by no means subsided, it has been much relieved. Business will probably remain at a standstill until after the occupation of the city by Villa's army, the vanguard of which is expected to arrive soon.

In the meantime the attacks of Zapata's western army have largely been suspended with the announcement that Mexico City would be yielded peaceably to the forces of the new provisional government.

Gutierrez Starts for Capital.

President Gutierrez, his cabinet and the members of the convention who are not with their commands, have left for Mexico City. They will make brief stops in Irapuato and Queretaro, but are expected to overtake General Villa's command before Villa himself enters the capital.

FOUR KILLED BY DYNAMITE

Laborers on Government Levee Near Burlington, Ia., Lose Lives.

BURLINGTON, IOWA.—Four laborers employed on the government levee, twenty miles north of Burlington, were killed by dynamite at noon. The men were thawing the explosive when the accident occurred. The coroner of Louisa county has been called to the scene.

De Wet's Forces Almost All Captured.

LONDON, ENG. — A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram company from Pretoria says: "It is officially announced that General De Wet's rapidly dwindling rebel commando became surrounded by loyal forces in the vicinity of Boshof on the Vaal River. General De Wet succeeded in escaping with only twenty-five men. The remainder of his force surrendered."

Kaiser's Men Leave City to Army of Czar.

TOWN PARTIALLY DEMOLISHED

Cossack Charge Wins Important Position in East Prussia—War Cost to Date 5,000,000 Men—Teutons Prepare to Attack England—Turks at Suez Canal.

A Petrograd dispatch says the battle which has been raging in contesting the German advance upon Warsaw has resulted in the forward movement being checked. The German losses are said to be enormous. At Kutno, twenty-five miles west of Lowicz, 12,000 prisoners were taken. Another terrible battle is raging between Czestochowa and Cracow.

The official French bulletin given out in Paris says that Ypres was subjected to a violent artillery fire and that many of its important buildings, including the cathedral and the markets, were consumed by the flames.

Army headquarters at Berlin gave out an official reort dated Nov. 22 which reads as follows: "In the western arena of the war the situation remains unchanged. In Poland the fighting continues and the struggle is going on to the south of Plock, in the vicinity of Lodz, and near Geenstochau."

The German steamer Sierra Cordoba has arrived here with the passengers and crew of the British steamer La Correntina and the French bark Union. Both were sunk by the converted cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm, the liner on Oct. 7 and the bark on Oct. 28. The Correntina carried a cargo of meat valued at $1,000,000 and was bound from Buenos Aires for Liverpool.

Arthur Leech, a war correspondent in northern France for the London Daily News, wires: "I have authority for stating that the war already has accounted for something like 5,000,000 of the pick of European manhood. This is not a fancy figure, but has been carefully worked out."

PETROGRAD — The Russian northern army has captured Gumbinnen in East Prussia. Meanwhile the Germans continue to advance in Poland and their cavalry patrols have penetrated to within thirty miles of Warsaw.

Heavy fighting is still in progress between Lowicz and Skierniewice, where the Russian force is opposing the main line of advance of the army of General von Hindenburg.

Reports have been received of the destruction of a German cavalry patrol ten miles in advance of the main battle line. The Germans were cut off by Cossacks, and those not killed or wounded were made prisoners.

Battle Lasts Five Days.

Although official dispatches only mention skirmishes in East Prussia, a dispatch from a correspondent with the active army reports, with circumstantial details, the Russian capture of Gumbinnen after a battle lasting five days, the Cossacks being the heroes of the most stirring incidents of the struggle, capturing the enemy's batteries by a daring charge which put the gunners to flight.

The German defenders declined to await a bayonet attack, and the Russians entered in triumph to discover the town half demolished by shell fire and abandoned by the population.

Gumbinnen, sixty-six miles east-southeast of Koenighsberg, is the capital of the government district of the same name. It is in great measure a modern town and has some fine monuments. The population is about 15,000.

Austrians in Dissension.

LONDON — "It is confirmed that serious dissensions have arisen between the Germans and the Austrians," says the Morning Post's Petrograd correspondent.

"A stormy council under the presidency of Emperor William was held at Breslau after the German flight from Poland.

"After mutual recriminations Germany demanded that Austria send every available man to the defense of East Prussia, arguing that there was no hope of saving the Austrian frontier from the advancing hosts. The Austrians, however, demanded that the Germans make a serious attempt to save Cracow."

Germans Prepare to Attack Britain.

ROTTERDAM — Preparation of a base for an attack on England is seen in reports received there to the effect that the inhabitants of Saint Nicholas, about 40,000, have been ordered to leave at once for Antwerp, where vacant houses have been placed at their disposal. Saint Nicholas is an important railway junction to the southwest of Antwerp.

The suspension of train service for two days over a wide area east of Brussels indicates a great movement of troops.

More Than Precaution.

The removal of the entire population of a town and the troop movements are taken to indicate more than a precautionary measure to cover a possible German retreat.

The Germans are making every preparation for holding and fortifying the coast. The entire coast between Zeebrugge and Knocke has been cleared of inhabitants. No civilian has been permitted to remain within two miles of Zeebrugge for several weeks.

Six submarines are said to be in dock at the head of the canal where big engineering works have been in progress for some time. Some of them are ready for immediate service. Others are being assembled.

The whole coast from Knocke to Nieuport is fortified with heavy artillery, in anticipation of possible bombardment by warships.

Turks at Suez Canal.

LONDON — Reuter's Constantinople correspondent gives the following official Turkish statement: "The Turkish troops have reached the Suez Canal. In fighting near El Kantara the English suffered heavy losses and took flight." El Kantara is a port on the right bank of the canal, about twenty-five miles south of Port Said.

U. S. WILL HAVE DIRIGIBLES

Government Makes Contract for Six War Balloons.

AKRON, OHIO. — The United States government has placed a contract with the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company of this city for the construction of six or more dirigible armored air ships, suitable for offensive or defensive work in time of war.

Plans for the construction of the first of the big air craft are complete. The air ship will be ready within six months. It will be equipped with machine guns, wireless apparatus, two powerful engines, oxygen tanks and air pumps and will have a raising capacity of 12,000 pounds. It will carry a crew of twelve men.

The bag for the craft will be 160 feet long and 40 feet in diameter.

TEETOTALISM GETS BOOST

Absintheless Army of France Gives Temperance Big Boom.

PARIS. — An argument for temperance is afforded by the physical condition of the French army.

When the war started the government banned the sale of absinthe and of most spirits. Reports from the front show that confirmed absinthe drinkers, deprived of their favorite liquor, have attained a splendid degree of fitness.

Food City Frats Told to Disband.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — Fraternities and sororities in the Battle Creek high school will have to disband at once, according to Fred Wells, president of the school board. He has the names of boys belonging to the Phi Theta Chi fraternity. He says he will prosecute the teachers as well as the pupils if the secret organizations are not suppressed.

THREE LAKE SHIPS ARE BELIEVED LOST

Twenty-six Deaths Are Toll of Great Storm.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH. — The last two days have revealed little information to clear up the mystery surrounding the fate of the steamer C. F. Curtis and the lumber-laden schooners S. E. Marvin and Annie M. Peterson, in tow of the Curtis, which were caught Thursday in the season's most severe storm on Lake Superior. That the Peterson went down in "the grave yard of the Great Lakes," near Grand Marais, seems absolutely certain in view of the bodies and wreckage which have been washed ashore.

Two of the eight bodies recovered were identified as members of the Peterson's crew. Whether some of the other bodies were from the Curtis or Marvin remained to be determined after identification had been made. Four more bodies, among them that of Capt. J. P. Jennings of the steamer Curtis, were later picked up by life savers.

The three missing vessels carried twenty-six persons in their combined crews. The fact that two of the bodies recovered were those of unidentified women caused many to believe the Curtis met the same end as the Peterson, inasmuch as it was thought one or both of the women had been employed on that vessel. The sailing records did not reveal any women hands on the two schooners.

ALPENA, MICH. — "The tree of a thousand grafts" has completed another season's work. It bore twenty different varieties of apples this year and Charles T. Park, in whose yard the tree makes its home, is satisfied, although he plans to make further grafts.

Originally a crabapple, the tree, now twelve years old, bears grafts of the following varieties added by Captain Park year by year: Banana, Liveland raspberry, Jonathan, Staymare's winesap, Grimes golden, Wisner dessert, senator, delicious, famous, northern spy, Tallman sweet, pound sweet, crab, Canadian red, yellow transparent, wealthy, maiden blush, King David, bellflower, Spitzenberg, York imperial, Black Ben. Not a branch of the original tree but bears its graft, and this year all but the pound sweet and Canadian red bore fruit. In the fall the tree presents a beautiful sight with its many-colored fruit.

LOST HUNTERS FOUND SAFE FROM BLIZZARD

Ann Arbor Missing Men Took Refuge in Dugout.

MARQUETTE, MICH. — Weakened by hunger and exposure but otherwise in good condition, George Millen, former state agent of the New York Life Insurance company, and George Huntington, former Detroit photographers, the two Ann Arbor hunters who had been lost in the woods since last Monday, were found at noon in a deserted hunting camp dugout, twenty-five miles north of Seney and nine miles north of Camp Newton, from which the men set out on the deer hunt that ended in the most elaborate man hunt ever conducted in the upper peninsula.

A runner from Grand Marais brought the news to Camp Newton. The men were found by Joe Desjardines and Matt Olli of Grand Marais, experienced woodsmen.

The runner said the two wanderers had suffered severely Monday night, when the thermometer registered near zero all over the peninsula, but that they had been able to build a fire—the only thing that saved their lives.

They had had nothing to eat for nearly three days, but had carefully used the lunches they carried when they left Camp Newton.

Tragedy of a Mining Camp

How a Girl Became Her Champion's Defender

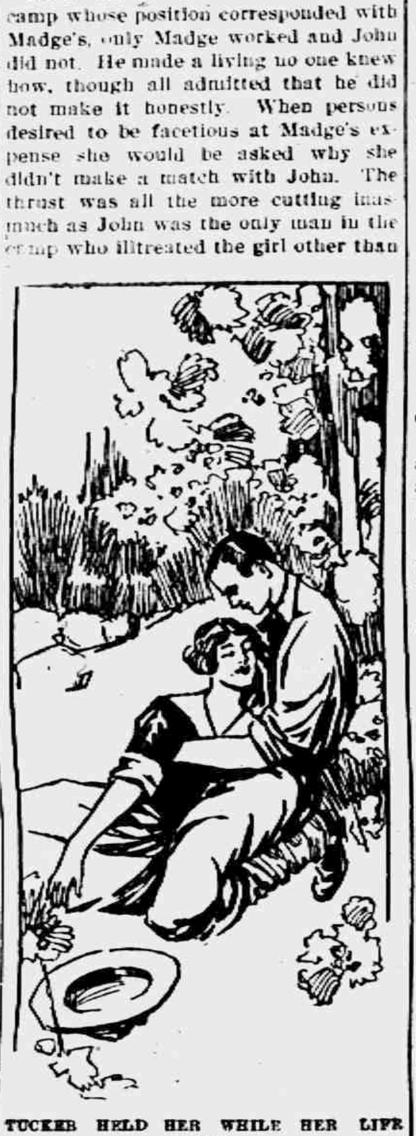
By F. A. MITCHEL

In a western miners' camp composed of a number of men and a few women the latter mostly the wives of the former was a girl about seventeen years old who belonged to no one. She was the property of the camp, not having a relative or a friend in it. Just how she happened to be there, where she had come from, what was her name, no one knew. They called her Madge, but who had given her the name was also unknown. If any one asked her about her antecedents she replied that she had grown up with the camp.

If Madge had been well dressed and clean she might have been considered comely, but since no one had seen her under these conditions it never occurred to those who saw her that she could be anything but homely. The only part of her person that was ever clean was her hands, and since this came from washing dishes they were usually greasy. She attached herself to a household to do its dirty work until the temper of her mistress rendered her position intolerable, when she would find another abiding place.

The men, who were as rough as the women, if they did not illtreat Madge, inflicted upon her their coarse jokes. When she was spoken to in a way calculated to hurt the feelings of any of her sex she would show no repugnance, no pain, though she never returned the insult in kind. If her hair was described as a mop she would neither take offense nor would she comb it.

There was a man called John in the camp whose position corresponded with Madge's, only Madge worked and John did not. He made a living no one knew how, though all admitted that he did not make it honestly. When persons desired to be facetious at Madge's expense she would be asked why she didn't make a match with John. The thrust was all the more cutting inasmuch as John was the only man in the camp who illtreated the girl other than with words. He would order her to perform menial services for him and whether she obeyed or refused, would beat her.



TUCKER HELD HER WHILE HER LIFE EBBED.

One day John ordered Madge to blacken his boots. She obeyed, and when she handed them to him he swore at her for not having taken off the dirt before putting on the polish and struck her. It happened that a young man, a graduate of a school of mines who had come out to investigate some mining property, was walking through the camp and saw the blow. He had been an athlete of promise in his college days and quite capable of handling several men such as John both for courage and physical strength. Walking up to the latter, he gave him a cuff in the face.

"Take that for striking a woman," he said.

John glared at him, but did not return the blow. Tucker, the man who had cuffed him, stood for a few moments waiting for what was to follow then, since nothing followed, said to Madge, "If he illtreats you again let me know," and walked away.

A new being entered into Madge and took possession. Inwardly the story will tell what it was; outwardly it showed itself in cleanliness. She washed the dirt off her face, combed her hair and sewed together the rents in her garments.

The mining engineer was obliged to spend some time in the camp. He was much engrossed in his work and was not a man to take an interest in anything except that pertaining to a mining camp. The next time he saw Madge, tidied up and cheaply ornamented, he failed to recognize her. For the first time in her life a sad expression came over her face, but she passed on, and Tucker passed on, ignorant that he had caused her as much pain as he had before caused her pleasure.

A few days later Tucker was stopped by Madge. He looked at her with a puzzled expression, but this time she was not frightened away. She had something to say, and she said it.

"That galoot is laying for you."

"What galoot?"

"The one y' slapped in the jaw."

"Oh, I remember! You're the girl he struck, aren't you?"

"Yes."

She looked at him earnestly, but said nothing. She wished she knew how to express her gratitude, but she did not. However, Tucker understood her expression and said:

"Don't fail to let me know if he does it again. Next time I'll give him something to make him remember that a woman is to be respected."

Madge, who could talk only by her expression, showed plainly that her warning was a matter of importance, and she was troubled that her champion showed no disposition to heed it. She tried to say something, but whether it was through an embarrassment that was new to her or her consciousness of the uncouth manner of expressing herself she gave it up and went on her way. Tucker returned to what he had been thinking about before the interruption, and the incident passed out of his mind.

But what Madge had to say to Tucker was of too much moment to be omitted simply because she did not know how to talk to a gentleman. One day when he was sitting in the little cabin which served for an office and a lodging she appeared at the door.

"Y' didn't pay no 'tention to what I tole y' t'other day. Ef y' don't you'll git shot in the back. Don't go down the road to the Jackpot mine without lookin' about you."

"Who's to do the shooting?"

"John."

"The fellow I slapped for striking you?"

"Yes."

"Now, look here, my girl. Don't you go about worrying for fear that miserable coward is going to bother me. He hasn't the pluck of a mouse."

"It don't require no pluck to shoot a man in the back."

"Well, since you seem to think the matter is serious I promise you to be on my guard."

But the promise was forgotten as soon as made. A week passed and nothing happened. Tucker was getting near the end of his professional work and expected to leave the camp in a few days. One afternoon—it was the day before his appointed leaving—he started for the Jackpot mine, which was his field of labor, for some articles he had left there and which he wished to take away with him. As he walked along his mind, now freed from his duties, fell upon Madge and her warning.

"If a man is going to consider," he mused, "the dangers that threaten him in this world he'll never have time for anything else. Only timid persons are troubled by the threats of cowards. If that fellow had had any disposition to injure me he would have shown it when I cuffed him."

He was approaching a turn in the road, and at the moment he heard the crack of some weapon very near and directly ahead of him. He ran forward to see what it meant, but before he reached the turn there came another crack. He rounded some trees and saw a woman lying in the road with a rifle beside her. Stooping over her, he saw that she was Madge. Looking about for the cause of her being there, he caught a glimpse of John running like a deer through the wood.

For a moment he hesitated between the man and the girl; but, remembering that the former would keep and the latter needed his attention, he raised her. She was drawing the last breaths of life, but she knew him. There was a look in her face of one who was dying in place of the man who would have died had she not accepted the sacrifice.

Tucker held her while her life ebbed and when it was over carried her in among the trees and laid her down till he could go for assistance.

Madge was removed to the camp. All importuned Tucker as to who had killed her. Tucker made no reply. He was satisfied that John had not seen him and looked for the murderer to remain about the camp, expecting that his deed would be a mystery. Tucker did not intend that a court or even Judge Lynch should try John. Both were liable to err. He knew the facts and would not err. This girl had warned him and, finding that he would not heed the warning, had constituted herself his defender. John had been on the road to kill him, Madge had waylaid the would be murderer, shots had been exchanged, and Madge had been the victim.

When Madge was laid away John was present in the camp, though he did not attend the burial. When all was over Tucker, unseen by the others, beckoned the murderer to follow him and started away into a wood. John paled, hesitated, then went after Tucker. When they had reached a place where they would be neither heard nor seen Tucker turned and said:

"If you are armed throw away your weapon, I am unarmed."

John did as he was directed.

"Now," added Tucker, "I am going to avenge the girl you murdered and with my muscles, unaided by knife or revolver."

Half an hour later Tucker went back to the camp, told what he knew about the murder and said that John's body would be found in the wood.

Several went and buried it. Tucker left for home.

Eye of a Submarine.

The great fault of the early submarines was that they could not see once they were below the surface of the water. The invention of the periscope altered all that and gave the modern submarine a marvelous eye by means of which it could see over the surface of the ocean, though the body of the submarine is completely below the waves. The eye of the submarine is a straight, hollow tube starting from the steering chamber of the vessel and projecting above the surface of the waves when the boat is submerged. As the periscope is only a matter of six inches in diameter and only projects some eighteen inches above the waves, it is a most difficult thing to see by an enemy. Its total length is about fifteen feet. The submarine's eye is really a combination of telescope and camera obscura. At the top is a powerful lens, and inside at intervals all the way down is a series of mirrors which carry the reflection of what is above the surface to the watcher in the submarine fifteen feet below.—Pearson's Weekly.

Beautiful Beetles.

The exquisitely beautiful gold beetles of Central America belong to the genus plusiotis, and one might easily imagine a specimen to be the work of some clever artificer in metal. The head and wing cases are brilliantly polished, with a luster as of gold itself. To sight and touch they have all the seeming of metal, and it is hard to realize that the creature is a mere insect.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Dake Raps Accident Body.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Richard L. Drake, former secretary of the Michigan industrial accident board, who was deposed for his activities in political circles, was in Grand Rapids and he took occasion to rap the Democrats for their action and disclose several alleged deficiencies in the board.

He scored the members roundly for neglect of duty and said the chairman had drawn more than $8,000 in the last two years and had worked but about one day a week. Drake admitted having worked for Chase Osborn for governor, but said he never let his political work interfere with his state duties.

Boosts Sugar Beet Price.

BAY CITY, MICH. — The West Bay City Sugar company will pay beet growers $6 per ton flat, for beets delivered at its factory or at any of its weigh stations next year, according to an announcement.

Contracts at this rate are already being written by the company. The price is an advance of $1 per ton over the price paid for beets delivered at weigh stations for the present season and 40 cents a ton over the price paid this season for wagon delivery at the company's factory

Attacks Girl With Knife.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — McKinley McGlone, eighteen became suddenly insane, attacked Miss Lulu Swan with a knife and threatened to kill the entire family at the farm home near here.

R. C. Swan and Dan McGlone, a brother of the youth, overpowered him, but he escaped before the sheriff arrived. McGlone was captured in Battle Creek.

Arrest Negro and Saginaw Girl.

HASTINGS, MICH. — Ernest M Peak, colored, and Agnes Bears, less than sixteen years old, a former inmate of the state home in Coldwater who disappeared from Saginaw Nov 7, were arrested at Peak's father's home and turned over to a Saginaw officcer. Peak, who is charged with enticing, lived near the girl's home

Quincy Cider Mill Destroyed.

QUINCY, MICH. — Fire of unknown origin destroyed the Kirby cider mill, west of this village. The loss is $25,000, covered by $17,000 insurance. The Kirby cider mill was one of the largest mills in southern Michigan and has been one of Quincy's leading industries for more than twenty years.

Saves Hillsdale Pair From Coal Gas

HILLSDALE, MICH. — When Ernest Kime, a milkman, failed to appear at the home of Charles Boone a neighbor who furnishes him with milk, Boone investigated and found Mr. and Mrs Kime unconscious from escaping coal gas. He revived them with the aid of a doctor.

Saves Life by Somersault.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Four years spent as an acrobat with a circus saved the life of George Wisen, twenty-four years old, when he fell 35 feet from the top of a building on which he was working. He turned a complete somersault, alighting on his feet.

Auto Robbers Get Clothes Stock.

VASSAR, MICH. — Robbers who traveled by automobile robbed the E. W. Ellis clothing store here of $1,000 worth of overcoats, suits, gloves and other wearing apparel. Entrance to the store was gained through a broken window during a storm.

Prominent Monroe Germans Die.

MONROE, MICH. — Two prominent pioneer German residents of this city, Gustave Stier, seventy, and Mrs Elizabeth Eipperle, eighty-two widow of Rev. John Eipperle, formerly in charge of Zion Lutheran church here, are dead

Edmonds Held for Trial.

FLINT, MICH. — Justice Halsey bound over to the circuit court for trial on a charge of manslaughter Richard Edmonds, the private detective who, two weeks ago, shot and killed Albert Beagle.

DEATH CAUSED BY ICY BATH

Alpena Man Perishes of Exposure on Misery Bay.

ALPENA, MICH. — Richard E. Morse, well known man about town, died on the shore of Misery bay, eight miles from Alpena, from exposure

After breaking through the ice, he struggled in the icy water for more than half an hour. After being taken ashore safely by Frank L. Iler, he collapsed. Mr. Iler was unable to get him into a buggy and had to leave him on the beach while Iler made a hurried trip on horseback to the city for help. When help arrived Morse was still alive, but was unable to speak and efforts to save his life failed. Morse was thirty-eight years old and was a former student of the University of Michigan

ST. JOSEPH GIRL IN ROMANCE

Miss Frances Drake Keeps Wedding Secret Nearly Six Months.

CHICAGO, ILL. — For almost six months Miss Frances Drake of St. Joseph, Mich., and Allen Burgess Carter of Benton Harbor and Chicago kept the momentous event in their lives a secret. They were married on June 4, but their friends were not notified. Mrs. J. D. Stafford of the Hyde Park hotel, 1511 East Fifty-first street, told why. "My sister felt she could not leave our parents," Mrs. Stafford says. "Father is eighty years old and mother is an invalid."

Mrs. Carter is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Drake of St. Joseph.

THE CHRISTMAS THOUGHT

Ideas on Christmas giving are rapidly changing among the sensible. Those who think as they give are looking for a year-round service as the important thing.

In a week of shopping with all its strain, you will not find a better gift than a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion. It offers its service, its clean entertainment, its fine suggestiveness week after week; and the end of the year, which finds many a gift in the attic, dust-covered and forgotten brings The Companion again. with all the charm of last Christmastide.

No American monthly at any price offers the same amount of reading, and none can offer better quality. Less than four cents a week provides this best of Christmas gifts—$2.00 a year. If you subscribe now, all the remaining issues of the year will be sent free, and The Companion Home Calendar. A copy of the Calendar is also sent to those who make a gift subscripton Send for sample copies and the Forecast for 1915.

How the Camel Got Its Hare Lip.

In "The Women of Egypt" Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper, the author, says that when she decided to ride a camel and he was brought to the door she tried to make friends with him:

"I walked around him and examined him closely. He smiled at me with his hare lip, which, if tales are true, he obtained legitimately. When Allah created the first camel he was lonely and went around moaning and groaning over his fate. It was then that the sour, dissatisfied look came to his face that is a distinguishing mark of all camels. Allah became sorry for him, seeing what a fine disposition was being ruined, so he sent a genie to tell him that a spouse was being created for him. The news delighted the lonely camel so intensely that he smiled and smiled until he split his lip, and it has remained thus ever since."

NOTICE

I will be at the Tecumseh State Savings Bank for the collection of township taxes Friday, Dec. 4, and every Tuesday and Friday thereafter except on December 25. I will be at the bank Saturday, Dec. 26, instead, until further notice.

WOULD SET THE CLOCK AHEAD

Having the railroads and interurbans change from Standard to Eastern time which would put the clocks one hour ahead in those cities which follow Standard time, is what the Detroit Board of Commerce asked of the American Railway Association at its meeting in Chicago last week.

The Detroit organization of commerce has suggested that the Grand Rapids Association of Commerce also gets into the game, but Sec'y W. K. Plumb of the association replied that opinion on time changes is divided and Grand Rapids would like to consider the matter from every phase before taking any action and would also like to see what Detroit will do if the change is made.

A change in time would mean factory employes going to work an hour earlier, theater opening an hour earlier and a general revision of the clock.

IMPORTANT MEETING OF HORTICULTURISTS

The forty-fourth annual meeting of the Michigan State Horticultural Society is to be held at Kalamazoo, Dec 1st, 2nd and 3rd. The officers of the Society have been busy for months making plans for this meeting and it is expected to be the largest and most important meeting that the Society has ever held. Fruit growers are expected from all parts of Michigan and other states and the program covers three full days with one evening session and an annual banquet. Practical talks will be given by successful fruit growers from Michigan and from New York State and a very large exhibit of horticultural products and spraying material is to be made. Every up-to-date fruit grower should be at this meeting.

The secretary-treasurer is R. A. Symthe of Benton Harbor. Complete programs are now ready and can be obtained upon application to him.

GLEANERS HOLD STATE FEDERATION MEETING

At Lansing Dec. 2nd and 3rd

Michigan Gleaners will hold their State Federation meeting at Lansing December 2 and 3 and plans are being made to make this a big meeting and full of interest to the Michigan farmer. The theoretical will be eliminated as far as possible and the practical will be emphasized in every number on the program. Live topics will be handled by "live wires" and every phase of farm life will be considered.

A fine program has been arranged. Among the speakers will be Gov. Ferris, E. R. Trumbull of the Chicago Market Division who will give an address on "Handling Farm Products on the Chicago Market." "Taking the First Step First" by Grant Slocum. "The Federal Agricultural Department and the American Farmer" by Hon. Carl Vrooman of Washington assistant secretary of agriculture "The Business End of Business" by E. J. McLean, manager Gleaner Clearing-House Association and many others.

A "Federation Banquet" will be enjoyed by the members on Thursday night. Splendid hotel and boarding house rates have been secured and all Gleaners will be provided for. A ladies section of the committee will attend to the wants of the Lady Companions, Rooms from 50c to $2, board very reasonable. All Gleaners cordially invited to attend.

WAR TAX ON PROMISSORY NOTES.

The one clause in the War Tax Law of 1914, passed by Congress last October, which will most effect our people, is the clause which reads as follows: "Promissory notes, except bank notes issued for circulation, and for each renewal of the same, for a sum not exceeding $100, 2 cents, and for each additional $100 or fractional part thereof in excess of $100, 2 cents."

The bill also provides that all persons using or affixing the same shall write or stamp thereupon the initials of his name and the date upon which the same shall be attached or used so that the same may not be again used.

If any person shall fraudulently make use of an adhesive stamp, or if any person shall make a promissory note and not affix a stamp, he or she will be guilty of a misdemeanor and in the first case shall be liable to a fine of $500 00 or be imprisoned not more than six months or both and in the second case shall be liable to a punishment of a fine of not to exceed $200 00 at the discretion of the court.

This bill goes into effect on the first day of December, 1914, and is not effective after December 31st, 1915.

These stamps may be procured at the banks on or after December 1st. The Lilley State Bank has already ordered a supply of these stamps and expect to have them here for use by the first of the month.

Shots By Turks Friendly.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Ambassador Morgenthau forwarded the explanation of the Turkish government to the effect that the shots were fired toward the Tennessee's launch to warn her against entering the mined and closed port. Administration officials are inclined to regard the emergency of the Tennessee incident as being over and to consider that the situation in Turkey reverts to its former status, that is, a situation in which the United States is interested only for the purpose of securing protection for the lives of Americans.

ONE THING YOU SHOULD KNOW

Is that Chiropractic will help you. This may seem too strong a statement to apply in a general way, but is based alone on the evidence of what Chiropractic is doing where consistently tried out.

Chronic cases are the Chiropractor's stock in trade, not because he is specially desirous of having such cases to the exclusion of the acute, but because people usually try every one and everything else before consulting the Chiropractor,

However the recovery of a chronic case at the hands of a Chiropractor is the best proof that Chiropractic is right. Such recoveries are being witnessed in many quarters over a wide range of territory every day. Chiropractic will help you when everything else fails, but it is to your interest to not wait for further experiment with methods that are known to be failures. Any so called mode of healing that does not remove the cause of illness is a failure. Chiropractic removes the cause.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready-made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it, it is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

MORE FROM THE STITTS.

Albuquerque, N. M.
November 13, 1914.

Dear Cousins:

We arrived here last night a little after dark. The first we have driven after dark but we have been in the mountains the last few days. I guess I told you about the prairie. We did not like Texas very well although we saw lovely buildings in Amarillo, Texas. They call it the City of the Plains and it surely was beautiful and we saw lots of small towns that were not so nice. We camped in the mountains two nights and it was grand. We pitched our tent, built a big fire in front of the door and ate our supper. My but you ought to see what a fire the green branches off the trees make. The trees look like the ones you get there at Xmas time. We camped one night by the side of the Canyon where Black Jack had his cave. We went way down in the Canyon and got some spring water to drink. My but it was good. They said the Canyon was one thousand feet deep you could look just as high as you could see on one side was just solid rock and the other side was covered with little evergreen trees about one, two and three feet high and we rode forty miles in the mountains yesterday and the last twenty miles, Leo could not drive slowly enough. Every few minutes he would say "Isn't this beautiful I wish the folks back home could see this" We all thought of the moving pictures we had seen where the autos were going around the mountains, anyone will have to take the trip to appreciate it. One cannot imagine the beauty and the roads were a good deal better than we expected. They were good all the way through. We have camped in some farmers' yards until we got to the mountains Four nights it was so cool, we stayed in the house and two night we stopped at hotels. We were greeted by lots of people every place we came through especially if there were and Michigan people there and the farmers that we stayed with would give us their address and want use to drop them a card or write them a letter when we get through.

This is a pretty place and I think we will stay here a few days to get cleaned up a little it has been quite dusty all the way but the roads have been good but the roads have been quite dusty all the way but they would tell us at nearly every place if we had been a week sooner we could not have gotten through and they tell us we will have good roads from here on and if we find them as good as we have we will be satisfied. Yes, we have put on two new tires. Leo ran on a tack one night when he was putting the auto in a barn. Towser is ready to go every time he hears the machine, he sticks tight to me and when I start for the auto he is in first. We are all tanned and sun burned until we look about like the Mexicans here. There are lots of them in the mountains and here.

Well everyone is in bed and asleep but me so will close I only wish you could see what we have seen, we were glad to get your letter today and will be glad when we can get another but guess that will be when we get to California.

Good-bye, with love,
Margaret.

CHARITY BALL.

As a fitting close of a beautiful day the Charity Ball, given by the King's Daughters was a great success. Witherell's hall was very prettily trimmed with Japanese lanterns and other decorations and was a scene of beauty with the ladies in their beautiful dresses, the men in their dress suits, the brilliant lights, the beautiful music and the spirit of good will that prevades the company. Music was furnished by a 3-piece orchestra from Toledo. Dainty refreshments were served by the King's Daughters during the evening. About 60 couple participated in the dance with quite a number as onlookers.

Nothing definite has been heard as to the exact amount, but it is thought that $100 was cleared which will aid the King's Daughters in their work of charity among the needy ones in Tecumseh this winter.

There were quite a number of out-of-town guests present who participated in the dancing.

Three extention tables left town yesterday preparing for Thanksgiving you know.

Splendid skating on our ponds, and the lads and lasses are improving it these beautiful evenings.

Lew Waldron is teaching school in the Wolf Creek neighborhood in the town of Adrian. The district is very fortunate in procuring so good a teacher.

Rev. Henry Shepard late of Cuba, N Y has accepted a call from the Universalist Parish of this village and will commence his pastorial duties next Sunday. Services will be held both morning and evening and regular hereafter.

Charlie Eldridge has purchased the furnace and machine shop at Dundee and takes position at once. He will manufacture plows and other agricultural implements and do general repairing. Mr. Eldridge is an energetic young man of good business capacity, and will undoubtedly succeed in his new venture.

Don't forget it, Jerome Murry will address the people on the subject of 'Temperance' at the Opera House next Sunday. Let everyone come out and give him a full house.

Mat Blosser of the Manchester enterprise made us a call the other day. Mat is just the man for the position he occupies, is as good looking as ever and is as happy as a clam at high tide. Call again.

We stepped into Ed Rowlands black smith shop yesterday morning and saw fifteen horses there being shod. Business seems to be good over in that part of the town

James B Kennedy returned last Saturday from Denver, Col, where he has been stopping for several months. The Colorado climate seems to agree with him and his health has improved very much during his stay there. He expects to remain in Tecumseh during the winter.

Charlie Tull as he was known in Tecumseh many years ago was in town last Monday. He now occupies the responsible position of Secretary for the Gen. Supt. of the New Jersey Central Railroad. He is taking a few weeks respite from labor and is on the way to California and Oregon.

The Atmosphere and Beyond.

At what altitude above the earth would the atmosphere become too thin to breathe or to support life? What is beyond the atmosphere? asks a correspondent of the Indianapolis News, which replies:

"The height of the atmosphere has been variously estimated at from forty-five to a hundred miles, but with constantly increasing thinness. The comparatively short duration of twilight, which depends upon the atmospheric reflection of the light of the sun from below the horizon, shows that the atmosphere extends only a limited distance above the earth, and the difficulty of mountain climbers and aeronauts in breathing increases quite rapidly as one rises above sea level. The exact height at which the atmosphere would cease to support life cannot be stated, but, judging from the effects experienced by air explorers, it is not many miles from the earth. As to what exists beyond the atmosphere science offers no solution beyond the vague terms space and ether."

When Matches Were Introduced.

The Atlas, a London newspaper, published on Jan 10, 1830, the following paragraph under the head of "Instantaneous Light:" "Among the different methods invented for obtaining light instantaneously ought certainly to be recorded that of Mr. Walker, chemist, Stockton-on-Tees. He supplies the purchaser with prepared matches, which are put into boxes, but are not liable to change in the atmosphere, and also with a piece of fine glass paper folded in two. Even a strong blow will not inflame the matches, because of the softness of the wood underneath, or does rubbing upon wood or any common substance produce any effect except that of spoiling the match. But when one is pinched between the folds of the glass paper and suddenly drawn out it is instantly inflamed. Mr. Walker does not make them for extensive sale, but only to supply the small demand in his own neighborhood."

About Words.

Fairy was once a beautiful woman.

Refer once meant only to carry back.

Confer was originally simply to carry with.

Jade originally signified any rude person without regard to sex.

Craven was at first a man who had craved or begged his life of an enemy.

Voyage was formerly any journey, whether by sea or land it did not matter.

Farewell originally signified "may you fare or travel well or in safety."

Primrose was at first the prime rose, or the first rose that opened in spring.

Polite at first meant polished and was applied to any smooth shining surface.

The word ascertain formerly meant nothing more than to make certain of a fact.

The word idea formerly meant a completed performance, whether mental or physical.

Old Wall Paper.

In many houses there are often left odd lengths of wall paper, and these should be carefully preserved. Damage may be done when moving in, or later, a chair may get pushed roughly against a wall, and there is a bad tear. Get a piece of the paper, scallop the edges quite roughly and paste it over the place. The mend will be unnoticeable. But if the house is not new and the paper has faded the contrast is startling. In that case put a piece of the spare wall paper out of doors in the sun for two or three days. Dampen it occasionally. All that is needed is exposure.—Exchange.

And This Is Glory!

Stevenson's Cup of Misery.

R. L. Stevenson, writing in 1893 to George Meredith, in an epistle quoted in his "Letters," says, with heart touching pathos:

"For fourteen years I have not had a day's real health. I have wakened sick and gone to bed weary, and I have done my work unflinchingly. I have written in bed and written out of it, written in hemorrhages, written in sickness, written torn by coughing, written when my head swam for weakness, and for so long, it seems to me, I have won my wager and recovered my glove. I am better now—have been, rightly speaking, since first I came to the Pacific—and still few are the days when I am not in some physical distress. And the battle goes on—ill or well is a trifle so that it goes. I was made for a contest, and the powers have so willed that my battlefield should be this dingy, inglorious one of the bed and the physic bottle. At least I have not failed, but I would have preferred a place of trumpetings and the open air over my head."

Tennyson's Uniform.

The late Sir Arthur Sullivan used to relate this reminiscence of Tennyson.

"The first time Tennyson came to dine at our house," said Sir Arthur, "the door was opened to him by a parlor maid who had been with us many years and was like one of the family. She was fairly staggered by the appearance of the visitor, who always wore a deep, broad brimmed black felt hat and black cape, which made him look exactly like a conspirator in an Italian play. When the guests had departed the maid said to me:

"'Was that really the great poet, Master Arthur? Well, he do wear clothes!'

"'Of course,' I replied with subtle irony, 'all poets do. Besides, you forget that he is a poet laureate.'

"She hadn't forgotten it, for she had never known it. After a slight pause she said thoughtfully:

"'What a queer uniform!'"

A Brave Man Needed.

"I don't know what we're going to do for dinner, Jack. I asked cook to kill one of the chickens and she said she simply couldn't."

"Well, I'd rather starve than do it myself, but we might call in our next door neighbor. He belongs to the National guard."—Harper's Weekly.

Debts.

"Debt is a terrible thing. Nothing annoys me more than debts."

"I didn't know you owed anything."

"I don't; I refer to what other people owe me."—Boston Transcript.

The Usual Way.

"Do you keep servants?"

"No. We are like all other housekeepers in that respect. We hire servants, but do not succeed in keeping them."—Houston Post.

He Died Happy.

Our Canadian Boundary Line.

The country which can boast not a scientific frontier merely, but a natural one, has a huge advantage in time of war. The sea takes the first place in the category of natural boundaries; a big mountain range comes second and a big river third.

An object lesson in the value of all three is presented by India. Why is India the jewel of Asia? Because it is contained in a casket, the base of which is the ocean, the lid of which is the biggest range in the world and the key of which is the river Indus.

It is the most remarkable fact in the history of mankind that betwixt the vast dominion of Canada and her neighbor, the mighty United States of America, the dividing line is merely imaginary.

There is not a fort or redoubt or gun or military station along all that 4,000 miles of frontier. That is the true peace spirit. That is an object lesson to the world—two great nations dwelling side by side under separate flags and different laws and yet not in fear and dread of each other.—London Answers.

First Carrier Pigeons.

The Turks appear to have been the first nation to organize carrier pigeon service on any extensive scale. William Lithgow, who resided in the Levant from 1609 to 1620, tells us that the pigeon post of the caliphs conveyed messages from Aleppo to Bagdad, a thirty days' journey, in forty-eight hours. The whole kingdom was equipped with a pigeon post, and news sent by half a dozen birds or more—so that some might escape the hawks—was quickly transmitted from one end of it to the other. Philological evidence, backed by the opinion of the earliest writers on pigeons, goes to show that the carrier pigeon comes of Turkish stock. The old Turkish name for this bird is "bagadin," the French "bagadais" and the Dutch "bagadat," while the English used to call it "mawmet," evidently a corruption of Mahomet.—London Chronicle.

Rock Cannon of Malta.

It is a curious fact that when the island of Malta was in possession of the Templars those doughty knights defended their forts by means of cannon cut into the solid rock. Each of these strange engines of war was capable of containing an entire barrel of gunpowder and, it is said, could throw 10,000 pounds of projectiles. Inasmuch, however, as these natural cannon could not be aimed, fifty were cut out of the rock guarding the various channels of approach, and the vessels of that time were therefore unable to come within their own range before being annihilated by the big weapons of defense. Although the fame of these cannon was spread far and wide, they were not duplicated elsewhere and to this day they remain the only rock cannon of which there exists any record.

Largest and Smallest Books.

In the great library of the British museum is to be seen the largest book in the world. This is an atlas of beautifully engraved ancient Dutch maps, bound in leather and fastened with clasps of solid silver. It is nearly seven feet high, weighs 800 pounds and was presented to King Charles II. before leaving Holland in the year 1660.

Side by side with it is the smallest book in the world—a microscopic gem of bookmaking, scarcely larger than a man's thumb nail. This contains the New Testament, inscribed by a German artist of Nuremberg in the early part of the seventeenth century. There are 208 pages, and the lettering is so perfect that it can be read without difficulty. The book measures three-quarters of an inch by two-fifths.—London Opinion.

The Prolix Witness.

A little over twenty years ago a judge in New Zealand was obliged to issue an order to the effect that "in future singing would not be taken as evidence" in his court. It was the constant habit of the Maoris when pleading a cause to sing long and quite poetic sagas. As these generally began with legends of their remote ancestors, sometimes many hours, even days, would be spent before the point, possibly trivial, was reached. There is something Gilbertian in this idea, but any old New Zealander could vouch for the facts.

MORE STRENGTH FOR OLD PEOPLE

Mrs. Hutchison—Eighty-One Years Old—Uses No Other Tonic but Vinol and Recommends It to Friends.

Greenville, S.C.—"It is with pleasure I tell others of the great benefit I have derived from Vinol, for the past several years. I am 81 years old and I find Vinol gives me strength, a healthy appetite and overcomes nervous disorders. Vinol is the only tonic reconstructor I have used for several years. I have recommended it to a great many of my friends and it has always proved satisfactory." — Mrs. M. A. HUTCHISON, Greenville, S. C.

Such cases as the above are constantly coming to our attention. If people in this vicinity only realized how Vinol invigorates old people we would not be able to supply the demand.

It is the tissue building, curative elements of the cod's livers, aided by the blood making strengthening properties of tonic iron contained in Vinol, that makes it so successful in building up strength for old people, delicate children and for all run-down conditions. Vinol is also a most successful remedy for chronic coughs, colds and bronchitis. If it fails to benefit any one who tries it we return your money.

HER FORLORN HOPE

And How It Became Realized

By JOANNA SINGLE

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

John Clayton rose and followed her from the twilight of the porch to the garish, unkempt boarding house hall, where at the stair's foot she turned and faced him like some little wood creature forced to self defense. Her dark eyes glowed wide and live as a child's in her gentle fading face as she resented his tormenting talk.

"I want to believe in things. I'd rather believe anything, as you say I do, than nothing, like you. What do you get out of life? All sweetness has not died out of the world because you have seen people trying to cheat insurance companies for twenty-five years. You're getting—sardonic."

Mary Shaw challenged her own forlorn hope rather than his cynicism. As she ran past him upstairs he called after her propitiatingly, "You won't forget our outing tomorrow?"

He was answered by the sound of a closing door. His keen, young-old face softened whimsically as he sauntered out into the summer evening and sought a stationer's shop near by. He wished he could make himself let Miss Shaw live in peace.

When later he knocked at her door with some papers and magazines she opened it a crack and thrust out a rounded forearm for his offering.

"Something to read." It was his usual formula, but humbly said.

"Thank you," she returned through a mouthful of pins and slipped the door shut again.

Humor tugged youthfully at the corners of her unwilling mouth as she began reading one of the man's magazines and saw the usual red penciling.

She always forgave him and usually ignored his underlinings, but tonight she examined them. Might they really have a message for her? She wished to understand him. Could she? She found this:

"Scratch a cynic and find a sentimentalist."

Could he be that? Was the starved look in his keen face because the best thing in life had seemed to fail him? Did his cynicism merely hide a hurt?

Sunday morning dawned hot and still, and at the last breakfast call Mary Shaw dressed for the proposed boarding house picnic and went downstairs.

Presently she sat slim and straight in her thin gray dress and wide hat while they all gathered on the porch, a motley group of derelicts drifted under one roof and mothered by Mrs. Queries, the landlady, like an elderly adoptive hen.

The sardonic man was packing frying pans and fishing tackle, consulting time schedules, marshaling forces with the expeditious ease of a commissary department. She had not seen him like this. Meantime he ignored her as though she were not and never had been.

He led this conglomeration to the car line as Miss Seymour, in hot black silk, rustled past them to church.

They rode an hour, walked a half hour through suburban streets and then went over fences and fields to the haven of a little lake set like a blue jewel in green, grassy spaces, tree bordered, whose ways were those of quietness and its paths peace. Mary Shaw was straightway a child again, but a queer loneliness smote her at John Clayton's inattention. He was very busy.

These people, used to artificial amusements, like squirrels freed from their little cages, wandered about, unable to amuse themselves—dull, pitifully unjoyous in the glad greenness, not in tune with the great out of doors.

He saw he would have to fuse the stragglers into oneness.

John Clayton gave a shout at them.

"Here, you all! Who's going to catch some fish? Who'll make a fire? Doyle, why don't you try a canoe? Wake up!"

He got them all to work, all at play. They began to enjoy themselves. And then out near the middle of the little lake Doyle and the little stenographer upset themselves, and a yell went up for help. One of the clerks began taking off his shoes, but John Clayton dashed into the bushes and in a moment was out in bathing trunks, first wading, then swimming, toward the two.

It was small work to drag them in, sputtering and ridiculous, to be dried out by their now hilarious friends.

When John Clayton again emerged from the thicket, clad and happy, he went straight to where she stood wringing out a wet skirt. His eyes were very kindly.

"It won't be so bad now. They have waked up. Is it very dull for you?"

The utter sincerity of his tone made her meet his grave glance. Then she looked away, smoothing her wind blown brown hair to hide her confusion.

"Your hair is beautiful with the sun in it like that," he said and strode away to make coffee over the campfire.

The rest of the day she basked in this new knowledge of the sardonic man.

The day passed swiftly, and the drifting crowd became a sort of happy family with its coffee brewing and fish frying, its dishwashing and joking. Mary Shaw found herself keeping near John Clayton and was tremulously content, listening to his voice while he talked, but hardly knowing what he said. And the afternoon waned.

When evening fell and a big summer moon sailed up a cool breeze blew from the lake, and a fire was made. John Clayton told stories of his boyhood while all watched the flames, and Mary Shaw sat on the ground beside him feeling like a cave woman.

At last there was a wild scramble to get things together for the last city car, for all had been oblivious to time. It was a rather disorderly retreat, and they had trailed through woods and fields to nearly the last fence when John Clayton stopped, speaking to Mary Shaw beside him.

"I'm sure that fire isn't clean out. It might start a blaze. I must run back. I may be able even then to make the car. You had better go with the rest."

He was off through the trees at a dog trot.

Mary Shaw looked ahead at her companions. They were all in pairs.

Then, without hesitation, she turned and ran with all her might back after John Clayton.

At last she came up behind him, her slim figure like a shadow in his path. He looked back over his shoulder.

"I'll—go back—too, if you—don't mind," she panted.

"All right," he replied, not pausing, while she trudged at his heels, again the cave woman, but not content, for humiliation and fear infolded her. Didn't he want her with him, or was he only in a hurry?

Her dignity asserted itself and filled her with self contempt. There in the dim woods the tragedy of the lone woman smote her. Plainly he did not want her. She should have stayed with the others.

He stamped out the last furtive sparks of the campfire while she stood by silent, outlined with silver by the moonlight sifting through the trees. He seemed trivially painstaking for so remote a danger. Then he strode over to her, not stopping a moment, and took her arm.

"Come—we may make it even yet. I haven't heard the whistle."

He led her rapidly along until they reached the path, when she fell again behind him, following blindly. She knew now how much she cared, and the humbled realization numbed all other feeling.

Finally he helped her over a rough field, and they reached the last fence just as the car clanged inexorably past. They stopped to breathe, and he muttered an impatient word between his teeth.

"I hoped to get you here—in time," he said steadily.

He stood thinking a moment, then laughed a little.

"We'll do the best we can. If you can walk another half mile I can reach a telephone for a carriage or taxi, if they'll come out to these wilds! Don't worry; I'll get you home." Then he suddenly jerked her almost from her feet, close against him, as with a deep, jarring whir a huge motorcar purred past them at a speed indecent and unlawful. The sardonic man gave a sudden clear shout, but the driver had not heard him.

"They might have taken us in," he was saying when they heard a report like a pistol shot.

"Blowout," he commented. "They'll have to wait for us now, and I'll induce them to take us to town. Were you frightened?"

She had not spoken, and he stooped down quickly and looked into her face, putting a steadying arm across her shoulders. Tears were rolling down her cheeks in spite of herself.

"Why," he said, "what is it?" And in the wood shadowed road, with the moonlight sifting over them, the sardonic man took the lonely little figure into his lonely arms.

"Oh," he went on, "nothing matters if you care for me as I have cared for you this long time! I didn't mean to tell you here, but can't you see that I was bound to speak some day? You must forgive me—I can't help loving you any more than I can help teasing you! Do you care? Do you?"

A sweetness utterly new swept her soul. She put up both her hands and touched his face as if to be sure that he was real. Somehow Mary Shaw had ceased to worry.

Duty First.

The carelessness of danger which characterizes certain soldiers does not always extend to the persons about them. The French marshal Bugeaud was once dictating very near a battlefield a letter to his secretary.

As the general spoke the words of his letter a bomb from the enemy's camp fell just in front of the door of the tent. The general went on talking, but the secretary seized his paper and half rose from his seat.

"Why are you stopping?" asked the marshal.

"The bomb!" gasped the secretary.

"Have I said anything about a bomb?"

"No—but—the bomb—the bomb!"

"Now, what," said the marshal impatiently, "has the bomb got to do with the letter I am dictating to you? Go on with your writing."

He resumed his dictation.

First Reaping Machine.

In Farm and Fireside appears an article about Cyrus H. McCormick—the man who made the first successful reaper. He built it as a boy without his father's knowing it and tried it out one fall. It was not entirely a success, but he made some changes and tried it again. Finally, in 1831, he made his first successful reaper. He kept on making improvements and in 1834 had a machine good enough to patent. He offered them for sale for $30 apiece, but no one would buy. Finally, in 1839, he invited a lot of farmers to see it work. It cut two acres an hour. That was really wonderful in those days, but still no one would buy it. The next year, 1840, a man at Egypt, Va., bought the first machine and paid $30 for it. It worked, and faith in the new invention began to spread.

Quaint Tribute.

The cultivated people have no corner on fine sentiment or its expression. The other day I sat on a log with a big, rough, illiterate backwoodsman. He told me about his wife—what a good woman she is and how much her life has meant to him. Finally it was up to me to say something, so I observed:

"She does look like a good woman."

"Yes, sir, Mr. West, a prettier hearted woman never occurred."—Woman's Home Companion.

$525,000 AWARD SET ASIDE

Arbitrator Overruled in Chicago and Western Indiana Case.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 30.—The award of $525,000 made in favor of the Chicago and Western Indiana railroad and against John C. Fetzer by E. C. Field, as arbitrator, four years ago was set aside in the superior court by Judge Sullivan here.

The arbitrator held that Fetzer had not accounted for sums handled by him as an agent of the railroad in the purchase of real estate and in other ways. The award was set aside because the court found that Field had expressed an opinion in the case before he was selected as arbitrator, because of the acceptance of evidence unknown to the defendant, and because Judge Field acted on the assumption that $275,000 had been paid for certain property by Fetzer when the arbitrator had before him evidence that the amount paid was $160,000.

Bob Fitzsimmons Hurt Teaching Son Shift That Beat Corbett.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 30.—Bob Fitzsimmons, former heavy weight champion of the world, was under the care of physicians here as a result of an injury suffered while attempting to teach his son, Robert Jr., a foot shift which aided him in winning the title from James J. Corbett.

The veteran boxer, in making the shift, fell and injured his right leg. He paid little attention to the injury and three days ago an infection developed.

When Boys Were Taught to Smoke.

The habit of juvenile smoking in England in the seventeenth century was practically universal. Jorevin de Rochefort, a French traveler of that period, in an account published in 1671 gives a description of an evening he spent at Worcester. He was catechized by one of the townsmen as to the habits of the French people.

"While we were walking about the town," he writes, "he asked me if it was the custom in France, as in England, that when the children went to school they carried in their satchels with their books a pipe of tobacco which their mother took care to fill early in the morning, it serving them instead of breakfast and that at the accustomed hour every one laid aside his book to light his pipe, the master smoking with them and teaching them how to hold their pipes and draw in their tobacco, thus accustoming them to it from their youth, believing it absolutely necessary for a man's health."—St. James' Gazette.

ESCAPED CONVICT REFORMS

Albert Dawson Barrett Weds and Becomes Valued Citizen of Michigan.

Detroit, Nov. 30.—Albert Dawson Barrett, who escaped from the White Cloud, Minn., reformatory a year ago, came to Detroit, reformed, married and developed into a valued citizen of the state, will not be forced to return to Minnesota to complete his prison sentence, at least until after Jan. 15.

At the request of both state and defense Judge Connolly adjourned the habeas corpus proceedings against him until the middle of January. On Jan. 11 the Minnesota board of pardons will meet to consider Barrett's case, and it is generally believed here that as a result of influences from prominent persons in both states he will be given a parole.

AUTOS FROM COAST TO COAST

Local Consuls Make Simultaneous Trips on All Stretches of Route.

Detroit, Nov. 30.—Telegrams were received at the Lincoln Highway association headquarters here stating that every foot of the new 3,400 mile transcontinental road was covered by automobiles Saturday between 6 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clock in the evening.

The Lincoln highway consul at each important point drove to the next point west and return. The record breaking run was promoted by Lincoln highway officials to verify the announcement that the coast to coast route is now ready for automobile traffic.

FLIRTATIOUS WOMEN PROVE DRY SLEUTHS

"Bring a Friend and Two Cold Bottles" Locates "Tiger."

Owosso, Mich., Nov. 30.—If you should visit Owosso and happen to meet a couple of bright, pretty, young girls not averse to flirtation, if you should speak to them, or if they spoke to you and a "date" is fixed up, don't keep the engagement. It may mean looking through a set of prison bars from the inside. The above tip comes from an Owosso young man who failed to heed his own advice and is expecting to hear "you're wanted" and to feel the hand of a policeman on his shoulders almost any time. For the girls, it is declared, are private detectives who are here sleuthing to stop local option law violators.

The girls, it is said, have been in town about two weeks, posing as book agents. They spend most of their time on the streets or in business places. They are well dressed and have money in plenty. Flirtatious young men who made advances were met half way, and the making of dates followed.

As arrangements for the future meeting were completed one of the strangers was sure to say casually "don't forget to bring along a couple of cold bottles." The beer, or in some cases, liquor, was always produced. The girls proved tactful, but persistently inquisitive, soon learning the names and addresses of their guests.

Very shortly afterward, the date fizzled out and the men found themselves skillfully "shaken." It is intimated that the blow-off will soon come with numerous arrests, as the information has been turned over to the authorities.

IS HELD FOR DEATH OF WIFE

John Pritchard of Murphysboro Must Face Grand Jury.

Murphysboro, Ill., Nov. 30.—John S. Pritchard is held for grand jury action on the recommendation of a coroner's jury that completed an investigation of the death of his wife, Mrs Eliza Pritchard, whose body was found weighted down in the Big Muddy river near here two weeks ago. Pritchard is in the local county jail.

The verdict of the coroner's jury was that Mrs. Pritchard met death by strangulation, smothering, drowning or criminal operation. The body was twice exhumed before finally identified.

URUGUAY SCENTS BIG SEA BATTLE

Cruiser Sent to Prevent Fight in Her Jurisdiction.

CANADA GUARDS AGAINST RAID

M. Pinchon, Former Foreign Minister of France, Urges Japanese Participation in European Campaign—Belgium Auto Manufacturer Predicts Early German Evacuation.

Buenos Ayres, Nov. 30.—It is reported from Montevideo that a British squadron, composed of ten vessels, has been sighted off Cape Polonior steaming west southward. It is understood that other British vessels are concentrating near the entrance to Magellan.

The government has sent a cruiser with orders to prevent a battle within Uruguayan waters.

The whereabouts of the German squadron is not known.

Would Have Japan Enter Europe.

Paris, Nov. 30.—M. Pichon, former foreign minister, in an editorial in the Petit Journal, returns to his advocacy of Japanese participation in the European campaign. He says:

"The moment of decisive actions approaches. The allies must employ all their forces to chase the Germans from France and Belgium and rid the world of the barbarians who menace civilization. Japan is officially an ally of England, has agreements with France and Russia and is at war with Germany."

M. Pichon demands that the chancellories of the allies lose no time in arranging means by which Japan may aid the allies.

Canadian Guards Against Raid.

Ottawa, Ontario, Nov. 30.—While a high Canadian official declares that the probability of a German invasion of Canada is neither feared nor anticipated, it became known that the Dominion government is exercising the greatest precaution against any possible raid on the part of German sympathizers across the Niagara river. Thirty militiamen are on duty constantly at Fort Erie, directly opposite Buffalo, and the whole river front from there to Niagara Falls and Queenstown is patrolled night and day by about 600 members of the newly formed home guard.

The views of William Howard Taft that this country could not invoke the Monroe doctrine to prevent Germany attacking Canada has not caused any comment on the part of the Canadian papers.

It is explained that the river patrol is to prevent the possibility of another raid similar to that of the Fenian raid. The patrol was strengthened after Major General Hughes, minister of militia and defense, had made a visit to the territory.

Predicts Early German Withdrawal.

New York, Nov. 30.—Assertion that the Germans would be out of Belgium within six months was made by Antoine Van Den Plass of Brussels, whose automobile factory in the Belgian capital was seized by the kaiser's troops and is now being used to manufacture trucks for the invading army. Mr. Van Den Plass was one of the fifty-nine passengers arriving here on board the Minnehaha of the American transport line from London.

Mr. Van Den Plass employed 800 men in his automobile factory until Sept. 24, when he stepped out of it for the last time, hastening from the beleaguered city as the German troops entered. In a broken down old carriage, drawn by two decrepit horses, he, with his wife and son George and five pieces of baggage, drove from Brussels to Lierre on the Holland frontier. He said that of the 5,000 houses of Lierre only twenty-five remained intact. From Holland he made his way to London.

Mr. Van Den Plass expects to remain in New York eighteen months. He based his prediction about the Germans remaining in Belgium only six months on the fact that there is nothing for the invaders to live on in the despirited little kingdom excepting three cities—Brussels, Antwerp and Bruges. He declared that the Germans always loot Belgian houses of wine, after which the atrocities begin.

Filling War Orders.

SECOND KILLING MAY REVEAL RAFF SLAYER

Gang Slays Supposed Weak-kneed Accomplice.

New York, Nov. 30.—Through the murder of William Doyle, known to his associates as "Little Patsy," who came to his death while in a saloon at the northeast corner of Eighth avenue and Forty-first street, detectives believe they will soon be able to find a clew that will lead to the arrest of the murderer of Barnett Baff, wealthy poultry dealer, who was slain while on his way home from West Washington market several days ago.

"Little Patsey," a familiar figure in the neighborhood, was suspected by bandsmen of being faint of heart, the police say. Fearing that in his weakness, owing to the determined efforts of the detectives to run down the murderer of Baff, Doyle might betray his companions, the police say that the bandmen determined to forestall any revelations that he might make by killing him.

The police working on the Baff murder case are bending their energies to clews centering around the automobile in which the poultry dealer's assassins escaped. Two men who had information in the Rosenthal murder case have been in conference with Walter R. Deuel, assistant district attorney. What they disclosed is held in secrecy by the prosecutor's office. One of the men is known as a "squealer," and he figured prominently in the case against Lieutenant Charles Becker. The movements of the two men in the criminal courts building and while on their way to and from the district attorney's office were guarded carefully.

In searching out other clews one detective was sent to Philadelphia.

Fail to Testify.

Saginaw, Mich., Nov. 30.—So dazed that his mind has not returned enough to talk coherently, Emil Hilte, who drove the auto in which two boys were killed when his machine hit a Michigan Central train, was unable to appear at the coroner's inquest. William McKellar, who was in the car, is also a nervous wreck and couldn't testify.

NEW RICHMOND IN MEXICO FIELD

General Gonzales Proclaims Himself Provisional President.

CAN CAUSE MUCH MISCHIEF

General Villa Dickers With Zapata—Northern ExBandit Says He Is Willing Southern Prototype's Forces Shall Control Mexico City If They Will Keep Order.

Washington, Nov. 30.—A new aspirant for presidential honors in Mexico is added to the list with the receipt of advices here that General Pablo Gonzales, one of Carranza's divisional chiefs, has proclaimed himself provisional president of Mexico and has named a cabinet.

This report received officially here comes from Queretaro where General Gutierrez, the Aguas Calientes convention's choice for president, has established himself. According to this information General Gonzales is at Pachuca with his forces, said to number about 8,000 men. Pachuca is north of Mexico City about fifty miles distant.

He Can Upset Plans.

Gonzales recently withdrew from Queretaro in the face of the advance of Villa and his troops and his whereabouts have for some time been more or less of a mystery. The mystery is now solved, it is believed, with the announcement that he has proclaimed himself provisional president. While it is doubted if he will attempt to take Mexico City at present it is admitted that General Gonzales with his present force can make himself a most disturbing factor in the situation and perhaps frustrate all the plans of either Villa, Zapata or Carranza so long as he holds his present strong position.

Villa Says Zapata Must Behave.

According to other state department advices negotiations are under way between the convention leaders and Zapata for a joint entry into Mexico City. Villa is reported to have declared that he is fully prepared to cooperate with Zapata and will not seek to take away from his forces the control of Mexico City as long as the Zapata forces preserve good order and prevent executions of civilians and looting of property in the city. Should the Zapatistas fail to preserve good order in Mexico City, however, he is declared as having said, that he would not hesitate to advance on the capital with all his available forces and take it away from them.

Carranza Threatens Tampico.

Further trouble is threatened at Tampico, according to advices received here, and it is expected that a repetition of the conditions existing when Huerta held the city against the attacks of constitutionalists is about to ensue. General Caballero, supposed to be holding Tampico under General Pablo Gonzales, has informed General Gutierrez of his adherence to the convention, thus indicating that Tampico merely awaited the arrival of the convention forces to take possession of it.

Carranza, on the other hand, is attempting to gain control of Tampico and, according to authoritative advices from Vera Cruz, is sending 2,000 troops from there to Tampico to take the city.

GERMAN POSITIONS TAKEN, SAYS PARIS

Official Statement Claims Several New Successes.

Paris, Nov. 30.—The afternoon's war office statement says:

"On Nov. 29 (Sunday) the enemy's cannonading was more active but carried on chiefly with seventy-seven millimetre pieces; his heavy artillery has made itself felt very little. Under these conditions the artillery struggle has turned particularly to our advantage.

"In Belgium our infantry captured several supporting positions to the north and to the south of Ypres. In the country to the north of Arras one of the enemy's attacks, undertaken by nearly three regiments, has definitely failed after several counter attacks carried out in all directions.

"Between the Somme and Chaulnes we have made perceptible progress. In the neighborhood of the village of Fay our troops came into immediate contact with the wire entanglements of the defense.

"In the region of the Aisne between Vailly and Berry-Au-Bac a group of machine guns and a foundation for thirty centimetre pieces were destroyed by our shells, one of which caused an explosion in one of the enemy's batteries.

"In the Vosges three counter attacks undertaken by the Germans for the purpose of recapturing ground previously taken by us in the Ban-De-Sapt region were successively repulsed."

REPULSE COUNTER ATTACKS

Berlin's War Statement Reads Like One Issued From Paris.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—(Via London.)—The following official report was given out at army headquarters

"This afternoon there is nothing to report from the western army. Yesterday the attacks of the enemy in the region to the southeast of Ypres and to the west of Lens failed. In the east the situation on the right bank of the Vistula remains unchanged. Russian advances in the neighborhood of Lodz were checked and were followed by successful counter attacks by our troops. There is nothing of importance to report in regard to southern Poland."

MRS. SIEGEL GETS DIVORCE

Department Store Head's Wife Names Three Women.

New York, Nov. 30.—Following three brief and secret hearings Supreme Court Referee Maurice Deiches secretly filed his report in the county clerk's office recommending that a decree of absolute divorce be granted Mrs Marie Vaughn Siegel from Henry Siegel, the convicted department store head and banker. While Siegel was in court up state his counsel, Lemuel E. Quigg, was present at the referee's hearing here and contested every step of the divorce proceedings.

Mrs. Siegel named three co-respondents—a Mrs. Smith, a Mrs. Eddy and an unidentified woman; but it could not be learned today which one of the three figured in the hearings.

Wet Weather

A Detective Story

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Where the darkness was most dense waited Murphy of the Harrison street station, his hands deep in his pockets, his head bent forward.

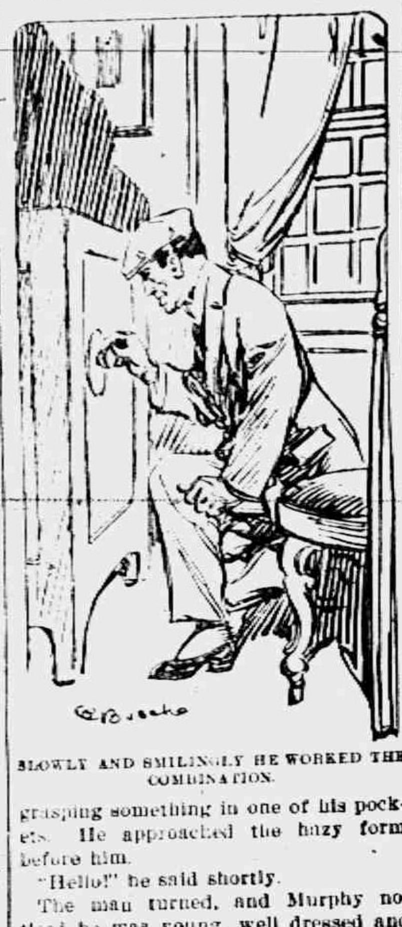
He had been waiting a long time, starting now and then at the sound of a step on the quiet side street, slinking farther back into the shadows at the rumbling approach of the straggling cars, waiting and scowling.

There was something about Murphy which indicated that he was obeying orders against his will and his better judgment. "Tips" come often to police headquarters.

But, just the same, Murphy waited. Suddenly his position changed. His hands came out of the pockets and swung aimlessly for a second at his sides before they gripped. He leaned forward and listened.

It came again—a whistle, low, yet sharp. Murphy's lips puckered, and, note for note, they answered the signal. A wait. It came again.

Murphy stepped forward, crossed the street, his head lowered, his hand grasping something in one of his pockets. He approached the hazy form before him.



SLOWLY AND SMILINGLY HE WORKED THE COMBINATION.

"Hello!" he said shortly.

The man turned, and Murphy noticed he was young, well dressed and apparently surprised at his voice.

"Hello!" came the reply.

"Waiting for somebody?" Murphy's head still was craned forward the least bit.

He was searching the face which showed dimly before him in a vain attempt to recognize some feature of the "mug room." He walked a step closer.

"Waiting for somebody?" he questioned again. The man laughed.

"Yes. Why?"

"Thought so. You'll find him at headquarters—in the captain's office."

He put forth a hand. The young man drew back just a trifle.

"I—I don't quite understand," he answered.

"You'll understand after awhile, then. Murphy's my name, from headquarters."

"A detective?"

"Yes."

"But what's that got to do with me? I'm not wanted for anything—unless waiting for a friend is something." Murphy noticed there was a boyish something about the face when the man before him smiled. "Clark's my name. I've just been to a party over on Kalamath and was coming home. There were two of us, you know—two couples—and we just decided that when we had taken the girls home we'd meet here and go over to my house for the night. The folks are all away. But"—he laughed the least bit—"I spent a good deal of time saying good night, and I guess he went on to his own home. I"—

The scowl which Murphy had worn deepened a bit.

"You don't look like a crook," he said at last. "Where do you live?"

"1231 Elizabeth."

"Who's there that can identify you?"

There was a bit of an embarrassed laugh.

"Nobody right now. The folks are all away. I'm the only one home, you know. That's why I was going to have Bob stay all night with me. I"—

"Have you got the key to the house?" A listlessness had come into Murphy's voice.

"The key? Why, of course!"

"That's enough. Let's see you work it."

Ten minutes later they stood before the veranda of a wide fronted house five blocks away. Murphy bent as he started to ascend the steps to the veranda and felt the stone of the lower step. He looked up.

"What did you say your name was?" he asked again.

"Bert Clark," came the answer.

Murphy struck a match and peered at the carved name of the lower step.

"That's right," he admitted.

The man had stepped to the door, inserted the key and turned the lock. Murphy grinned.

"Just a mistake, that's all. I'm sorry. A fellow will make mistakes that way, you know. I was looking for a couple of icebox robbers that have been swiping stuff off these apartment porches. Sorry. Hope you don't mind?"

The man on the porch laughed as he swung open the door and prepared to step inside.

"Oh, that's all right," he called cheerily. "Good night!"

The Lynx stood in the hall for just a moment after he had closed the door, listening for the fading steps of the plain clothes man without, and, hearing them, smiled to himself. Slowly he felt for the curtains and pulled them. Then he switched on the lights.

"Jane was right," he said to himself as he looked around the hall before him. "It's all as she said. Now, if she hasn't got the wrong dope about [illegible], I'm all right." He seemed to draw his coat about him tighter, and there came a little white into his face. "That gink may be waiting outside to see if I'll light the upstairs," he mused. "I've got to risk it."

Slowly he ascended the stairs and as silently as the animal whose name he bore. Softly he felt along the wall for the switch buttons, then hesitated. The Lynx was not in the habit of traveling under full candle power—in other houses than his own.

Perhaps after all Jane's information had been wrong. Perhaps—a moment more of hesitation, then the click of the switch. With animal swiftness the eyes of the Lynx traveled here, there, through each open door as the light of the hall displayed bedroom after bedroom, quiet and destitute of humanity. The Lynx smiled.

"And that harness bull in plain clothes took me word," he said sarcastically. "But in case he's waiting for me to go to bed"—

He walked noisily into the front room and snapped the switch. There was no need for quiet now. Jane had been right. The family was gone; all was easy, and there was the little wall safe before him.

He pulled the shades one by one and, standing in front of them, took off his coat and his collar. He pulled a chair close to the window and sat in it for a moment that his shadow might show on the shade. He listened.

He heard the steps of some one start from in front of the house and echo more and more faintly up the street. Again the Lynx smiled to himself. He lit a cigarette. He had been right, then, after all. Murphy of the plain clothes squad was assured.

And it was then, as the steps faded, that the Lynx became active. A dart to the opposite wall, a click, and the room was in darkness. He raised the shade that the light of a neighboring street lamp might cast its soft glare on the wall safe before him. Then he began his work.

Quietly, quickly he turned the little knob and listened for the click of the tumblers within. Again, again, again, again, and he noted the numbers as the tumblers fell. Once more—slowly and smilingly he worked the combination, and what he sought lay before him.

Not so much, it is true, but the Lynx was not a seeker of vast wealth. Solitaires are easier to dispose of than necklaces. After all, five hundred a night is not so bad, especially when one has a policeman to aid one.

The Lynx whistled a bit under his breath and tucked the proceeds of his work safely in his hatband. There were some papers. The Lynx passed them by. He knew there would be no money. Slowly he closed the safe and passed to the next room.

For the Lynx needed a revolver. He found it, where he had believed he would find it, under a pillow and passed on. Quite aimlessly he wandered through the house, rifling a drawer now and then by the light of his little searchlight merely for the curiosity of it. He sought the downstairs and looked at the silverware.

It was heavy and solid. Knives and forks he tucked into the aperture in the lining of his clothing, feeling cautiously now and then to be sure that nowhere did there appear a betraying bulge, shaking himself a bit to be certain that silver did not touch silver with its clink, which would cause trouble on the way home.

Ten minutes more of work, and again the Lynx laughed.

"And a fly cop takes me to the house just for the company of it," he smirked. "Jane did a good job, she did. Jane's a good girl. Maybe some of these days if I keep on getting dippy over her we'll hook up—maybe."

He felt himself again. He pocketed the little searchlight and fumbled his way to the door. He opened it and stepped out on the porch—and recoiled at the touch of a human hand.

"All right, kid," came the voice of the man outside; "I thought you'd hang yourself if I gave you enough rope. You see, kid, we wasn't sure that Jane woman would stick to her giveaway, so I just thought I'd be sure of the rope."

"Jane?" The Lynx trembled a bit.

"Yeh," said Murphy of the Harrison street station; "she kicked in tonight. Got conscience or something and coughed it all up about making the impression of the key and all that stuff. Hated to do it at that, but she ain't built for that sort of work, honest. That's a good kid, that Jane. I kinda like her. Raining a bit harder, ain't it?"

But the Lynx did not answer.

A Girl With Grit.

A spirited girl went into the employ of a man known as one of the princes of Philadelphia business.

"I wish to be your stenographer," she said. "But you don't know how to write shorthand," exclaimed the astonished business prince. "No," replied the girl, "but I shall know how in thirty days." "If you can write seventy-five words a minute inside of a month the job is yours," was the answer from the trade chieftain.

When the test came at the end of the month the girl wrote not only seventy-five but ninety words in a minute, and she got the job, which has developed into a sort of confidential secretaryship and lasted for more than twenty-five years. A business prince whom all Philadelphia honors told this story himself.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Dog and a Monkey.

A good story is told of a dog that one day discovered an organ grinder's monkey seated upon a bank and at once made a rush for it. The monkey, which was attired in jacket and hat, awaited the onset so undisturbed that the dog halted within a few feet to reconnoiter. After awhile the dog seemed to recover from his surprise and was about to make a spring when the monkey raised his hand and saluted by taking off his hat. The effect was magical. The dog's head and tail dropped, and he sneaked away thoroughly discomfited.

All Hands Up.

"At what hour did the defendant hold up the saloon?"

"At five minutes to 12."

"How can you fix the minute so positively?"

"Because I noticed that even the clock had its hands up."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Lucky Find.

Two Suits.

"Did you every try that tailor I recommended to you?"

"Yes. Too expensive. Got two suits from him—one dress suit, one lawsuit."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mortality In Battle.

At Gettysburg the death rate per thousand was 55.5, the highest in twenty-one battles in the war. According to the figures in the American experience table of mortality, for every thousand men living at the age of forty-nine there will be 55.6 deaths before reaching the age of fifty-three. For all purposes this is exactly the same rate of mortality as that on the field of Gettysburg—that is to say, each soldier had the same chance of surviving the battle of Gettysburg that a man forty-nine years old has of living to be fifty-three. At the battle of Chancellorsville the death rate among the soldiers engaged was 20.3 per thousand. According to the life insurance tables, the death rate per thousand among men in peaceful pursuits ranging in age from forty-two to forty-four is exactly the same. Every soldier at Shiloh, where the death rate in battle was 42.2 per thousand, had the same chance of escaping alive as the average man of thirty has of reaching the age of thirty-five. These figures are surprising in showing how far we are likely to be led astray in calculating the relative mortality in battle.—New York World.

Sterling Coin.

An example of the romance of words is to be found in "sterling," a word early associated with British coinage, also with Easter. Fred W. Burgess, in his "Chats on Old Coins," remarks that "sterling" was applied to the quality of the mintage, which was examined periodically at Easter. Hence the term "Easterling," or "sterling," denoted coins of true weight and value as last attested. It is interesting to learn that Queen Mary was the first English sovereign to date her coinage, which she did in 1553, using Roman numerals. The type of the Mary shilling is historically of particular interest in that it is the only period of English coinage on which joint sovereigns were represented face to face. This peculiarity gave rise to the lines:

> Still amorous, fond and billing,
> Like Philip and Mary on a shilling.

Wisdom From Thomas.

The thoughtful look on young Thomas' face betrayed that he had a few questions to ask. As soon as Mrs. Boardman had gone he asked them.

"Mother," said he, "do you like to kiss Mrs. Boardman?"

"No, dear."

"Do you think Mrs. Boardman likes to kiss you?"

"I don't think she does."

"Then why do you and she always kiss when you meet?"

"I don't know, dear."

"Don't you think Mrs. Boardman would rather you didn't kiss her?"

"I have no doubt of it."

"Wouldn't you rather Mrs. Boardman didn't kiss you?"

"Oh, very much rather."

"Then," said young Thomas conclusively, "that must be why."—New York Times.

Morocco Leather.

Sumac, the powdered leaf of the sumac plant, the finest varieties of which grow in Sicily, is used in tanning goatskins, and sumac gives a clear, white tannage, unaffected by the action of light and therefore suitable for dyeing into colors where permanence of shade is desired. A genuine "morocco" is goatskin tanned with pure sumac, but there are many upholsterers who could not give this definition offhand. Goatskins dyed with babool pods or similar barks are only imitation moroccos, although it takes an expert to discover the difference. Long wear, of course, reveals the deception. Roan leathers are sumac tanned sheepskins.—Manchester Guardian.

Well Posted.

A young man and young woman on the links were combining the games of golf and wooing. "Here's a quarter, caddie," said the young man, as he started off with his arm around his fair companion's waist; "you want to forget this."

"Don't worry, sir," replied the caddie. "I've forgot more about that kind of business than you ever knew."—Exchange.

Education.

Education is the instruction of the intellect in the laws of nature, under which name I include not merely things and their forces, but men and their ways, and the fashioning of the affections and of the will into an earnest and loving desire to move in harmony with those laws.—Huxley.

Wifely Finance.

"Hubby, can you pay me back that dollar you borrowed from me?"

"But, my dear," he protested, "I have already paid it back twice. Surely you don't expect it again."

"Oh, all right, if you are as mean as all that!"—Kansas City Journal.

Clever Pigeons.

A close observer writes that he has noticed a smart trick again and again on the part of pigeons in Palace yard, London. A dozen or more of them will gather under the nosebag of a horse. Suddenly, and evidently by prearrangement, all the birds fly up. The horse, being startled, tosses his head, out comes some of the grain, and the pigeons settle down to eat. It is probable that pigeons elsewhere have learned the same trick.

Yellowjack.

Not only is yellowjack a popular term in some places for molasses candy, but it is a common nickname among seamen for the dreaded yellow fever. Probably the phrase originated in the use of the yellow jack or flag by naval vessels in quarantine to indicate contagious disease aboard.

Taken Literally.

"Are you saving up something for a rainy day?"

"No," replied Farmer Corntossel. "What we're troubled with out this way is an annual drought. If we had more rainy days everybody would save money."—Washington Star.

Right In the Family.

"Are you family friends of the Wombats?"

"I presume I might say so. They don't hesitate to quarrel with me."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

1861—65——1914

A meeting of Old Soldiers and members of Beers Post G. A. R. was held at the home of H. W. Stevens last Tuesday evening Nov. 24 to consider the advisability of inviting the public to a chicken pie dinner on Dec. 23rd 1914 to be followed by a campfire and program in the evening to which the public are cordially invited. There were a good number present and arrangements were made. J. D. Shull was chosen chairman. It was also decided that a line of advertising be solicited from the merchants for the program and menu card. J. D. Shull was appointed to correspond with Past National Commander Washington Gardner for speaker for the evening. H. W. Stevens and J. M. Ingersoll were appointed to solicit and arrange for the advertising.

AULT—BIRD.

Married, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell Bird, in Petersburg on Wednesday, Nov. 25, 1914, at 10 o'clock a. m., Miss Bertine E. Bird and Warren Ault, the Rev. Atkins of Ann Arbor officiating. The couple were attended by Percy Ault and Miss Crystal Bird, brother and sister of the contracting parties. Miss Florence Davis played the wedding march.

After congratulations a bountiful wedding dinner was served. The couple left for Loraine, Ohio, for a short visit. On their return they will be at home on their farm three miles east of Petersburg. The bride is a grand-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Westcott of Tecumseh.

Recognized Their Old Friend.

The late Sir John Steell, who was sculptor to Queen Victoria, was modeling a bust of Miss Nightingale when an officer of one of the highland regiments which had suffered so cruelly in the Crimea heard that the bust had just been completed and was in Sir John's studio. Many of the men in his company had passed through the hospital at Scutari, and he obtained permission from the sculptor to bring some of them to see it. Accordingly a squad of men one day marched into the studio and stood in line. They had no idea why they had been mustered in so strange a place. Without a word of warning the bust was uncovered, and then, as by one impulse, the men broke rank and with cries of "Miss Nightingale, Miss Nightingale!" surrounded the model and, with hats off, cheered the figure of their devoted nurse until the roof rang. So spontaneous and hearty and so inspiring was the whole scene that in after days Sir John Steell declared it to be the greatest compliment of his life.

Pigheaded?

It is an interesting fact that the two studies of arithmetic and geography seem to be diametrically opposed to each other in the affections of school children. Pupils who are particularly proficient in one are apt to be backward in the other. A story is told of a little boy who was slow in arithmetic and whose apparent stupidity in this field was a great source of grief to his father, who had been a mathematician. One day when the father and son were walking out they passed a place where a "learned pig" was on exhibition, and the father took the boy to see this porcine prodigy.

"Just look at that," said the father. "Why, there's a pig that can count and add up numbers! Don't you wish you were as smart as he?"

"Ha," answered the boy, "just let me ask him a few questions in geography!"

Two Rules of Life.

Here is a man whose guiding principle is hate. He is forever trying to punish somebody for some real or fancied grievance. He will spend money and thought and time to bring confusion upon some one whom he chooses to regard as an enemy, money and thought and time which he might employ in advancing his own fortunes or in nobler effort. When he succeeds in his end he seems to take a brief satisfaction in his work, but he does not impress us as a happy man. He soon forgets all about the punished enemy and casts about for a new one to punish. When he fails in his end and his enemy escapes or punishes him he is very much cast down.

One advantage of taking the diametrically opposite passion to the one this man has selected as your guiding principle of life is that even when you lose you win.—Columbus Journal.

American Restaurants.

What disconcerts the European in the great American restaurant is the excessive, the occasional maddening slowness of the service and the lack of interest in the service. Touching the latter defect, the waiter is not impolite; he is not neglectful. But he is too often passively hostile, or at best neutral. He, or his chief, has apparently not grasped the fact that buying a meal is not like buying a ton of coal. If the purchaser is to get value for his money he must enjoy his meal, and if he is to enjoy his meal it must not merely be efficiently served, but it must be efficiently served in a sympathetic atmosphere. The supreme business of a good waiter is to create this atmosphere. True, that even in the country which has carried cookery and restaurants to loftier heights than any other—I mean, of course, Belgium, the little country of little restaurants—the subtle ether which the truly civilized diner demands is rare enough. But in the great restaurants of the great cities of America it is, I fancy, rarer than anywhere else.—Arnold Bennett in Harper's Magazine.

His Unlucky Day.

Even the least superstitious are often struck by the misfortunes which attend some persons on certain dates. A large firm in the city has in its employ a living instance of the fact. On June 12 an employee lost his left arm by coming in contact with machinery. The accident disabled him for his then employment, and he was given that of a messenger. On another June 12 he was run over in the Strand while on an errand. Result, a broken leg. The next accident was a fall on the stairs in the firm's buildings—again June 12—the right arm broken this time. The fourth mishap on another anniversary broke three ribs. The firm took the case into consideration and issued an order that in future the employee was to take a holiday on that date, an order with which he has now complied for several years.—London Tit-Bits.

THE STATE CONFERENCE ANN ARBOR

The State Conference Y. M. C. A. held in Ann Arbor last week was the largest in the history of the association up to Friday evening there were 2083 names registered over 85 being Lenawee boys. Gov. Ferris spoke to over 3000 in Hills Auditorium Friday night. Saturday evening a musical program by the N. O. M. glee club and Mandolin club was followed by a speech by Secretary of State Wm. J. Bryan.

Sand Pit Puzzles.

Nebraska's sand hill region offers one of the most unusual fields for scientific investigation in this country. In some places the wind begins its work on the very top of a hill. Gradually, while the outline of the hill remains intact, the hole goes down deeper until it reaches hardpan or rock, where water collects. The top of the excavation may be only a few yards across, and then the pit has the appearance of a great well. The air seems to go down into one of these holes with a sort of suction, and the day is never so calm but that some sand rises from the pit. It always piles out on the northeast side. The excavations are not confined to the hills. They may start on the level ground and then, as in the other case, the hole will go down to water. The level land excavations may be of any size from a pond of many acres to a narrow pit three times as deep as it is wide. They are called, in western parlance, "blowouts."—Argonaut.

How Unreasonable!

Many business men actually believe that spelling ought to be an accomplishment of the average college graduate. A young bachelor of arts was recently put to work running a small printing press in the back room of a banker's office. He was to set up and print a number of circulars to be sent out to customers of the house. When the work was finished it was found to differ decidedly from the standards of spelling set by the late Messrs. Webster and Worcester. The young man was summoned to an audience with his chief. The interview was not pleasant, and the young man showed as much by his face when he rejoined the rest of the office force.

"What's the matter, John?" some one asked him.

"Matter enough," replied John. "The boss expects an educated man to spell just like a blooming stenographer."—Youth's Companion.

Parker's First Stories.

Gilbert Parker said of his first attempt at authorship: "I went to Archibald Forbes, with whom I was acquainted, to have him give me a note to the Macmillans, as I wanted to see whether they would not bring out a book of short stories for me. He read the stories and then invited me around to dine to give me the letter of introduction and the opinion of the stories. 'I have read your sketches,' he said after dinner, 'and I must say this of them—I have never seen such a fine collection of titles in my life.'

"'There, don't say another word, Mr. Forbes,' I said. 'I understand perfectly. Each title suggests a complete idea which the story fails to carry out. I understand perfectly.' Thereupon I went home and burned every one of them. Then I sat down and wrote the first of the 'Pierre' series, which was the beginning of what success I ever had."

A Kit Carson Incident.

Kit Carson received his only severe wound when he was twenty-three years old, and in especially honorable fashion. The Blackfeet Indians had rushed a herd of horses and run away with most of it. After a sharp pursuit through the snow by thirty of the trappers the thieves were overtaken and a parley held. The Blackfeet argued that they thought they were robbing their enemies, the Snakes, and not their "friends," the Americans. This was only a ruse, and after the savages, in lordly manner, had brought out five of the poorest horses and offered them in full settlement the council broke up in a general rush for weapons. The fight was from behind trees and rocks. One of the trappers had trouble with the lock of his gun. Carson saw the difficulty and quickly changed his aim from his particular adversary to the one that was threatening his companion. The shift saved the man's life, but Carson received a bullet in his left shoulder. This wound, added to the inferior numbers of the trappers, forced them to withdraw without attaining their end.—Kit Carson Days.

Johnson's Portrait.

In 1775 Sir Joshua Reynolds painted that portrait of his friend, Dr. Johnson, which represents him as reading and nearsighted. This was very displeasing to Johnson, who, when he saw it, reproved Sir Joshua for painting him in that manner and attitude, saying, "It is not friendly to hand down to posterity the imperfections of any man." But, on the contrary, Sir Joshua himself esteemed it a circumstance in nature to be remarked as characterizing the person represented and therefore as giving additional value to the portrait.

Of this circumstance Mrs. Thrale says, "I observed that he would not be known by posterity for his defects only, let Sir Joshua do his worst," and when she adverted to Sir Joshua's own picture painted with the ear trumpet and done in this year for Mr. Thrale, she records Johnson to have answered, "He may paint himself as deaf as he chooses, but I will not be blinking Sam."

Wounded Sailors.

When a soldier fighting on land is wounded he is generally carried out of the firing zone without much delay and is soon made as comfortable as possible in a hospital out of range of the enemy's guns. Not so the sailor on board a warship. Warships are, above everything, fighting machines. There is very little spare room on board, and in the confusion of battle the wounded sailor cannot get the best attention all at once, nor can he be carried out of range of the big guns of the enemy. But efforts are made to carry him to a place of safety. Such places, easy of access and not too hot, are scarce enough. Of course all that can be done is done. The wounds are dressed, and the men are made as comfortable as possible in the circumstances. Then as soon as an opportunity presents itself they are transferred to a hospital ship.—Pearson's Weekly.

Community Habits.

Communities are like humans, they get habits. Each community makes its own collection, selects the particular kinds it likes. This makes it a "peculiar place"—as the phrase goes—gives it individuality, really makes it different from the rest. Now the character of a community—whether it is good or bad—depends on the kind of stuff it packs into its habit trunk. Furthermore, communities sometimes get chronic. They get "sot in their ways." The habit ruts get deep. Judgments about things get twisted. Ambition grows tired and quits. Whatever the community is it stays until it begins to slip back—back perhaps to the condition of that rural community which finally raised only two crops a year—"huckleberries in summer and hades in winter."—Countryside Magazine and Suburban Life.

Sealing Wax.

A work on heraldry by Paul Gruendel, published at Leipzig, contains some information on the subject of sealing wax and the rules governing its use in the days of old. White wax was for the kings of France and later for the kings of Sicily. A few dukes were allowed the high privilege through the generosity of Frederick III. Red wax was for the holy father at Rome and the German monarchs, but as a mark of favor to the people it was allowed to be used generally. Green wax "was for the common people, and some cities which had been unfaithful to their government were compelled ever afterward, as a mark of their shame, to seal all public documents with green wax."

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready-made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B. J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it. It is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

There is to be given in Tecumseh this winter a course of musical and dramatic concerts which no doubt every lover of high grade entertainment will appreciate "The C. W. Best Artists' Series"-a series of concerts to appear here in January, February and March. This course is composed of three numbers, the several artists appearing in vocal and instrumental work. Some of the muicians are attaches of Royal Courts, and nearly every performer has appeared before Royalty. These artists appear in Russian and Spanish costums, also in ensemble work. The dramatic reader, Mrs. Haskell, is of international reputation. Judging from the personnel and reputation of the several artists, this course is far above the average Lyceum course, The several concerts will be given in Adrian just previous to the Tecumseh dates. The course is presented by the choir of the Presbyterian church

APPEAL FOR HELP FOR BELGIUM

One of the bravest, most thrifty and formerly most wealthy nations of the world lies stricken to the ground; ruined, starving and perishing for want of sufficient help, for though much has been given, yet the amount necessary to feed 7,000,000 destitute people is enormous.

Most of Belgium's able bodied men have been killed or wounded. Women and children have been forced to flee from their ruined homes with what they could carry on their backs, often wheeling along their decrepit fathers, or crippled brothers in wheelbarrows.

Winter is on: thousands are living in tents, if fortunate enough to possess one; children are being born on the wet ground: Will you stand back when war has mercifully passed you by and not give the help that will save a splendid nation?

Belgium is not a beggar, she has never before asked, she has given, for this, the most thrifty, most industrious, most saving nation, had hardly any poverty. Belgium gave to the Messina earthquake, she gave to the Chicago fire in 1874, and certainly her wondrous heroism in this most dreadful war should inspire us to help her.

Any gifts, large or small, will be gratefully accepted by the undersigned committee appointed by the Monday Club.

We solicit money, new clothing as per specifications below, offers of work to make clothes, any kind of food that can be forwarded such as bags of beans, peas, flour, wheat or other farm produce, tea, coffee, sugar, oatmeal, etc.

Recruiting In Queen Anne's Day.

Serve your queen or find work! That, in brief, was the rough and ready sentence passed on ablebodied unemployed men in the days of Queen Anne—a period of almost incessant warfare. When the recruiting officer—described at the time as a compound of "canting, lying, impudence, bullying, swearing, drinking and a halberd"—failed to beat up recruits fast enough for Marlborough's wars an act was passed to enable justices to compel all ablebodied men "as have not any lawful means for their own maintenance" to join the army. Parish officers were encouraged to hunt up food for powder and received $5 for every man sentenced to be a soldier, but the result was disappointing. Thousands deserted, and England relied mainly on volunteers. These were offered the bait of a twenty dollar bounty and a discharge after three years—"if they deserved it."—London Mirror.

A TECUMSEH MAN GIVES EVIDENCE

His testimony Will Interest Every Tecumseh Reader.

The value of local evidence is indisputable. It is the kind of evidence we accept as true because we know we can prove it for ourselves. There has been plenty of such evidence in the Tecumseh papers lately, and this straightforward testimony has established a confidence in the minds of Tecumseh people that will not be easily shaken.

J. B. Smith, E. Chicago., Tecumseh says: "I was caused a great deal of suffering by pains in the small of my back. When the attacks were present it was all I could do to work. When stooping I became very dizzy and spots of fire seemed to dash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, but got no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They made me feel like a different person ridding me of the trouble. I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills."

The Meaning of Literature.

When we treat English authors as mere entertainers whose business it is to provide elegant amusement for our idle hours we are guilty of a misconception as to the meaning of literature which is denounced specifically or implicitly by every great critic in our language and which is certain to prevent all or almost all the possible good results of our study. The answer is to get entirely away from that theory of literature and to realize that the poets and novelists and essayists are men who are trying to unify and explain life to us and to give us the zest for it which their divine vision has brought to them. We must face literature squarely, recognize in it a record of the meaning of our civilization and without confusing it for a moment with history or philosophy give full weight to its historical and social and philosophical bearings. Finally, in order to give our students any love of literature which will be more serious than an idle flirtation, we must make plain to them that their first business is not to "appreciate" but to understand.—Atlantic.

London's Bellmen.

Other bells than those attached to churches used to disturb the slumbers of Londoners. Prior to the institution of watchmen every parish had its bellman, who used to stalk the streets all night. At irregular intervals he would ring his bell loudly and cry out, "Take care of your fire and candle, be charitable to the poor and pray for the dead." If he met any malefactor he rang unceasingly until the neighborhood was roused to his assistance. A copy of verses published in 1683 by Isaac Bagg, "Bellman In the Parish of St. Giles In the Fields," describes his duties as:

To see your doors and windows all are fast
And that no villainy or foul crime be done
To you or yours in the absence of the sun.
If any base lurker I do meet
In private alley or in open street,
You shall have warning by my timely call.

—London Chronicle

Pretty Good Method.

A famous clergyman tells of a lay preacher's conference in which a veteran described his method of sermon preparation.

"I take my text," he said, "and divide my sermon into three parts. In the first part I tell 'em what I'm going to tell 'em. In the second part—well, I tell 'em. In the third part I tell 'em what I've told 'em."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Only Used For Shaving.

"Sam, here is an account of a man who has a razor that has seen continuous service for 150 years. It was bought in England by his grandfather."

"Well, all I has to say, boss, is dat he must belong to a powerful peaceful family."—Yonkers Statesman.

When the Waiter Came.

"Were you ringing the bell, sir?" asked the waiter of the customer who had been busy with the bell for fully fifteen minutes.

"Ringing it, man?" echoed the customer. "I have been tolling it. I thought you were dead."

Widows' Caps.

The widow's cap is as old as the days of Julius Caesar. An edict of Tiberius commanded all widows to wear the cap under penalty of a heavy fine and imprisonment.

Queer Warning.

In an English village an official notice reads as follows: "The public are warned against using the well for domestic purposes unless previously boiled."

Lost!

"Edith, is that young man gone?" called the landlady at ten bells.

"Yes, completely," came the answer.—Michigan Gargoyle.

Naming It.

"What kept you so long?"

"I was showing that pretty girl now to reach her destination."

"I call that miss-directed energy."—Baltimore American.

A New Fish.

An angler, armed with every luxury in the way of bait and fishing gear, sat on the bank for hours without getting a bite. Seated near him was a small lad with a bough cut from a neighboring wood. At the end of this improvised rod were a bit of string, a bent pin and half a worm. First one fine perch was landed by this youthful angler and then another. Pleased with his success, he started for home and on his way met the vicar. "Those are two fine perch, my lad," said the clergyman. "No, sir; they's not perch," said the boy. "But they are," said the vicar. "No, sir; I'm sure they're not, for when I caught the second fish the gentleman next to me on the bank said, 'Well, that's the limit!'"—London Express.

Parade of the Snail.

Mons, like Namur, is fond of fete and processions and military pomp. Every year on Trinity Sunday comes the parade of Lume Con—Walloon for a snail. The snail, however, is a mighty dragon of thirty feet in length. When the march through the streets is ended a gentleman known as Gilles de Chin steps forward and pretends to slay the dragon—so that the parallel is complete. In this procession in former days an enormous cannon used to be carried. It is believed that the cannon was the one used at the battle of Crecy.—London Standard.

Limitations of Science.

"I get fearfully tired of our old graphophone records. They are always the same."

"Guess you'll have to stand 'em for awhile, my dear. Science hasn't as yet succeeded in perfecting a record that will improvise music."—Kansas City Journal.

In crossing the Canadian river in Texas Fred Whelan came very near losing his machine. Both autos sunk into quick sand, Fred's so deeply that the water entered the machine, saturating some of the baggage. A man and mule chanced along and pulled Thielan's machine out but Fred's was too deeply embedded in the sand. Fortunately some men who were working on a nearby bridge responded to the call for assistance and by their united efforts pulled the machine out of the quick sand. The party were having a delightful time and all were doing well.

WHEN THE TIRED MOTHER GIVES OUT

What Then?—The Family Suffers, the Poor Mothers Suffer—Mrs. Becker Meets This Distressing Situation.

Collinsville, Ill.—"I suffered from a nervous break-down and terrible headaches, and was tired all over, totally worn out and too discouraged to enjoy life, but as I had four in family and sometimes eight or nine boarders, I kept on working despite my suffering.

"I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and within two weeks I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and now I am a well woman." —Mrs. ANA BECKER, Collinsville, Ill.

There are hundreds of nervous, run-down, overworked women in this vicinity who are hardly able to drag around and who we are sure would be wonderfully benefited by Vinol as Mrs. Becker was.

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up health and strength in such cases is because it combines the medicinal tissue building and curative elements of cod's livers together with the blood making, strengthening properties of tonic iron. We ask every weak, nervous, run-down man or woman in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

NATION'S LABOR PROBLEM

OVER A MILLION AND A HALF WOMEN WORK AS FARM HANDS IN THE UNITED STATES.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

Our government never faced so tremendous a problem as that now lying dormant at the doors of congress and the legislatures, and which, when aroused, will shake this nation from center to circumference, and make civilization hide its face in shame. That problem is—women in the field.

The last federal census reports show we now have 1,514,000 women working in the field, most of them south of the Mason and Dixon line. There were approximately a million negro slaves working in the fields when liberated by the emancipation proclamation. We have freed our slaves and our women have taken their places in bondage. We have broken the shackles off the negroes and welded them upon our daughters.

The Chain-Gang of Civilization.

A million women in bondage in the southern fields form the chain-gang of civilization—the industrial tragedy of the age. There is no overseer quite so cruel as that of unrestrained greed, no whip that stings like the lash of suborned destiny, and no auctioneer's block quite so revolting as that of organized avarice.

The president of the United States was recently lauded by the press, and very properly so, for suggesting mediation between the engineers and railroad managers in adjusting their schedule of time and pay. The engineers threatened to strike if their wages were not increased from approximately ten to eleven dollars per day and service reduced from ten to eight hours and a similar readjustment of the overtime schedule. Our women are working in the field, many of them barefooted, for less than 50 cents per day, and their schedule is the rising sun and the evening star, and after the day's work is over they milk the cows, slop the hogs and rock the baby to sleep. Is anyone mediating over their problems, and to whom shall they threaten a strike?

Congress has listened approvingly to those who toil at the forge and behind the counter, and many of our statesmen have smiled at the threats and have fanned the flame of unrest among industrial laborers. But women are as surely the final victims of industrial warfare as they are the burden-bearers in the war between nations, and those who arbitrate and mediate the differences between capital and labor should not forget that when the expenses of any industry are unnecessarily increased, society foots the bill by drafting a new consignment of women from the home to the field.

Pinch no Crumb From Women's Crust of Bread.

No financial award can be made without someone footing the bill, and we commend to those who accept the responsibility of the distribution of industrial justice, the still small voice of the woman in the field as she pleads for mercy, and we beg that they pinch no crumb from her crust of bread or put another patch upon her ragged garments.

We beg that they listen to the scream of horror from the eagle on every American dollar that is wrung from the brow of toiling women and hear the Goddess of Justice hiss at a verdict that increases the want of woman to satisfy the greed of man.

The women behind the counter and in the factory cry aloud for sympathy and the press thunders out in their defense and the pulpit pleads for mercy, but how about the woman in the field? Will not these powerful exponents of human rights turn their talent, energies and influence to her relief? Will the Goddess of Liberty enthroned at Washington hold the calloused hand and soothe the feverish brow of her sex who sows and reaps the nation's harvest or will she permit the male of the species to shove women—weak and weary—from the bread-line of industry to the back alleys of poverty?

Women and Children First.

The census enumerators tell us that of the 1,514,000 women who work in the fields as farm hands 409,000 are sixteen years of age and under. What is the final destiny of a nation whose future mothers spend their girlhood days behind the plow, pitching hay and hauling manure, and what is to become of womanly culture and refinement that grace the home, charm society and enthuse man to leap to glory in noble achievements if our daughters are raised in the society of the ox and the companionship of the plow?

In that strata between the ages of sixteen and forty-five are 950,000 women working as farm hands and many of them with suckling babes tugging at their breasts, as drenched in perspiration, they wield the scythe and guide the plow. What is to become of that nation where poverty breaks the crowns of the queens of the home; despair hurls a mother's love from its throne and hunger drives innocent children from the schoolroom to the hoe?

The census bureau shows that 155,000 of these women are forty-five years of age and over. There is no more pitiful sight in civilization than these saintly mothers of Israel stooped with age, drudging in the field from sun until sun and at night drenching their dingy pillows with the tears of despair as their aching hearts take it all to God in prayer. Civilization strikes them a blow when it should give them a crown, and their only friend is he who broke bread with beggars and said: "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Oh, America! The land of the free and the home of the brave, the world's custodian of chivalry, the champion of human rights and the defender of the oppressed—shall we permit our maidens fair to be torn from the hearthstone by the ruthless hand of destiny and chained to the plow? Shall we permit our faithful wives, whom we covenanted with God to cherish and protect, to be hurled from the home to the harvest field, and our mothers dear to be driven from the old arm chair to the cotton patch?

In rescuing our citizens from the forces of civilization, can we not apply to our fair Dixieland the rule of the sea—"women and children first?"

There must be a readjustment of the wage scale of industry so that the women can be taken from the field or given a reasonable wage for her services. Perhaps the issue has never been fairly raised, but the Farmers' Union, with a membership of ten million, puts its organized forces squarely behind the issue and we now enter upon the docket of civilization the case of "The Woman in the Field" and demand an immediate trial.

THE RURAL CHURCH

THE FARMERS THE CUSTODIANS OF THE NATION'S MORALITY.

Co-operation of Church, School and Press Essential to Community Building.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The church, the press and the school form a triple alliance of progress that guides the destiny of every community, state and nation. Without them civilization would wither and die and through them life may attain its greatest blessing, power and knowledge. The farmers of this nation are greatly indebted to this social triumvirate for their uplifting influence, and on behalf of the American plowmen I want to thank those engaged in these high callings for their able and efficient service, and I shall offer to the press a series of articles on co-operation between these important influences and the farmers in the hope of increasing the efficiency of all by mutual understanding and organized effort. We will take up, first, the rural church.

The Farmers Are Great Church Builders.

The American farmer is the greatest church builder the world has ever known. He is the custodian of the nation's morality; upon his shoulders rests the "ark of the covenant" and he is more responsive to religious influences than any other class of citizenship.

The farmers of this nation have built 120,000 churches at a cost of $750,000,000, and the annual contribution of the nation toward all church institutions approximates $200,000,000 per annum. The farmers of the United States build 22 churches per day. There are 20,000,000 rural church communicants on the farm, and 54 per cent of the total membership of all churches reside in the country.

The farm is the power-house of all progress and the birthplace of all that is noble. The Garden of Eden was in the country and the man who would get close to God must first get close to nature.

The Functions of a Rural Church.

If the rural churches today are going to render a service which this age demands, there must be co-operation between the religious, social and economic life of the community.

The church to attain its fullest measure of success must enrich the lives of the people in the community it serves; it must build character; develop thought and increase the efficiency of human life. It must serve the social, business and intellectual, as well as the spiritual and moral side of life. If religion does not make a man more capable, more useful and more just, what good is it? We want a practical religion, one we can live by and farm by, as well as die by.

Fewer and Better Churches.

Blessed is that rural community which has but one place of worship. While competition is the life of trade, it is death to the rural church and moral starvation to the community. Petty sectarianism is a scourge that blights the life, and the church prejudice saps the vitality, of many communities. An over-churched community is a crime against religion, a serious handicap to society and a useless tax upon agriculture.

While denominations are essential and church pride commendable, the high teaching of universal Christianity must prevail if the rural church is to fulfill its mission to agriculture.

We frequently have three or four churches in a community which is not able to adequately support one. Small congregations attend services once a month and all fail to perform the religious functions of the community. The division of religious forces and the breaking into fragments of moral efforts is ofttimes little less than a calamity and defeats the very purpose they seek to promote.

The evils of too many churches can be minimized by co-operation. The social and economic life of a rural community are respective units and cannot be successfully divided by denominational lines, and the churches can only occupy this important field by co-operation and co-ordination.

The efficient country church will definitely serve its community by leading in all worthy efforts at community building, in uniting the people in all co-operative endeavors for the general welfare of the community and in arousing a real love for country life and loyalty to the country home and these results can only be successfully accomplished by the united effort of the press, the school, the church and organized farmers.

Early Use of Tin.

The tin used in the composition of bronzes from Assyria was probably obtained from Phoenicia, and it is believed that this was exported 3,000 years ago from the British isles.

The Assyrians appear to have made an extensive use of this metal, and the degree of perfection which the making of bronze had then reached clearly shows that they must have been long experienced in the use of it. They appear to have received what they used from the Phoenicians. Some think the Celtic tribes were acquainted with this metal previously to the arrival of the Phoenicians upon those shores.

It is said that the Phoenicians were indebted to the Tyrian Hercules for their trade in tin.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Glycerin's Discovery.

The first announcement of his discovery of glycerin was made by Karl Wilhelm Scheele, a Swedish chemist, in 1777. The inventor described the substance as "the sweet principle of fats" and named it oelusus. Later investigations by Chevreul, Berthelot and many other chemists resulted in the perfecting of the glycerin which is now so largely used in manufactures, medicine and the arts. Scheele made many other important discoveries, including tartaric acid, chlorine and baryta. He discovered arseniureted hydrogen and the green color still known as "Scheele's green."

GERMANS RETIRE FROM DIXMUDE

London Hears Foe Is Retreating from Belgian Coast Region.

RE-ENFORCEMENTS FIGHT CZAR

First-Line Troops of the Kaiser Now Engaged With Russians in Great Battle on Eastern Front—Ypres Is Again Battle Center—Teuton's Fleet in Baltic Threatens Russ Ports.

British and Japanese warships are reported to be closing in on a German squadron in South American waters. A big naval battle is expected at any time. The German squadron of Admiral von Spec is now reported off the mouth of the River Plata.

Telegraphing from Amsterdam the correspondent of the Central News says: "A big battle is raging bemude has begun a general retirement.

The Handelsblad's Sluis correspondent sayc: "A big battle is raging between the Yser and the Lys. One hundred and twenty thousand Germans have been sent to Ypres to make a final attempt to capture the town."

The Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant learns that eight additional railway tracks have been laid between Berlin and Cologne. The enormous capacity of this system renders it the most wonderful strategical railway in the world.

PETROGRAD — First-line German troops are now opposing a portion of the Russian army in Poland, it is stated here. The arrival of re-enforcements for the enemy and the strengthening of the corps of mere youths and second and third line troops by the first fighting forces, is said to be responsible for the delay in settling the issue in Poland.

It is admitted that the German forces are putting up a desperate resistance in the vicinity of Lodz. Their losses are declared to be enormous. The Germans fought their way out of the vise in which they were caught south of Lodz at the point of the bayonet in the face of terrific machine gun and rifle fire.

Prisoners have been taken suffering terribly from hunger and exposure. In their retreat the Germans have lost vast quantities of supplies.

Stubborn Engagements Continue.

The following official communication was issued from general headquarters:

"Stubborn engagements continue in the directions of Lowicz, an attempt by the Germans to advance in the region of Rzeszow has been repulsed with great losses to the Germans.

"On the rest of the front along the left bank of the Vistula an artillery engagement took place on Nov. 29.

"The Russian troops, after a fight lasting ten days, captured on Nov. 28 the Austrian positions which protected the passes in the Carpathians, extending fifty versts (about thirty-three miles), from Koneczna, which is situated south of Mevo Daborez. The Russians in this district captured cannons, machine guns and many prisoners.

Take 50,000 Soldiers.

"During the first half of November we captured in all 50,000 Austro-Hungarian soldiers and 600 officers.

"At Plock, Poland, the Russian troops seized four ships laden with machine guns and munitions.

"In East Prussia minor engagements continue. No Turkish warship has been seen in the Black Sea since Nov 21."

Ypres Center of New Battle.

LONDON — Every able-bodied German in Belgium that can be spared from garrison duty is on the fighting line between Ypres and the sea. Reports reaching here declare that during the lull in the fighting of the last week Belgium towns back of the lines were emptied to the last man that could be spared in the maintenance of order.

A fierce attack is said to have been directed against the allied lines between Ypres and the Lys. More than 100,000 Germans are massed for this assault.

Anticipate Allied Offensive.

The rush of re-enforcements to the northern line is believed to be in anticipation of an offensive movement by the French and British.

In case of a German retreat being necessary heavy forces will be necessary to hold the allies in check to cover the Germans in their withdrawal to their line of concrete trenches, further toward the interior. There another stand will be made.

Apremont Is Bombarded.

The last official statement is given out by the French government said:

"In Belgium the enemy is remaining on the defensive. The artillery fire has been feeble and we have made progress at certain points. In the vicinity of Fay we hold securely the positions we occupied Nov. 28.

"In the region of Soissons there has been an intermittent artillery fire directed against the town.

"In the Argonne several attacks on the Town of Bagatelle were repulsed by our troops.

"In the Woevre district the enemy bombarded the forest of Apremont, but without result."

German Fleet May Shell Petrograd.

COPENHAGEN — The German fleet is becoming lively in the Baltic. Scandinavian and Russian dispatches indicate that preparations are being made for striking a blow against Russian ports, entering the Gulf of Finland, and possibly the bombardment of Petrograd.

Girls Drink Acid by Mistake.

FLIRTATIOUS WOMEN PROVE DRY SLEUTHS

"Bring a Friend and Two Cold Bottles" Locates "Tiger."

OWOSSO, MICH. — If you should visit Owosso and happen to meet a couple of bright, pretty, young girls not averse to flirtation, if you should speak to them, or if they spoke to you and a "date" is fixed up, don't keep the engagement. It may mean looking through a set of prison bars from the inside. The above tip comes from an Owosso young man who failed to heed his own advice and is expecting to hear "you're wanted" and to feel the hand of a policeman on his shoulders almost any time. For the girls, it is declared, are private detectives who are here sleuthing to stop local option law violators.

The girls, it is said, have been in town about two weeks, posing as book agents. They spend most of their time on the streets or in business places. They are well dressed and have money in plenty. Flirtatious young men who made advances were met half way, and the making of dates followed.

As arrangements for the future meeting were completed one of the strangers was sure to say casually "don't forget to bring along a couple of cold bottles." The beer, or in some cases, liquor, was always produced. The girls proved tactful, but persistently inquisitive, soon learning the names and addresses of their guests.

Very shortly afterward, the date fizzled out and the men found themselves skillfully "shaken." It is intimated that the blow-off will soon come with numerous arrests, as the information has been turned over to the authorities.

FRENCH YELLOW BOOK OUT

Germany Blamed for War in Avoiding Peace Overtures.

PARIS — The French foreign office gave out a yellow book, which recites from the standpoint of France the events which led up to the present war.

This book reviews at length the diplomatic exchanges previous to the declaration of war. An abstract given out by the foreign office lays emphasis upon the responsibilities of Austria as the primal cause of the conflict and says that Germany persistently avoided every opportunity to adopt measures of conciliation and reach a settlement.

HUNTING SEASON COSTS 48 LIVES

Wisconsin and Michigan Records Show Many Deaths.

ELEVEN DEAD IN MINNESOTA

In Wolverine State 13, and in Badger State 24 Lose Lives—Minnesota Sportsmen Slay Much Game—Seek to Protect Antlered Tribe by Shortening Season.

MILWAUKEE, WIS. — Thirty-seven deaths from hunting accidents in northern Wisconsin and Michigan is the toll in those districts, so far as known during the fall season, ending at midnight.

Of this number twenty-four hunters were slain in Wisconsin—three more than were killed in 1913. In Michigan there were thirteen fatalities. It is estimated that about 15,000 hunters were in the woods of the upper peninsula of Michigan alone.

Game Killed in Michigan.

LANSING, MICH. — Deer hunters in Michigan were not as successful this fall as in 1913, according to figures given out at the state game warden's office. Up to last Friday night, fewer than 4,000 slain deer had been shipped down from the upper peninsula. More than 10,000 deer were killed last year.

Big Minnesota Season Ends.

DULUTH, MINN. — Promptly at midnight the big game season came to an end in Minnesota, after a period of twenty days, in which the "kill" mounted into the thousands. Probably 500 deer and moose came to Duluth alone. Coincident with the conclusion of the open period for deer and moose, members of the Northwestern Gun club will consider a number of recommendations by game wardens to shorten the season on big game and game and birds to ten days. This will do much toward averting a widespread slaughter, which in a few years will result in the extermination of the antlered tribe, it is believed.

Eleven Killed, Twelve Wounded.

Eleven dead hunters and twelve wounded is the roll of the hunting season in Minnesota. The number of deer and moose killed is the largest in the history of the state. Hundreds of nimrods from eastern and middle west cities obtained licenses in Minnesota this year. Game was abundant in far-away localities, but scarce where it abounded in former years.

WAR TAX GOES INTO EFFECT

Emergency Measure Is Intended to Raise $100,000,000 Revenue.

WASHINGTON D. C. — The emergency war tax to raise $100,000,000 in revenue went into full effect yesterday. The provisions of the measure levying taxes on tobacco, beer and wine went into effect on Nov. 1 and the remaining sections became effective Dec. 1.

The latter include taxes on bankers, pawnbrokers, proprietors of theaters, including motion picture houses, owners of circuses and other shows, perfume, cosmetics, chewing gum and similar articles; commercial papers of all description, steamship tickets, parlor car seats, and sleeping car berths and telephone and telegraph messages where the charge exceeds 15 cents.

Kalamazoo Colonel Made General.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — Advices have been received here telling of the promotion of a former Kalamazoo boy, Frederick S. Strong, from a colonel in the coast artillery, to a brigadier generalship in the army. The advance becomes effective after the first of the year.

JANITOR BARS BRYAN FROM OWN MEETING

"He Didn't Have No Plug Hat on," Explains Doorman.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — That William J. Bryan, secretary of state and principal speaker at the mass meeting of the twelfth annual state boys' conference of the Y. M. C. A. Saturday night, had difficulty in obtaining entrance to Hill auditorium became known at the closing session of the conference.

The university officials had stationed in Hill auditorium a janitor with orders that no person should be allowed to enter the auditorium through the stage entrance who did not present a little red ticket.

Through some accident Mr. Bryan had been separated from his host, President Hutchins, for a minute and the janitor barred the way. Mr. Bryan sought to pass him. "Where's your ticket?" asked the janitor. "I have none, my good friend," said Mr. Bryan. "Then you can't come in," said the janitor. "But I'm Mr. Bryan, the speaker of the evening," said the commoner. "Go long," said the janitor, "that's what another guy tried to tell me. Show your ticket or get out of the way of them as has 'em," insisted Mr. Janitor. Then President Hutchins caught up with his guest, and Mr. Bryan got in.

"He looked just as common," said the janitor afterward, "and how was I to know he was Bryan when he didn't have no plug hat on?"

BIG BREAKWATER FINISHED

Government Project at Ludington Was Started Six Years Ago.

LUDINGTON, MICH. — With even the minor details finished, Ludington's $1,000,000 harbor, including the greatest breakwater on the east shore of Lake Michigan, is completed. The last work was on the north shore connection and by divers, who made inspections to insure everything being in its proper place.

Completion of the work marks the ending of a government job begun six years ago. Soundings were made and plans prepared in the spring of 1908. Actual construction began a short time after, four south breakwater cribs having been placed that season.

PERE MARQUETTE PROBE ON

Auditor for Receivers of Railroad First Witness Called.

DETROIT, MICH. — The federal investigation of the financial affairs of the Pere Marquette railroad, now in the hands of receivers, was begun here with Attorney August G. Gutheim representing the interstate commerce commission.

Mr. Gutheim announced that an attempt will be made to secure an accurate analysis of the financial transactions in which the road has been involved. The testimony will then be turned over to the interstate commerce commission. The first witness was Clarence S. Sykes of Wayne, an auditor for the receivers.

KENT DEPUTY IS ARRESTED

Alleged to Have Shot Man During Brawl at Camp.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — As a result of the shooting of Angelo Palmeros, fifty-four, an Italian, at an interurban construction camp south of the city, Frank Wood, a deputy sheriff, and five Italian workmen were arrested.

Wood is alleged to have shot Palmeros during the attempt of officers to quell an outbreak at the camp. The five other Italians are being detained as witnesses. Palmeros is in St. Mary's hospital here with a bullet hole in his right leg and two fingers missing from his left hand.

GREAT MAJESTIC RANGES

ONE WEEK ONLY

DECEMBER 7th to 12th, 1914.

ONE WEEK ONLY

Save $8.00

As a special inducement during our demonstration week only with every MAJESTIC RANGE sold prices always the same we will give free one handsome set of ware as illustrated here.

Every piece of this ware is the best of its kind. Not a piece that is not needed in every kitchen. It cannot possibly be bought for less than $8.00. This ware is on exhibition at our store. DON'T FAIL TO SEE IT.

What Shall It Be?

Do you intend to continue using burning valuable fuel and destroying high priced food with that worn-out cook stove.

You KNOW that old stove eats up a lot of fuel each year. You KNOW you have trouble in getting it to bake just right, in fact spoil a batch of bread every once in a while—you know it costs considerable for yearly repairs.

Stop and think and figure. Wouldn't it pay you to buy a good range—a range with a reputation.

THE GREAT MAJESTIC MALLEABLE and CHARCOAL IRON RANGE

YOU make no mistake in buying the GREAT MAJESTIC—it's the range with THE REPUTATION—ask your neighbors. Then, too, it's made just right and of the right kind of material—MALLEABLE AND CHARCOAL IRON—riveted together practically air tight—lined with pure asbestos—parts being malleable can't break—has a movable reservoir and an oven that doesn't warp—that's why the MAJESTIC uses so little fuel, bakes just right every day in the year (browns bread just right all over without turning), heats 16 gallons of water while breakfast is cooking—properly handled lasts a lifetime, and costs practically nothing for repairs.

Don't buy the range you expect to last a lifetime "unsight unseen;" you'll be sure to be disappointed. Come to our store during demonstration week, see the GREAT MAJESTIC—have its many exclusive features explained—find out why the MAJESTIC is 300 per cent. stronger than other ranges where most ranges are weakest.

SOUVENIR DAY

100 TANGO HOOPS FREE
Tuesday, between 3 and 5 p. m.

The first 100 boys and girls who present to THE MAJESTIC RANGE SALESMAN at our store, between 3 and 5 p. m. TUESDAY, written answers to the following questions, will receive a "TANGO HOOP Souvenir" FREE.

1—What range is your mother now using?
2—Do you know anyone needing a new range? Why?
3—Why should the GREAT MAJESTIC RANGE be in every kitchen?

$1.00 ARTICLE FREE

The one giving neatest and best answer to the last question may select any $1.00 article from our stock, in addition to the SOUVENIR.

Don't be discouraged if you are not one of the 100 to get a Tango Hoop Souvenir. You will get a MAJESTIC PUZZLE CARD. Something for all the boys and girls.

Don't fail to get one of these Tango Hoops. It's a new and wonderful toy—amuses the old as well as the young. The Hoop dances forward, hesitates and returns to the operator. Children, it's great, and will be the talk of the town.

Be sure to have your answers ready to hand in at our store TUESDAY AFTERNOON, between 3 and 5. They must be written answers—OTHERWISE YOU WILL NOT get a souvenir.

Special All during this week a special demonstrator direct from the MAJESTIC FACTORY will be glad to show you ALL ABOUT RANGES—show you why the MAJESTIC is the best range on earth at any price.

Come, If You Intend To Buy Or Not

EDUCATION lies in KNOWING THINGS—KNOW why the oven of a range is heated—KNOW how the water is heated—HOW the top is heated—WHY the MAJESTIC uses so little fuel—KNOW how a range is made inside and outside. This education may serve you in the future. DON'T OVERLOOK a chance to KNOW THINGS shown by one who knows. COME.

DON'T OVERLOOK THE DATE.

PRESIDENT WILSON COMMENDS RED CROSS SEAL SALE

Will use Seals on all of his mail 115,000,000 now distributed.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 1, 1914. "May I not particularly express my interest in the Red Cross Christmas Seal," says President Wilson in a letter to The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, made public today. Beginning today, every letter going out of the White House for the next four weeks and from many of the government offices bears the Red Cross Seal.

As an expression of his interest in the anti-tuberculosis campaign, President Wilson writes to Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, Executive Secretary of The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

"May I not take this occasion to express to you my deep interest in the work of the National Anti Tuberculosis Association and my hope that its work is growing in efficiency and extent from year to year? May I not particularly express my interest in the Red Cross Christmas Seal whose sale has been the means of raising funds for the work? It seems to me that this is a particularly interesting and sensible way of enabling the people of the country to give this great work their support."

Over 115,000,000 Red Cross Seals are on sale today in every state in the Union, except Nevada, and even in Hawaii, the Canal Zone, and Vera Cruz.

Mrs. Peacock who has been visiting her cousins Mr. and Mrs. B. Hurrey left on a trip to California Monday morning.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready-made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it, it is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

Burdette the Burlington Hawkeye man is booked for Blissfield. His subject will be "Rise and Fall of the mustache".

A. M. Bigelow of Armada, Mich son of Rev. A. J. Bigelow of this place, stopped in town over Saturday and Sunday.

The township treasurer of Tecumseh has an extra good bond this year His sureties being P. Bills, L. Lilley, B. J. Bidwell and J. S. Strong.

John Hicks was home over last Sunday. He is still engaged in selling the Howe Scales and is now operating in the vicinity of Grand Rapids.

James C. Murry of Jamesport, Mo., arrived in Tecumseh Tuesday for a brief visit. He likes the situation there and is enjoying a good degree of business prosperity. He returns tomorrow.

Geo. Train of this village has a temperance pledge he signed Feb. 4, 1844 upon joining the Washingtonian Total Abstinence Society of Utica, N. J. It is upon a small card which he carries in his memorandum book.

Isaac Adams Jr. of Chicago was in Tecumseh last week and passed three or four days among his friends here. He is well pleased with the business out look in Chicago and is gradually working into a good practice. His friends will be glad to hear of his success.

The north wall of Hayden's new warehouse fell down last Thursday, the rain having soaked under the foundation, the foundation was soon repaired and the wall put up again, and the building is now ready for the roof. It will be entirely enclosed next week.

We were much pleased to take a look at the audience room of the M. E. church last evening by lamp light. The frescoing on this part of the church is nearly completed and it certainly is not to much to say that when finished it will make the most tasty and magnificent audience room in Tecumseh.

Adamson has his store filled up with new goods from floor to ceiling, and still he says more are coming every day. He certainly has the largest stock of these goods ever brought to Tecumseh.

On Monday evening Dec. 1st Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Conklin celebrated the 15 anniversary of their married life with a large and brilliant party at their farm residence about a mile north of town. All who were present voted in a brilliant gathering and united in wishing Mr. and Mrs. Conklin many years more of connubial joy.

Although the weather was somewhat unfavorable a large number of friends were present yesterday Dec. 3 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Temple to witness the marriage of their daughter Nellie to W. H. Ramsey of Reedsburgh, Wis. Among the friends from abroad were Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Merserve, Mrs. F. Johnson, Mrs. Mert Robison and sister of Toledo, O., and Miss Jessie Russell of Adrian.

RESEARCH CIRCLE.

The Research Circle met Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs C. B. Mize with a good attendance of members and guests.

The program in charge of Mrs. Earl Updyke was given as follows:

Mrs. A. C. Bryan gave an interesting description of the Industrial Trade School and The State School for the Blind which she recently visited in Saginaw.

Mrs. Belcher conducted a memory test which brought back the memory of several important facts, etc. that had been forgotten.

Mrs. Pangborn read a paper on "The Relation of the Club to the Home and School."

The Roll call was responded to with current events of the week.

At the close of the program light refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed, after which the ladies returned to their homes all agreeing that another very pleasant evening of the Circle had been added to the list of the past. The next meeting of the Circle will be held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. B. Garlinghouse.

PRESBYTERIAN FAIR.

The Presbyterian ladies held a very successful fair and dinner in the church parlors Thursday. The chicken-pie dinner called out over 200 diners and netted $57.90. THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT OF GIVING,

The ladies of the Monday Club have made an appeal for the Belgians and it is to be hoped that their appeal will meet with ready and generous response. Belgium a few months ago was the scene of peace and happiness: its fields, villages and cities filled with thrifty and industrious people, a nation of independence and wealth.

Then came the war and this beautiful country has been forced to fight for its life: its fertile fields over-ran by a foreign army, its homes destroyed, heavy taxes imposed upon its principal cities and in most cases those who are not fighting are forced to leave their homes and fly to safety.

We are all familiar with these conditions and in the spirit of the coming Christmas time may we give more to the sufferers both abroad and at home and less to those who are not in need We are quite sure that our friends whom we have remembered year after year, will understand and commend us if we convey to them our Christmas greeting by card or letter, laying aside an amount equal to the amount of our usual expenditure for gifts to friends and turning it into a fund for charity.

Remember all over this country men are out of work. There will be suffering at home and abroad, untold suffering. Let us give in the spirit of the Christ whose birthday we celebrate. Be less selfish and more charitable for the unfortunate. We trust that the appeal of the ladies will meet with a generous response.

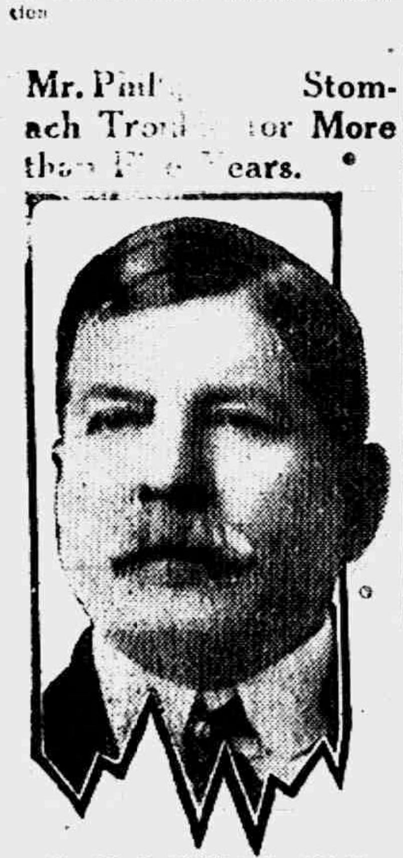
Can Learn From the Mule.

De Lawd made de mule fer give us a example of stubbornness; likewise ter show us how foolish it is ter be allus kickin' because you happen ter have de heels.—Atlanta Constitution.

Mr. Phil[illegible] Stomach Trou[illegible] for More than F[illegible] Years.



Mr. W. R. Phillips, Jr., 139 Moreland Ave., Atlanta, Georgia, writes: "I had the catarrh and stomach trouble for more than five years, and I faithfully tried all the medicines I saw advertised, and found they all failed to cure me. I then heard of Peruna. I purchased six bottles, and after their use I soon discovered that I was well, safe and sound. I now weigh two hundred and ten pounds, and have never been sick since I took Peruna. It surely is the best medicine for colds, stomach trouble and catarrh that I ever heard of."

A TECUMSEH MAN GIVES EVIDENCE

His testimony Will Interest Every Tecumseh Reader

The value of local evidence is indisputable. It is the kind of evidence we accept as true because we know we can prove it for ourselves. There has been plenty of such evidence in the Tecumseh papers lately, and this straightforward testimony has established confidence in the minds of Tecumseh people that will not be easily shaken.

[illegible] Tecumseh says: "I was caused a great deal of suffering by pains in the small of my back. When the attacks were present, I was hardly able to work. When stooping I became very dizzy and spots of fire seemed to flash before my eyes. I rested poorly and in the morning when I got up, was unrefreshed. I doctored and used remedies of various kinds, but got no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. They made me feel like a different person. Nothing me of the trouble. I gladly confirm my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Smith had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props. Buffalo, N. Y. adv

Gore, Ga. P. A. Morgan had occasion recently to use a liver medicine and says of Foley Cathartic Tablets: "They thoroughly cleansed my system and I felt like a new man—light and free. They are the best medicine I have ever taken for constipation. They keep the stomach sweet, liver active, bowels regular."

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh. adv

Keep it Handy for Rheumatism

No use to squirm and wince and try to wear out your Rheumatism. It will wear you out instead. Apply some Sloan's Liniment. Need not rub it in—just let it penetrate all through the affected parts, relieve the soreness and draw the pain. You get ease at once and feel so much better you want to go right out and tell other sufferers about Sloan's. Get a bottle of Sloan's Liniment for 25 cents of any druggist and have it in the house—against Colds, Sore and Swollen Joints, Lumbago, Sciatica and like ailments. Your money back if not satisfied, but it does give almost instant relief. Buy a bottle to-day.

A Test for Liver Complaint

Mentally Unhappy Physically, Dull

The Liver, sluggish and inactive, first shows itself in a mental state—unhappy and critical. Never is there joy in living, as when the Stomach and Liver are doing their work. Keep your Liver active and healthy by using Dr. King's New Life Pills; they empty the Bowels freely, tone up your Stomach, cure your Constipation and purify the Blood. Only 25c at your druggist's. adv

Best for Kidneys—Says Doctor.

Dr. J. T. R. Neal, Greenville, So. Car., says that in his 30 years of experience he has found no preparation for the kidneys equal to Foley Kidney Pills. In 50c and $1.00 sizes. Best you can buy for backache, rheumatism, kidney and bladder ailments. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh. adv

Your Cold is Dangerous Break it up—Now

A Cold is readily catching. A run down system is susceptible to Germs. You owe it to yourself and to others of your household to fight the Germs at once. Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey is fine for Colds and Coughs. It loosens the Mucous, stops the Coughs. It loosens the Mucous, stops the Cough and soothes the Lungs. It's guaranteed. Only 25c at your Druggist.

Checks Croup Instantly

You know croup is dangerous. And you ought to know too, the sense of security that comes from having Foley's Honey and Tar Compound in the house. It cuts the thick mucus and clears away the phlegm, stops the strangling cough and gives easy breathing and quiet sleep. Every user is a friend. For sale by all druggist of Tecumseh. adv

Prompt Action will Stop Your Cough

When you first catch Cold (often indicated by a sneeze or cough), break it up at once. The idea that "It does not matter" often leads to serious complications. The remedy which immediately and easily penetrates the lining of the throat is the kind demanded. Dr King's New Discovery soothes the irritation, loosens the phlegm. You feel better at once. "It seemed to reach the very spot of my Cough" is one of many honest testimonials. 50c. at your Druggist. adv

Truth and Love.

When I remember how earnestly men have striven to think their way into the secrets of the universe and how certainly they have failed I see clearly that only he who lives into truth finds it and that love alone is immortal.—Hamilton Wright Mabie.

Queer English.

Here is an example of the quaint misuse of words, the confusion of pronouns being not many years ago, whatever may be the case now, quite common among the country people of Hampshire, England: "If her won't go along o' we us won't go along o' she."

Typhoid in Belgium.

LONDON, ENG — Major Stedman writes from Calais to the Times that a typhoid epidemic is threatened in Belgium and that if it is left to develop it will quickly sweep the remaining Belgian troops from the field and will carry with it a large part of the civil population of west Flanders and northeast France. Twenty to thirty cases are arriving daily.

Is Your Stomach Wrong?

Sooner or later you will be wrong in every organ of your body. It is a well known fact that over 95% of all sicknesses are caused by ailments of the digestive organs. If you have the slighest suspicion that your stomach requires treatment, don't delay a moment. Little ills soon grow into serious ills.

DR. PIERCE'S Golden Medical Discovery

soon rights the wrong. It helps the stomach digest the food and manufacture nourishing blood. It has a tonic effect and soon enables the stomach and heart to perform their functions in a natural, healthy manner, without any outside aid.

As Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains neither alcohol nor narcotics there is no reaction. For over forty years it has stood the test of both use and abuse and is today the greatest remedy of its kind in the world. Begin now. Take it home today. Sold by Medicine Dealers in liquid or tablet form, or send 60c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for a trial box.

The Great Frederick's Joke.

The czar's changing of the name of his second and more modern capital from St. Petersburg to Petrograd may be paralleled by the case of the "new palace," Potsdam, which the Emperor Frederick decreed should henceforth be known as Friedrichskron. This new palace had been built by Frederick the Great at the close of his Seven Years' war just to show his enemies that his exchequer was by no means exhausted, and on its cupola are three nude figures, representing his chief female foes—Maria Theresa, Elisabeth of Russia and La Pompadour—with their backs turned toward their respective countries, supporting his crown of glory, hence "Friedrichskron." But one of the first acts of William II. was to restore to the palace its original name.—London Chronicle.

Music of the Drum.

Musical authorities seem agreed that when used in a proper way the drum is thoroughly musical. The common snare or side drum is freely used in musical composition. A large number of drummers performing simultaneously out of doors produce good music. In this connection Berlioz, the composer, pointed out that a sound that was insignificant when heard singly, such as the clink of one or two muskets at shoulder arms or the thud as the butt comes to the ground at ground arms, becomes brilliant and attractive if performed by a thousand men together.—Exchange.

Line Carrying Rockets.

The first line carrying rockets were invented in 1820 by an Englishman named Trengrouse and were soon after adopted by the Massachusetts Humane society for use at its stations, where they proved very successful, though today brass cannons are exclusively used for throwing lines to wrecks.

Canadian Musk Ox.

Many musk ox robes are in use in the province of Ontario for cold weather driving. They are rare and too costly to be common. No more luxurious robe can be had than the musk ox. Its long, woolly fur, some of it measuring fourteen inches long, defies the severest cold.

WHEN THE TIRED MOTHER GIVES OUT

What Then?—The Family Suffers, the Poor Mothers Suffer—Mrs. Becker Meets This Distressing Situation.

Collinsville, Ill.—"I suffered from a nervous break-down and terrible headaches, and was tired all over, totally worn out and too discouraged to enjoy life, but as I had four in family and sometimes eight or nine boarders, I kept on working despite my suffering.

"I saw Vinol advertised and decided to try it, and within two weeks I noticed a decided improvement in my condition and now I am a well woman."—Mrs. ANA BECKER, Collinsville, Ill.

There are hundreds of nervous, rundown, overworked women in this vicinity who are hardly able to drag around and who we are sure would be wonderfully benefited by Vinol as Mrs. Becker was.

The reason Vinol is so successful in building up health and strength in such cases is because it combines the medicinal tissue building and curative elements of cod's livers together with the blood making, strengthening properties of tonic iron. We ask every weak, nervous, run-down man or woman in this vicinity to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return their money if it fails to benefit.

NEWS OF THE STATE

One Killed, Three Injured.

DOWAGIAC, MICH. — When a bridge leading from the second story of the Bishop hardware store to another building gave way, Burr Means, forty-five years old, was killed and three other men were badly injured. The men were moving a boiler across the bridge when it fell. Means fell under the boiler. He leaves a family.

The injured men are William Neff, Arthur Witt and Samuel Garrett.

Arrest Caused by Appetite.

ESCANABA, MICH. — The limit in gluttony was revealed here in the arrest of Johannes Olsen, a woodsman. Olsen ate four suppers without asking permission of the owners. The suppers he ate in each case were for four or more persons. The limit was reached when Olsen offered to eat the "baby" in one home, which he entered.

It is estimated that Olsen ate in the neighborhood of thirty pounds of food on his rounds.

Bay City Editor Buried.

BAY CITY, MICH. — The funeral of Edwin D. Cowles, dean of Saginaw valley journalism, was held here. The body was carried from the residence, 415 Tenth street, to a special interurban car which conveyed it to Brady Hill cemetery, Saginaw. The services were conducted by Rev. Roland Connors, former Unitarian minister of Saginaw, a life-long friend.

Fail to Testify.

SAGINAW, MICH. — So dazed that his mind has not returned enough to talk coherently, Emil Hinte, who drove the auto in which two boys were killed when his machine hit a Michigan Central train, was unable to appear at the coroner's inquest. William McKellar, who was in the car, is also a nervous wreck and couldn't testify.

Says Cars Hid Approaching Train.

LANSING, MICH.—Doctors say that Charles Seeley, struck by the Detroit flyer on the Grand Trunk railroad at at Haslett, probably will recover. In explaining the accident, Seeley says he did not see the approaching train owing to freight cars on a curve. He tried to start his auto, which had stalled, and did not even hear the train.

Falls Between Cars.

FLINT, MICH. — Guy Shaw, twenty-eight years old, foreman in charge of a Pere Marquette switching crew at the Buick yards, stepped between two car roofs as he was reading his orders by lantern light and was instantly killed. He leaves a widow and one child.

Former Flint Reporter State Official.

FLINT, MICH. — When the new state officers of Idaho take office Jan. 1, George R. Barker, editor of the Review, published at Sand Point, will become secretary of state. Mr. Barker is a native of Flint, and served his newspaper apprenticeship here.

Will Ask Warrant for Lake City Man.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Carl Fellows, who was shot three times in a fight over a woman, has left Devore hospital, and charges George Harris of Lake City with the shooting. Fellows was shot twice in the neck and once in the shoulder.

Curls Hair; May Be Blind.

OWOSSO, MICH. — Miss Gladys Beard, eighteen years of age, of Modrice was curling her hair preparatory to going to a party when the curling iron slipped and seared the pupil and ball of the left eye. Doctors hope to save her sight.

Killed by Cave-In.

SAGINAW, MICH. — August C. Fethbrecckner, thirty-five, was killed in the Bliss coal mine by a cave-in of several tons of slate. No one saw the accident, but the noise of the falling slate attracted miners working in nearby rooms.

Miscegenator Admits It.

KALAMAZOO, MICH. — William Reed, the Marshall negro jailed on a charge of perjury for obtaining a marriage license in this county to wed a white girl of sixteen, informed the officers that he would not fight the charge.

Ferris Writes to Solons About Bill.

LANSING, MICH. — Governor Ferris has written to all the members of the legislature asking them to give early attention to the bill recommended by the commission appointed to investigate elimination of the law's delay.

Objects Because Tax Is Too Low.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH. — H. E. Smith has set a new record for Battle Creek. He is kicking because his tax assessment for street paving was not large enough. He is so insistent that the matter is being investigated.

KAISER'S SON TALKS ON WAR

Gives First Statement Issued by Royal Family.

Headquarters of the army of the German Crown Prince, by courier via Namur, Aix-la-Chapelle and The Hague to London; by cable to New York.—"Undoubtedly this is the most stupid, senseless and unnecessary war of modern times. It is a war not wanted by Germany, I can assure you, but it was forced on us, and the fact that we were so effectually prepared to defend ourselves is now being used as an argument to convince the world that we desired conflict."

In the above words Friedrich Wilhelm, crown prince of Germany and heir to the throne of the kaiser, opened the first interview he has ever given to a foreign newspaper man.

"I am a soldier and therefore can not discuss politics," said the crown prince, "but it seems to me that this whole business, all this action that you see around here, is senseless, unnecessary and uncalled for. But Germany was left no choice in the matter. From the lowest to the highest we all know that we are fighting for our existence. I know that soldiers of the other nations probably say, and a great many of them probably think, the same thing. This does not alter the fact, however, that we are actually fighting for our national life."

KING GEORGE

British Ruler Who Goes to the Front to Cheer His Soldiers.

LONDON — King George has left London for the front. Announcement of the departure of the king was made in the evening.

He is the last of the European rulers to visit their troops on the fighting line, with the exception of Emperor Franz Joseph. The czar has been to the front for extended periods. King Albert of Belgium is constantly with his soldiers, as is the kaiser. President Poincare has also visited French troops.

ESCAPED CONVICT REFORMS

Albert Dawson Barrett Weds and Becomes Valued Citizen of Michigan.

DETROIT, MICH.—Arbert Dawson Barrett, who escaped from the White Cloud, Minn., reformatory a year ago, came to Detroit, reformed, married and developed into a valued citizen of the state, will not be forced to return to Minnesota to complete his prison sentence, at least until after Jan. 15.

At the request of both state and defense Judge Connolly adjourned the habeas corpus proceedings against him until the middle of January. On Jan. 11 the Minnesota board of pardons will meet to consider Barrett's case, and it is generally believed here that as a result of influences from prominent persons in both states he will be given a parole.

AUTOS FROM COAST TO COAST

Local Consuls Make Simultaneous Trips on All Stretches of Route.

DETROIT, MICH.—Telegrams were received at the Lincoln Highway association headquarters here stating that every foot of the new 3,400 mile transcontinental road was covered by automobiles Saturday between 6 o'clock in the morning and 6 o'clocck in the evening.

The Lincoln highway consul at each important point drove to the next point west and return. The record breaking run was promoted by Lincoln highway officials to verify the announcement that the coast to coast route is now ready for automobile traffic.

Mills Goes to Prison.

MT. PLEASANT, MICH. — William Mills, twenty-two, the youngest of the trio suspected of causing the death of Maude Nestle last July, was taken to Jackson prison on a sentence of from seven to fifteen years imposed by Judge McDonald of Kent county. The other two men will stand trial.

LETS "JIM CROW" ACT STAND

Court Thinks Oklahoma Measure Invalid, but Refuses Injunction.

WASHINGTON — The judgment of the Oklahoma federal courts, which refused to enjoin the operation of the Oklahoma Jim Crow law, was affirmed by the supreme court. The lower court held the law constitutional, notwithstanding the section which provides sleeping, parlor and chair cars for white persons alone.

Although a majority of the court expressed the opinion that the law was invalid, this was not decreed because of error in the previous proceedings.

Real Estate King Dead.

NEW YORK — John G. Wendell, the "hermit of Fifth avenue," and multi-millionaire, died in Los Angeles. He was seventy-five years old. Next to the Astor estate he was probably the most extensive owner of real estate in New York City, and, like the Astors, he inherited the land.

Von Der Goltz Joins Sultan's Staff.

BERLIN — Field Marshal Baron Von Der Goltz has been relieved from his position of military governor of the portions of Belgium under German control and attached for the remainder of the war to the entourage of the sultan of Turkey.

Rebels Are Defeated.

PRETORIA — Official reports have been received here of successful skirmishes with rebels at Edenville and Bothaville. Several of the rebels were killed and 127 were captured. Large numbers have surrendered.

Won't Electrocute Ten Men.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. — Rather than electrocute ten men in this state who have been convicted and sentenced for death for various crimes, Luther Castling, electrician at the state penitentiary, presented his resignation to the prison commission. No action has been taken on the resignation, as the authorities say they know of no one who can take Castling's place.

HAS NOTABLE MARRIED LIFE

Ninety-two, He Observes Golden Wedding With Fourth Wife.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. Horace Barnaby of Caledonia, near here, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. The remarkable thing about this celebration is that the present Mrs. Barnaby is the fourth wife, all the others having died shortly after their marriages.

Mr. Barnaby is ninety-two years old and at one time was a member of the Michigan house of representatives. He is the father of ex-State Senator Barnaby of this city, and has another son in the auditor general's office at Lansing.

BE CAREFUL WHOM YOU HELP

Samaritan Minus $60, His Teeth and Christmas Spirit.

Battle Creek, Mich., Dec. 7.—Moved by the Christmas spirit Millard Veley of Charlotte readily consented to buy a meal for a hobo here.

In so doing he exposed $60 in greenbacks and the panhandler grabbed the roll. Veley pursued him two blocks until the tramp bent over, picked up a rock and heaved it into Veley's face, producing unconsciousness. When Veley came to, he was minus several teeth, $60 and the Christmas spirit.

IS DELAYED BY PROSPERITY

Preacher Can't Accept Call Because All Houses Are Rented.

Granite City, Ill., Dec. 7.—A "dilemma of prosperity" confronts Rev. E. W. McClusky of St. Louis, pastor elect of the Granite City Presbyterian church. All the houses in Granite City are rented, the demand being so keen that it is said "as soon as a man takes a spade in his hand his house is leased."

On this account Dr. McClusky is delaying about formal acceptance of his call, as he wishes to have a residence when he takes his family across the river.

Oldest Woman in Illinois.

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 7.—With the distinction of being the oldest woman in the United States whose age can be authenticated, and also of being the oldest woman voter, Mrs. Maria Clingman of Cedarville will celebrate her 105th birthday anniversary at her home in Cedarville on Dec. 12 next. Her descendants are planning to make this anniversary the most notable in her history, and there will be guests present from many states, all assembling to honor this interesting old lady, privileged to survive to such a remarkable age.

PANTHER PANIC GRIPS THEM

Posse Is Organized to Hunt Animal in Fulton County, Ind.

Rochester, Ind., Dec. 7.—Farmers living west of this city are aroused by a wild animal, which is believed to be a panther. Its peculiar cry has awakened many families at night and has caused children to run screaming to their mothers.

The farmers are preparing to organize a posse next week and hunt the animal.

POST ESTATE IS SUED FOR INHERITANCE TAX

Michigan Action Rests on Place of Legal Residence.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 7.—The state of Michigan, through Attorney General Fellows, has started suit by which it hopes to obtain an amount between $100,000 and $125,000 or double those amounts from the seven legatees of the estate of the late C. W. Post of Battle Creek, who died in California May 9.

Through the attorney general, Geo. I. Hauser, deputy auditor general, who has charge of inheritance tax matters in the auditor general's department, filed with Judge of Probate William H. Porter of Calhoun county, a petition asking for a determination of the amount of inheritance tax due the state.

The amount rests on whether Mr. Post was a resident of Michigan or Washington, D. C., as claimed by those who inherited his estate.

Should it be proved that he is a non-resident, the state will collect approximately $100,000 to $125,000, and if it should be proved that he was a resident of this state, the state will collect an amount nearly double that.

The will as filed shows that Mr. Post was a resident of Washington, where he owned a home, yet the state contends that Michigan was his residence, despite the fact he owned a home at the national capital. The estate is said to be close to $21,000,000, of which about $19,000,000 was in personal property.

ALTAR GERMS NOT CATCHING

Churches Needn't Supply Individual Communion Cups in Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 7.—Attorney General Fellows has ruled that churches do not need to furnish individual drinking cups for communion services. The opinion was asked by Rev. Chalker of Fowlerville.

The pastor wanted to know if the act providing for individual drinking cups for public use applied to churches.

Didn't Want Allimony.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 7.—When Judge George V. Weimer granted a divorce to Mrs. Mattie A. Gdushke he also ordered that her husband pay alimoney. "My husband was mean to me and I don't want to have anything to do with him," declared the woman. The order for alimony was then stricken out by the court.

Hog Cholera Rampant.

Owosso, Mich., Dec. 7.—Hog cholera is on the increase in Shiawassee county and the losses from the disease are very heavy. Droves belonging to Sidney Fulton of Morrice, C. Watts of Bryon and Frank Lepior have been practically wiped out. The loss to these men alone is placed at $1,000.

Fruit Bombardment Over War.

Lapeer, Mich., Dec. 7.—Otto Steinhoff, a German of this place, was severely injured when Nicholas Dionace, proprietor of a fruit store, threw several cocoanuts and other "wild" fruit at him. The cause of the bombardment was an argument over the war.

White Gets Verdict Over Callahan.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 7.—Charley White of Chicago, aspirant for the lightweight crown, further braced his hopes by winning from Frankie Callahan of Brooklyn in one of the best fights seen in St. Louis in years. Although it was White's fight in every round, the gameness of the eastern lad won him many friends. He fought through the sixth and seventh rounds although he was all but out, and took White's long range punches with a grin on his bleeding lips.

MICHIGAN POISON PEN TRIAL OPENS

Mrs. McCready Is Accused of Mailing Obscene Letters.

ELECT OF YPSILANTI VICTIMS

Sending of Letters to Husbands and Wives for Two Years Caused Serious Breaches in Many Families of Town—Only Prominent People Received Them.

Detroit, Dec. 7.—Mrs. Margaret McCready, formerly Miss Margaret Harper of Ypsilanti and charged by the government with being the author of a score or more obsence letters, mailed to prominent citizens of Ypsilanti, was placed on trial this afternoon, in the United States court, before Judge Arthur J. Tuttle.

The letters charged several Ypsilanti wives with infidelity to their husbands, breaches of matrimony and marriage ties. As a direct result, families were broken up, slander suits and counter suits were aired in the courts, and the letters, because of their obscenity, came to be known as the "poison pen" letters. All were anonymous. Suspicion rested on many, while outspoken charges were made against several persons. They always purported to come from a man.

History of Case.

For two years they kept the city in a continual ferment, making their appearance spasmodically. First a letter making charges of immorality and infidelity on the part of a wife would be mailed to the wife herself. If she appeared to take no cognizance of it, one repeating the charges, and sometimes adding more, would be mailed to the husband.

Post office inspectors and federal investigators worked on the case for a long time, before suspicion was directed toward Mrs. McCready, who lived with her father, C. O. Harper, at 210 South Washington street. In June of this year an indictment was returned by the federal grand jury in which she was charged with penning the missives.

On June 19, former Deputy United States Marshal John Trollope arrested her in her father's home. When informed that Mr. Trollope was a representative of the marshal's office and before he told her what he wanted, she exclaimed:

"Oh, it's about those letterss, I suppose. It's all spite work on the part of Jim Clark."

James Clark is a prominent citizen of Ypsilanti, and many of the letters purported to come from him. Some persons went so far as to openly accuse him of their authorship. He responded by beginning slander suits. He also conducted a little investigation to learn who wrote the letters.

Pen Expert Acts.

Mrs. McCurdy was a nurse in the Clark home before the letters first made their appearance in the town. Mrs. Clark whom she nursed died. A little later the letters began to appear. Sometime after the death of Mrs. Clark, Mrs. McCready went to California. The night she left a "poison pen" letter was mailed in Ypsilanti, and from that time until her return, no more were received. Coincident with her return letters again began to be received.

In his attempt to trace the course of the letters Clark took some of them to Albert S. Osborn, New York handwriting expert. He also took a bonafide letter received by him from Mrs. McCready and signed with her name. Mr. Osborn made an affidavit that the letters written and signed by the woman, were written by the same hand that penned the "poison pen" letters. Government investigators also went to Mr. Osborn and received the same verdict.

The first of the letters was received in 1912. The last to be received by Ypsilanti parties came June 2, 1914.

After the arrest of Mrs. McCready the letters ceased.

Autoist Sued for $10,000.

Rochester, Ind., Dec. 7.—Abraham Beribisky of this city has filed suit for $10,000 damages against Frank Meyers, whose son, it is alleged, drove an automobile over Beribisky's child last summer, inflicting injuries, which, the plaintiff contends, has cost him nearly the amount asked in doctor bills.

Woman Shot Accidentally.

Noblesville, Ind., Dec. 7.—Mrs. Jessie Harvey, wife of John Harvey, a farmer, was seriously wounded by the accidental discharge of a revolver with which her husband had been practicing. Mr. Harvey dropped the revolver and a bullet entered his wife's chest.

Woman Killed in Fall From Ladder.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 7.—Mrs. J. O. Ross was killed by a fall from a ladder while she was placing decorations at the Tabernacle Baptist church for the Christmas bazaar.

France Calls 300,000 Boys.

Bordeaux, Dec. 7.—(Via Paris.)—The three hundred thousand youths of eighteen years in France who normally would begin service in October of 1916, are by government decree to be called to present themselves for examination beginning Dec. 20. These youths probably will be sent to the fighting line next July.

Goat Contracts Disease.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 7.—A goat on the farm of Parker Gilly, near Oregon is the first victim of the foot and mouth disease so far reported, and has been ordered killed. On the same farm fifty-eight cattle and fifty hogs have the disease. On the Lamont and Rasmussen farm thirty-six cattle and sixty-eight hogs were ordered killed.

ANOTHER FAIR IS IN STRAITS

Exhibition in Elkhart County, Ind., Next Year May Be Last.

Goshen, Ind., Dec. 7.—Stockholders of the Elkhart County Fair and Agricultural association met in annual session here. Charles E. Beidig, Goshen lumberman, was chosen president to succeed Mayor Spohn, who had filled the place since 1911, and Frank E. Yoder of Milford was named secretary to succeed Benjamin G. Schaefer of Goshen. The cost of operating the fair increased from $5,022 in 1908 to $10,634 in 1913 and attendance has decreased since 1909. To avoid financial loss the directors two years ago raised the Thursday admission fee to 50 cents, but the plan proved a failure.

If the 1915 fair is not successful the organization will be abandoned, it was said today. The total debt is $6,700.

SHE KNEW YOUTH'S AILMENT

Mother, Defending Her Son, Uses Mopstick on Police

Elwood, Ind., Dec. 7.—Mrs. Leslie Doan belabored Chief of Police Parsons with a mopstick when an attempt was made at her home to arrest her son, Herman Doan, eighteen years old charged with stealing automobile tools. The son, who had feigned illness, revived sufficiently to push the officer through a glass door before he was dragged from the house.

Mrs. Doan had thrown herself on her son, who was lying in bed, apparently ill, when a patrolman went to the house. The policeman called Chief Parsons, Prosecutor Wilkie and a physician, who asserted the boy was shamming. Mrs. Doan then seized a mop and attacked the police chief before she could be disarmed. Her son had been arrested three times for alleged automobile thefts in recent months.

Change of Heart at Gary Shades "Red Light" Glare.

Gary, Ind., Dec. 7.—After one short week of the glare Gary's "red light" district has closed. Orders were issued by acting Chief of Police William Forbes and the resorts are dark.

The Gary Ministers' association is said to be responsible for the reversal of the policy announced last week to maintain a segregated district. Chief of Police Heintz is out of the city and the closing order was enforced during his absence.

GERMANY POISED FOR NEW ATTACK

Anxiety Felt for Developments in Eastern Terrain.

KAISER HAS REPAIRED LOSSES

New Attack Along 300-Mile Battle Front May Produce Most Sanguinary Battle World Has Ever Known—Germans Are Gambling With Fate That Destroyed Napoleon.

London, Dec. 7.—It would be impossible to overestimate the anxiety felt in Petrograd and reflected in Paris and in this city as regards the new developments in Poland. The hour is at hand for the combat which may well determine the campaign in the east. Upon the operations of the next few weeks depend not merely whether or not Russia is to seize Silesia and go forward to Berlin but whether or not the allies in the west are to maintain the offensive.

By exertions which dwarf any previous efforts, Germany has repaired her terrible losses between the Warthe and the Vistula, has withdrawn battered armies from the very jaws of the Russian trap, has hurried vast numbers from East Prussia, Posen, Silesia and even from Belgium and France, has solidified a battle line which stretches from Mlaya on the froniter of East Prussia and Poland to Cracow and is obviously ready and determined to brave the terrors of the winter and the superior numbers of the Russians in a third endeavor to seize Warsaw and the whole Vistula line southward to Sandomierz.

Poised for New Attack.

From a battle front of 300 miles, in which there are few gaps that are not amply held by nature, the Germans are poised for the new attack which will certainly produce the most sanguinary and ferocious battle the world has ever known. From resources of men and munitions, seemingly inexhaustible, Germany is ready for the most desperate gamble with destiny any nation ever essayed. Russia's great outer line of defense is winter itself, such bitterness of weather as humbled Napoleon. Russia has not less than 3,000,000 trained soldiers to meet the onslaught on fields of battle chosen not by the Germans but by a commander in chief who has proved himself a master of strategy Grand Duke Nicholas. Russia has the covert but effective aid of Polish people who have already and will again destroy their crops and burn their miserable huts rather than leave food and shelter for a German. And lastly, Russia possesses in the deep, rapid Vistula and the line of fortresses, an inner defense that may daunt even the Germans.

Some German Advantages.

Some points of advantage that the Germans have are some of the railways that touch the Russian frontier From Wirballen to Cracow and which enable her rapidly to transfer large forces from one threatened or weak point to another, a commander in chief, Marshal Van Hindenburg, who has proved himself to be the ablest probably of modern commanders, a military organization that is well nigh perfect, tremendous resolution and finally the assistance of a considerable force of Austrians who are massed between Czenstachova and Cracow.

For several days the fighting has indicated that there were no pitched battles, but rather a series of day and night engagements between relatively small forces of infantry, the Germans repelling assaults while reforming and strengthening their line.

A Little Tragedy of the Plains

The Woman Whose Day Had Passed

By MARJORIE BODLE

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

They counted it twenty miles from the Potter place to Edenville, twenty miles of crisp, sun-baked buffalo grass and monotonous, unending sky.

The hot wind from the south had come with the Potters today on their drive to town, but it went faster than the two hopeless bays could pull the old wagon, and so the dust whirled up from the wheels and the horses' feet and settled grimly all over the Potters.

It made the two Potter boys and the two little Potter girls, sitting down in the wagon bed, half heartedly quarrelsome and Mr. Potter, on the high seat, the lines hanging limply in his hand, silent and glum.

Mrs. Potter stopped jogging the fretful baby and tried to shade its red little face with her dusty handkerchief.

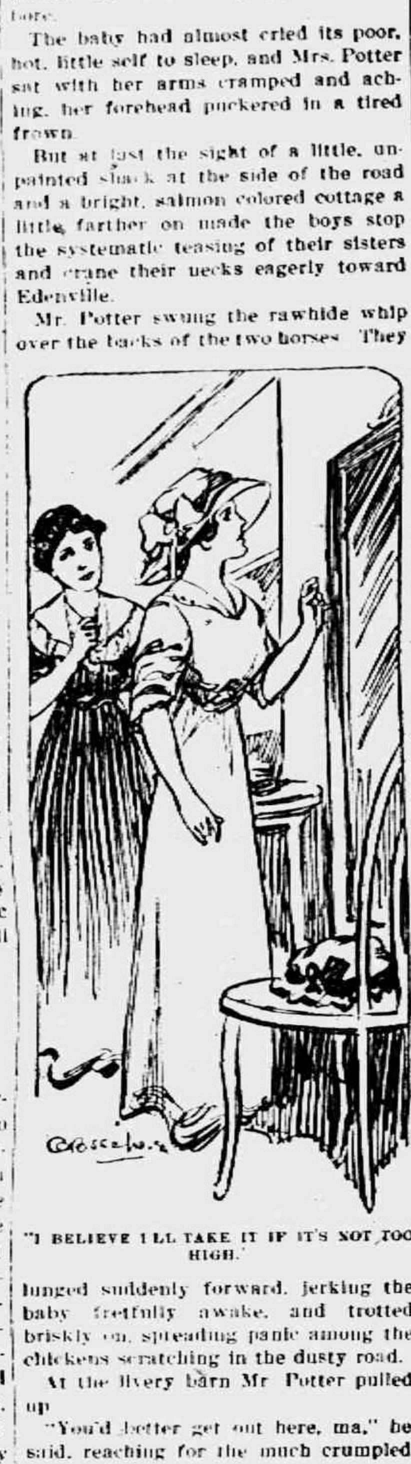
A hot gust of wind caught at her black hat and jerked it unceremoniously on one side. With the baby hanging over one arm she set her hat back again.

She glanced at her husband, with the usual feminine question, "Is it on straight?" on her lips, but with a look at him, staring moodily ahead, his mouth set unencouragingly, she forbore.

The baby had almost cried its poor, hot, little self to sleep, and Mrs. Potter sat with her arms cramped and aching, her forehead puckered in a tired frown.

But at last the sight of a little, unpainted shack at the side of the road and a bright, salmon colored cottage a little farther on made the boys stop the systematic teasing of their sisters and crane their necks eagerly toward Edenville.

Mr. Potter swung the rawhide whip over the backs of the two horses. They lunged suddenly forward, jerking the baby fretfully awake, and trotted briskly on, spreading panic among the chickens scratching in the dusty road.



"I BELIEVE I'LL TAKE IT IF IT'S NOT TOO HIGH."

At the livery barn Mr. Potter pulled up.

"You'd better get out here, ma," he said, reaching for the much crumpled youngest.

Mrs. Potter climbed stiffly out over the wagon wheel and held up her arms. The little Potters clambered out, and the girls stood silent and close to their mother.

"Me and the boys 'll go over and get their things now. You go get you and the girls fixed up, ma, and then come over to Martin's. I'll load up the groceries there."

"All right, pa," his wife answered, tucking a hanging lock of hair behind her ear. "But I—I guess I'll have to have a little money."

"Will that do you, d'you think?"

Mr. Potter leisurely took a bill from his worn, reddish pocketbook and handed it to her, generously beneficent in his capacity as dispenser of funds.

"Yes, that'll be plenty, Will." And nervously: "Now, you hurry, pa. We don't want to be late getting started home."

"Oh, I guess we'll be ready by the time you women folks get fixed up with hats," and pa chuckled in high good humor, now that the long drive was over.

Mrs. Potter smoothed the baby out as well as she could. The baby, worn out by the long ride, protested only feebly.

With her free hand their mother straightened Mary's sunbonnet and Lucy's sprigged percale apron and shook out the streaks of dust from her own cheap black serge.

With the little girls close at her heels, she walked down the one sided Main street to a store where "Miss Ellis, Millinery, Dry Goods and Notions" was painted in yellow and black on the false front.

Inside it was cooler and shaded. The counters and shelves, with the [illegible] of lawns and calicoes, seeming to run largely to grays and blues, and the notions, among which were displayed attractive side combs and irresistible ribbon bows, were all arranged in careful order. And the hats—such creations!

Mrs. Potter gazed at them with admiring eyes. She stood for a moment uncertainly. Then Miss Ellis herself came forward, large and complacent, in cool gray chambray, with smoothly combed black hair and a dark down upon her upper lip which rivaled the notion counter in the attention of the children.

"Why, how d'you do, Mrs. Potter?" Miss Ellis was most cordial. "When did you get in town? The darlin' baby! And both the little girls too. My! Aren't you tired out this hot afternoon? Just set down here, Mrs. Potter. You came in to do some buyin', I suppose?"

"Yes'm. I thought I'd get me and the girls fitted out with hats, though it's pretty late to be gettin' them."

Her sunburnt face flushed a little.

"Oh, we have some nice hats left, Mrs. Potter, though, of course, the stock's a little picked over. Shall we take you first? Oh, the little girls? Let's see. What are their names? Oh, yes; Mary and Lucy. All right. We have the very things"—

Miss Ellis helped their mother untie their bonnets in preparation for the ceremony of trying on. The little girls were frightened at first, but they grew dazed with joy when they found themselves radiantly hatted, one with blue flowers and ribbons, the other with pink.

At last they knew them for their very own. The rubbers were slipped under their proudly lifted chins, and it was Mrs. Potter's turn.

"You can put the baby here." Miss Ellis offered a cushioned armchair. "Poor little thing—it's all tired out," and "it," who was, in truth, of feminine gender and labeled "Alva Jane," was gently deposited, warm and red and sound asleep on the calico cushion.

Mrs. Potter brushed at her black dress and felt nervously at her black hat. It was very old, and the felt and the ribbons were dusty and limp.

She put it on a chair beside her and smoothed vainly at her roughened, faded hair. Her face was lined and weary, and her eyes, which were blue and should have been pretty, were reddened from the sun and wind.

She stood passively while Miss Ellis selected a hat and placed it on her head. It was a large hat, with a softly drooping brim, with mounds of chiffon and big pink roses.

Mrs. Potter looked almost timidly into the glass, and then she forgot that she was stiff and tired from her ride and that her face was dusty and her hair stringy. She was gazing at the mirrored reflection of the hat.

"That certainly does look good on you, Mrs. Potter," said Miss Ellis, who was a milliner of business rather than aesthetic principles.

"Oh, do you think so?" Mrs. Potter hesitated.

She reached up and felt nervously of a pink rose with her brown hand, awkward in the black cotton mitt.

"Well, I certainly do. Just look at them roses. And the amount of pink chiffon that's on that hat—it's sure the hat for you, Mrs. Potter," Miss Ellis went on encouragingly, but her customer was not listening to her at all. She was looking into the mirror at something for which Miss Ellis had not the gift of sight.

She saw a girl's face, sweet and pretty, with pink cheeks, and big blue eyes, and golden brown hair. And shading it was the wonderful hat of chiffon and roses.

The reflected face, which Miss Ellis would have said was old looking and very tired, flushed, and the eyes brightened and filled a little. Mrs. Potter, with the glory of her vision upon her, turned to the milliner.

"It's like one I had the summer Will and I was married," she said. "He liked it. He said it just suited me." The flush deepened. "I believe I'll take it if it's not too high and you think"—

Mary and Lucy had recovered from the awe of their new hats and were playing hide and seek among the counters.

Mary ran around to where her mother stood. Mary was used to her mother in a chronically old blue calico sunbonnet or the black felt with the rusty, crumpled ribbon, but this! Mary had not known her mother fifteen years ago, and she did not understand.

She looked a moment, puzzled and dismayed.

"Why, mamma!" she said slowly and then gurgled in delighted appreciation of the joke.

"Oh, Lucy!" she cried gleefully and dragged her sister around where she could see. "Come and look at mamma. Ain't she funny in that pretty hat?"

Mrs. Potter turned suddenly again to the glass.

The light from a back window fell glaringly across her. She saw the pink billows of chiffon and the roses and the soft white brim drooping over her tanned face. The glass blurred before her. She could hardly think or move for a minute.

Then she roused herself and lifted the hat from her head. Her rough fingers caught in the soft chiffon as she set it down.

"I guess I won't get my hat today, after all, Miss Ellis," she said dully. "Come on, children; your pa'll be waiting for us."

And she pinned on the old black felt.

Ready For the Wash.

Mrs. Commuter, basely deserted by her maid at the eleventh hour, mobilized a Swedish reserve in desperation for the dinner party. All the English the new domestic understood was the sign manual, but an hour's drill put her in some shape for service. The dinner went well until dessert. The Swede forgot the finger bowls, which should have been upon the plates. Mrs. Commuter employed the sign manual under cover of the table illustrating the washing and drying of hands. The Swede nodded, went on and returned.

Mrs. Commuter turned to find the new domestic at her elbow. Serenely she held a dishpan of hot water, a cake of yellow washing soap and the kitchen roller towel.—New York Post.

Easy.

"Some folks," said the busy woman, "take life easy, as easy as the new hired girl wanted to take her new place.

"'Everything goes by clockwork here,' the mistress said to this girl—'by clockwork, mind you. You get up at 6, you dine at 12, and you go to bed at 10.'

"'Well, if that's all,' said the girl, with a smile, 'I think I will be able to manage it.'"

Breathing.

To learn to breathe properly inflate the lungs and walk for five paces, keeping the mouth shut and breathing through the nose, increasing the five paces to ten and then to fifteen or more. Follow this up by taking several long breaths after getting up in the morning and again before retiring.

Dryden and His Wife.

Dryden married Lady Elizabeth Howard, a shrew of marked ability. She complained that he showed her no attention and wished herself a book that she might enjoy more of his society. "Wish yourself an almanac, my dear. Then I could change you every year."

A Negotiable Draft.

"Well," replied the physician when his patient wife asked him for money, "I hope to cash a draft soon and then"—

"Cash a draft? What draft?"

"The one I saw Mr. Oldtown sitting in this morning."

HOW TO USE THE RED CROSS SEALS

Red Cross seals should in accordance with Order No. 5,020 of the Post-office Department, "be affixed to the reverse side of domestic mail matter," and not on the address side of any letters or packages that are going through the mail. They may be placed anywhere on matter going by express. As many seals may be used on the back of a letter or package as may be desired. Care should be exercised in sending merchandise through the mails not to place seals over the strings with which the package is tied since this seals the package against inspection and subjects it to first-class postage rates. Users of Red Cross Seals are cautioned against their indiscriminating use on foreign mail. Red Cross Seals in normal times may be used on the reverse side of mail matter sent to Austria, Germany, Great Britain and most of the British colonies, except India and Australia. Guatemala, Uruguay and Portugal refuse to admit mail bearing non-postage stamps. Certain European countries will return to the sender any mail bearing Red Cross Seals on the address side. Mail addressed to any of the belligerent countries in Europe should not bear the Red Cross seal. Red Cross Seals may be used on the face of checks, on bills, on legal documents and on any commercial paper. These Christmas Seals are not good for postage. They will not carry any mail matter, but any kind of mail matter will carry them

Wagner and His Dog Peps.

Richard Wagner's fondness for his faithful dog Peps is well known. At the time when almost all the musical world had turned against him he would sometimes in his walks with the dog declaim aloud against his foes. Then the dog would rush backward and forward, barking and snapping, as if helping his master to defeat his enemies. When Wagner returned home from an excursion to some other city Peps would always receive a present as well as the other members of the family. "Peps received them joyfully," he writes to a friend after one of these excursions. When the time came for the little life to be ended Wagner scarcely left the dying dog's side. He even put off two days an important journey because of Peps' illness and death. He writes afterward to his friend Praeger: "He died in my arms on the night of the ninth, passing away without a sound, quietly and peacefully. On the morrow we buried him in the garden beside the house. I cried much, and since then I have felt bitter pain and sorrow for the dear friend of the past thirteen years."—Argonaut.

Condensed Language.

"Samoa has an ideal language, and there it was I got my inspiration," says Gelett Burgess in "Burgess Unabridged." "Can't we make English as subtle as Samoan? I wondered. There they have a single word, meaning, 'A-party-is-approaching-which-contains-neither-a-clever-man-nor-a-pretty-woman.' Another beautiful word describes 'A-man-who-climbs-out-on-the-limbs-of-his-own-breadfruit-tree-to-steal-the-breadfruit-of-his-neighbor.' 'Sulia' means 'Change-the-subject-you-are-on-dangerous-ground.' Another happy word expresses a familiar situation, 'To-look-on-owl-eyed-while-others-are-getting-gifts.' Have we anything in English as charmingly tactful as this? No, our tongue is almost as crude as pidgin English itself, where piano is 'Box-you-fight-him-cry.'"

His Second Thought.

A politician named Blank got a place for a clerk during one of the sessions of the legislature of his state. The clerk was very grateful. At the end of the session he came around to Blank and said: "Mr. Blank, I want to tell you how much I am indebted to you for your kindness in getting me the place I have had. It meant more to me, Mr. Blank, than you may think. I thank you from the bottom of my heart. Also, I want to say, Mr. Blank, that if there ever comes a time when I can do anything for you—anything at all—you are to command me. I will do anything you may ask me to do. I am at your service."

Blank thanked the man, and he started to go. As he reached the door he turned and said, "Of course, Mr. Blank, I would prefer that it should be something honorable."

Chemical Prints.

Here is a way to take a picture in the dark: Draw a picture on a piece of paper, using sulphate of quinine in making the outlines. Expose the paper to the sun for a few minutes, then place the paper face down on a piece of sensitive paper, like that used by photographers, and place the two sheets between the leaves of a book. If the sheets are removed from the book a few hours later you will find that an exact reproduction of the drawing will have been impressed on the sensitive paper. Designs of any sort can be copied in this way, or you may trace over a printed picture or design with sulphate of quinine and by the same process produce a faithful copy of the print.

Great Generals, but Bad Shots.

Curiously enough, although good shooting on the part of the rank and file is all important for success in warfare, two of the greatest generals in history were notably bad shots. The only time Napoleon went out game shooting he killed one of the dogs, and Wellington's record on a similar occasion proved even worse.

Lady Shelley records in her diary on Sept. 8, 1819, when the duke was staying at her place in Sussex, that she accompanied the guns in the afternoon. "The hero of Waterloo was a very wild shot. After wounding a retriever and later on peppering a keeper's gaiters he sprinkled the bare arms of an old woman who chanced to be washing clothes at her cottage window. 'My good woman,' I said, 'this ought to be the proudest moment of your life. You have had the distinction of being shot by the Duke of Wellington.' * * * Her face was wreathed in smiles as the contrite duke slipped a gold coin into her hand."—Pall Mall Gazette.

RELIEF WORK—THE PRESENT NEED.

The situation in Belgium, from the standpoint of the people of the United States, is the phase of the European struggle that most urgently demands attention. The great powers engaged in war can for the present provide for their own soldiers, whether fighting at the front or disabled and in hospital. It is as much a part of the military organization of the great European countries to provide for their wounded as to supply their men with arms and munitions. It is a gracious thing when individuals in a neutral country like the United States choose to aid belligerent nations in the merciful work of caring for men wounded in war. But it is obvious, on a moment's reflection, that all of the great powers engaged in the present conflict have the most ample facilities for surgical care and the nursing of their own soldiery. England has not been invaded; only a very small portion of Northern France is held by the enemy; Germany is untouched except for the fringes of East Prussia and Posen, and the greater part of Austria is far from the scene of Russian attack. The resources and facilities of these nations are fully equal to the care of their own wounded men. From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for December.

Sitting Cross Legged.

The next time you ride in a street car notice the number of people who sit cross legged. It has been estimated that four-fifths of them do. Probably you do. A prominent London physician has investigated the habit, and his advice is "don't sit cross legged." He states that the prime objection to the habit is that the return flow of blood is stopped at the knee, the result being that the veins in the leg swell up. As all of the weight is thrown to one side of the body, the under leg is likely to go to sleep. The body should be equally balanced. Much crossing of the legs is also dangerous in that it is likely to cause lopsidedness. The limbs should be allowed to rest easily, so that the flow of blood is natural and the body equally balanced.—American Boy.

Struggle to Hide the Truth.

"What makes you insist on always dancing with that girl? You know you dance badly."

"That's true," replied the determined youth. "I think a lot of that girl. If I dance with her instead of letting her sit down and watch me at a distance maybe I can keep her from seeing what a fearful dancer I really am."—Washington Star.

Arabic Alphabet.

The Arabic alphabet has twenty-nine letters, each of which is written differently, according as it stands alone or, in combination with other letters, at the beginning, middle or end of a word. To learn the alphabet, therefore, means to memorize 4×29=116 different signs.

Push.

"Push," says a modern philosopher, "should be the big word in the vocabulary of every beginner. There is no such thing as 'pull' applied to bodies. The engine never pulls a train, but pushes it. The coupling of the engine always extends behind that of the car following and does actually shove it forward." But the pessimist will not be silenced. He only shifts to "Who's back of him?"—Pittsburgh Sun.

Dancing.

The art or exercise of dancing can be traced back to the early Egyptians, who ascribe that invention to their god Thoth. Beyond a doubt dancing is much older than history. It began in connection with religious rites and was performed in honor of the deities that were worshiped

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready-made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B. J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it. It is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

Railway Travel In Germany.

Praise of railway traveling facilities in Germany is given by Miss Norma Lorimer in her book, "By the Waters of Germany:"

"Although we were only traveling third class we had little tables to eat at, and the upholstered seats were wide and well adapted to suit the comfort of women. * * * I was thankful on that hot day that the seat was free from any kind of upholstering and for the fresh air installation, which is fixed in the roof, along with the electric light. One of the other good points about German railway traveling is that a stewardess attends to the comfort of the passengers on board just as a ship's stewardess does at sea. She tidies up the carriages after messy meals have been eaten from baskets * * * until it is no difficult matter to arrive at the end of a long day's journey in almost as dustless and fresh a condition as one started out."

How Bodies Fall.

Answering the question, "Why is it that falling bodies in the air manage to reach a spot directly below them if the earth is in continual motion?" Edgar Lucien Larkin, in the New York American, says:

"They do not fall on a spot exactly below the point where released and let fall. Go up to the center of the dome of the capitol at Washington, or center of interior of the Washington monument, and drop an absolutely round ball in absolutely still air, and it will strike the floor slightly to the east of the precise vertical. The earth revolves from west to east, therefore dome and top of monument traverse wider circles than do their bottoms, hence move faster. The ball, having motion of starting point, falls to the east of base—vertical—point. True of all points on earth except at poles."

Easily Settled.

"Coming over on an ocean liner from England a few years ago," said a New Yorker, "an argument had arisen among us as to which was the more simple of the two currency systems, dollars and cents, or pounds, shillings and pence. At last, the captain arriving, we decided to refer the matter to him and surrender our judgment to his arbitration.

The captain, an Englishman of the very stolid sort, after a period of reflection replied very slowly and with all the gravity of a judge:

"Pounds, shillings and pence is the simpler system, for don't you know that when you are told the price of a thing in dollars and cents you always have to convert it into pounds, shillings and pence."

There was a little objection to this theory, but in general it was perfectly satisfactory so long as the voyage lasted.

Submarine Cables.

The first cable successfully laid extended from Valentia island, off the coast of Ireland, to Heart's Content, Newfoundland, about 2,000 miles. The cable was landed on the American side on Aug. 5, 1858, but was not ready for use till Aug. 16. About 700 short messages were sent through it, but it entirely failed within a month. The fact was demonstrated, however, that direct communication under the ocean was possible, although few persons at that time believed that a submarine telegraph could be used for business purposes. Cyrus W. Field, to whose enterprise was due the laying of the first cable, thought differently. Not discouraged by this and other failures, he continued the work he had planned, interested London capitalists in it, and in 1863 succeeded in establishing submarine communication, which has never been interrupted.

For Whom Is the Christmas Money Club?

To take part in the Christmas custom of giving requires a little money---and to help others to save and join in the great holiday spirit of Cheer and Good Will is the useful service of The Christmas Money Club.

Club Opens for Members Monday, December 14.

In addition to the people who were members during 1914, and will receive Christmas checks in a day or two, anybody can join the 1915 club.

1 The people who want money for 1915 Christmas purposes but feel they cannot take it out of their earnings in a lump sum.

2 Those who would like to save money, but are undecided as how to make the start.

3 The husband and wife who want to begin saving by a plan for a home. The Christmas Money Club is a good beginning.

4 Young people who want to begin saving for college.

5 Persons who save regularly, but want to save something extra for Christmas money.

6 Mechanics and workmen. Every workman knows the value of saving. He knows how a few cents each week count up.

A few cents deposited regularly each week will bring you a check for from $12.75 to $127.50 or more. Deposits can be made monthly if desired.

December 10, 1915, you will receive your Christmas money.

We are here to answer your questions. Come in tomorrow and get a circular fully describing the plan

THE MONDAY CLUB.

Despite the inclement weather there was a fair turnout of the members of the Monday Club Mrs. T. C. Harris was leader for the afternoon. Mrs. Chas. Williamson had a paper on Tintoretto which was illustrated with the Padiopticon. Mrs. E. M. Lewis had a fine paper on Italy and the Catholic Revival. The committee had a suppy of work ready for the ladies to take home and finish for the Belgium relief work.

JUDGE J. L. O'MEALEY

Dies Suddenly Sunday Morning

J. L. O'Mealey of Adrian, Judge of of the Lenawee Circuit Court passed away suddenly morning about 5 o'clock He had been to the bath room and to the room where his grandchildren lay sleeping and returning to bed, went to sleep. His difficult breathing attracted the attention of Mrs. O'Mealey who tried to awaken him. Drs. Seager and Spafford were called, but he was beyond help.

He had been in poor health for a number of years, from hardening of arteries, and later, an attack of pneumonia and a nervous breakdown added to his weakened condition. For a few months past, his family have thought his condition much improved.

Judge O'Mealey has been before the public in official work since 1885 and was a partner of Mr. Saulsbury until the time of his death, since which he has run his office alone. He has been judge of the Circuit Court for the past six years.

His funeral was held this (Tuesday) afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the home.

Bluffed Savage King Mtesa.

When the well known African traveler Dr. Robert Felkin was staying with the bloodthirsty King Mtesa of Uganda many years ago the king, out of gratitude for his visitor's medical treatment, wished to cut off his head. On Dr. Felkin representing that the treatment was not finished and that if interrupted it would cause Mtesa's death the latter granted him a reprieve until he was quite recovered. Then the execution was determined upon. Emin Pasha, who was a friend of Dr. Felkin, had instructed him most accurately about the state of affairs in Uganda and had revealed to him an important state secret—namely, where Mtesa's powder store was hidden. Dr. Felkin remembered this at the right moment and as a last resort threatened that if Mtesa killed him he would bring down a flash of lightning upon his powder store. Mtesa replied incredulously, "Tell me where it is," whereupon Dr. Felkin whispered in his ear, "It is concealed under your harem."

Mtesa turned pale and allowed Felkin and his companions to live. The lightning maker's authority increased when next day a flash of lightning happened to strike near the harem.

A Frank Philosopher.

Charles Eliot Norton in his Harvard lectures on the history of art used often to describe a meeting between Thomas Carlyle and the philosopher Mallock.

"Mallock was a wise man," he would say, "but his views differed from Carlyle's, and hence, though they were true views, Carlyle deemed them false and pernicious. We should all cultivate a broad outlook, so as to escape from the narrow intolerance of a Carlyle. When Mallock called on Carlyle he talked in his fluent way for two straight hours. Then he rose to go. At the door Carlyle, who had smoked the whole time in grim silence, took his pipe from his mouth and said mildly:

"'Weel, goodby, Mr. Mallock. I've received ye kindly because I knew yer mither, but I never want to set eyes on ye again.'"

RAILROADS APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

The Common Carriers Ask for Relief—President Wilson Directs Attention of Public to Their Needs.

The committee of railroad executives, headed by Mr. Frank Trumbull, representing thirty-five of the leading railroad systems of the nation, recently presented to President Wilson a memorandum briefly reviewing the difficulties now confronting the railroads of the country and asking for the co-operation of the governmental authorities and the public in supporting railroad credits and recognizing an emergency which requires that the railroads be given additional revenues.

The memorandum recites that the European war has resulted in general depression of business on the American continent and in the dislocation of credits at home and abroad. With revenues decreasing and interest rates increasing the transportation systems of the country face a most serious crisis and the memorandum is a strong presentation of the candle burning at both ends and the perils that must ultimately attend such a conflagration when the flames meet is apparent to all. In their general discussion the railroad representatives say in part: "By reason of legislation and regulation by the federal government and the forty-eight states acting independently of each other, as well as through the action of a strong public opinion, railroad expenses in recent years have vastly increased. No criticism is here made of the general theory of governmental regulation, but on the other hand, no ingenuity can relieve the carriers of expenses created thereby."

President Wilson, in transmitting the memorandum of the railroad presidents to the public, characterizes it as "a lucid statement of plain truth." The president, recognizing the emergency as extraordinary, continuing, said in part:

"You ask me to call the attention of the country to the imperative need that railway credits be sustained and the railroads helped in every possible way, whether by private co-operative effort or by the action, wherever feasible of governmental agencies, and I am glad to do so because I think the need very real."

The conference was certainly a fortunate one for the nation and the president is to be congratulated for opening the gate to a new world of effort in which everyone may co-operate.

There are many important problems in our complex civilization that will yield to co-operation which will not lend themselves to arbitrary rulings of commissions and financing railroads is one of them. The man with the money is a factor that cannot be eliminated from any business transaction and the public is an interested party that should always be consulted and happily the president has invited all to participate in the solution of our railroad problems.

The Fish in Crater Lake.

Originally there were no fish in Crater lake, one of nature's wonders on the summit of the Cascade range in southern Oregon. Rainbow trout were planted, and now they swarm the waters, ranging up to ten pounds in weight. The lake itself has an area of twenty and one-fourth square miles (water surface), which is situated in the caldera of an extinct volcano. It is surrounded by unbroken cliffs, which range from 500 to nearly 2,000 feet in height.—Argonaut.

Unpleasant to Have Around.

"Are you still engaged to Mr. Briggs?"

"No, I broke it off last week. I was afraid to marry him. He knows too much. I gave him some ribbon to match. He found it in the first store he went to, and he bought it for 2 cents below the regular price."

Philosophical.

"Dear Charles," said Mrs. Flimgilt, "used to send me alimony every month without a murmur."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "he says it's a great comfort to turn over a bunch of money to you without an argument because it isn't more."—Washington Star.

Helping the Poet.

Longfellow, the great poet, was noted for his fondness for children, and this extended to all little folks, whether of his family or not. There was one little boy of whom he was very fond and who came often to see him. One day the child looked earnestly at the long row of books in the library and at length asked, "Have you 'Jack the Giant Killer?'" Longfellow was obliged to confess that his great library did not contain that venerated volume. The little fellow looked very sorry and presently slipped down from the poet's knee and went away. But the next morning Longfellow saw him coming up the walk with something tightly clasped in his little fists. The child had brought 2 cents with which Longfellow was to buy a "Jack the Giant Killer" of his own.

Napoleon and Tobacco.

Napoleon, who tried to smoke once and then with dire results, instituted the French tobacco monopoly, which the German government now proposes to adopt so far as cigarettes are concerned. At a court function held early in 1810 the emperor remarked a lady wearing jewels of such magnificence that he inquired how her husband made his money. "He is a tobacco merchant," was the reply, which led him to seek further information as to such a profitable business. Before the year expired Napoleon issued a decree restricting the sale and manufacture of tobacco exclusively to the state. It has remained a monopoly ever since and for many years past has brought in an annual revenue of over $80,000,000.

Steel Points.

The expression "well tempered" or "finely tempered" steel is generally misused. It is usually taken to indicate steel of extra hardness, whereas the reverse in the case, though very few people are aware of the fact.

The greater the degree of tempering the softer the steel. The steel worker measures the degree of tempering by the color of the metal. Thus the hardest—namely, the least tempered—steel is light straw in color, while the softest kind is white.

Between these extremes, commencing from the hard end of the scale, are the following shades: Straw, dark straw, light bronze, bronze, dark bronze, light blue, blue, dark blue.

Tempering steel is a very delicate business and one calling for that sense of what is "just right," which is found in good cooks.—London Answers.

Brutalities at Sea.

Naval punishments were brutally severe in the seventeenth century. They marooned—that is, they set a man ashore alone on a desolate coast or island and left him to starve, to be destroyed by savages or wild beasts. They keelhauled—that is, they dragged a man naked by yardarm whips under the bottom of the ship and drew him up raw and bloody with the harsh wounding of barnacles and spikelike adherences only to be submerged afresh ere the unhappy miscreant could fetch a full breath. They nailed a man to the mainmast by driving a knife through his hand. For murder (that was often manslaughter) they tied the living to the dead, back to back, and threw them overboard.

Russia's Baltic Ports.

Four out of the five great ports of Russia—Petrograd (formerly St. Petersburg), Reval, Libau and Riga—are situated on the Baltic sea. Of these only Libau is an open port all the year round, the others being ice bound for from four to five months each year.

Physically and Mentally Worn Out—Tells How Nervous and Crying Spells Were Ended by Vinol.
Monmouth, Ill.:—"I was weak, worn-out and nervous. I had no appetite and was getting so thin and discouraged, one day I just broke down and cried when a friend came in and asked me what was the matter. I told of my condition and how nothing I took seemed to do me any good. Vinol was suggested. I got a bottle and before it was half gone I could eat and sleep well. I continued its use and now my friends say I look ten years younger, and I am well, healthy and strong. I wish I could induce every tired-out, worn-out, nervous woman to take Vinol."—Mrs. HARRIET GALE, Monmouth, Ill.
There are many over-worked, tired-out careworn, nervous women in this vicinity who need the strengthening, tissue building, and vitalizing effects of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, and so sure are we that it will build them up and make them strong that we offer to return their money if it fails to benefit.
Vinol is a delicious preparation of the extract of cod liver oil and peptonate of iron and contains no oil.

MARKETING WORLD'S GREATEST PROBLEM

WE ARE LONG ON PRODUCTION, SHORT ON DISTRIBUTION.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The economic distribution of farm products is today the world's greatest problem and the war, while it has brought its hardships, has clearly emphasized the importance of distribution as a factor in American agriculture and promises to give the farmers the co-operation of the government and the business men in the solution of their marketing problem. This result will, in a measure, compensate us for our war losses, for the business interests and government have been in the main assisting almost exclusively on the production side of agriculture. While the department of agriculture has been dumping tons of literature on the farmer telling him how to produce, the farmer has been dumping tons of products in the nation's garbage can for want of a market.

The World Will Never Starve.

At no time since Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden have the inhabitants of this world suffered from lack of production, but some people have gone hungry from the day of creation to this good hour for the lack of proper distribution. Slight variations in production have forced a change in diet and one locality has felt the pinch of want, while another surfeited, but the world as a whole has ever been a land of plenty.

We now have less than one-tenth of the tillable land of the earth's surface under cultivation, and we not only have this surplus area to draw on but it is safe to estimate that in case of dire necessity one-half the earth's population could at the present time knock their living out of the trees of the forest, gather it from wild vines and draw it from streams. No one should become alarmed; the world will never starve.

The consumer has always feared that the producer would not supply him and his fright has found expression on the statute books of our states and nation and the farmer has been urged to produce recklessly and without reference to a market, and regardless of the demands of the consumer.

Back to the Soil.

The city people have been urging each other to move back to the farm, but very few of them have moved. We welcome our city cousins back to the soil and this earth's surface contains 16,093,160,000 idle acres of tillable land, where they can make a living by tickling the earth with a forked stick, but we do not need them so far as increasing production is concerned; we now have all the producers we can use. The city man has very erroneous ideas of agricultural conditions. The commonly accepted theory that we are short on production is all wrong. Our annual increase in production far exceeds that of our increase in population.

The World as a Farm.

Taking the world as one big farm, we find two billion acres of land in cultivation. Of this amount there is approximately 750,000,000 acres on the western and 1,250,000,000 acres on the eastern hemisphere, in cultivation. This estimate, of course, does not include grazing lands, forests, etc., where large quantities of meat are produced.

The world's annual crop approximates fifteen billion bushels of cereals, thirteen billion pounds of fibre and sixty-five million tons of meat.

The average annual world crop for the past five years, compared with the previous five years, is as follows:

Crops—	Past Half Decade.	Previous Half Decade.
Corn (Bu.)	3,934,174,000	3,403,655,000
Wheat (Bu.)	3,522,769,000	3,257,526,000
Oats (Bu.)	4,120,017,000	3,508,315,000

The world shows an average increase in cereal production of 13 per cent during the past decade, compared with the previous five years, while the world's population shows an increase of only three per cent.

The gain in production far exceeds that of our increase in population, and it is safe to estimate that the farmer can easily increase production 25 per cent if a remunerative market can be found for the products. In textile fibres the world shows an increase during the past half decade in production of 15 per cent against a population increase of three per cent.

The people of this nation should address themselves to the subject of improved facilities for distribution.

Over-production and crop mortgage force the farmers into ruinous competition with each other. The remedy lies in organization and in co-operation in marketing.

THE PATRIOTIC DOLLAR

CONGRESS DECREES DOLLARS INDULGING IN LUXURIES MUST FIRST SALUTE THE FLAG.

War Revenue Tax of $105,000,000 Levied—Beer Bears Brunt of Burden.

Congress has levied a war tax of $105,000,000 to offset a similar amount of loss on import revenue due to the European disturbance and of this amount beer is the heaviest contributor, having been assessed approximately $50,000,000; a stamp tax on negotiable instruments, it is estimated, will yield $31,000,000; a tax on the capital stock of banks of $4,300,000 and a tax on tobacco, perfumes, theater tickets, etc., makes the remainder.

Congress has decreed that the brewer, the banker and the investor must shoulder the musket and march to the front; that milady who would add to her beauty must first tip Uncle Sam, and a dollar that seeks pleasure must first salute the flag; that Pleasure and Profit—the twin heroes of many wars—shall fight the nation's battles and by an ingeniously arranged schedule of taxation congress has shifted the war budget from the shoulders of Necessity to those of Choice and Gala, touching in its various ramifications almost every line of business.

All hail the dollar that bleeds for its country; that bares its breast to the fortunes of war and risks its life to preserve the stability and integrity of the nation's credit.

The market place has always been a favorite stand for war revenue collectors. The trader is a great financial patriot. His dollar is the first to rally around the star-spangled banner and the last to hear the coo of the dove of peace. He is called upon to buy cannon; to feed and clothe the boys in blue and each month cheer their hearts with the coin of the realm. Men can neither be free nor brave without food and ammunition, and money is as important a factor in war as blood. Many monuments have been erected in honor of heroes slain in battles, poems have been written eulogizing their noble deeds and the nation honors its soldiers while they live and places a monument upon their graves when they die, but very little has been said of the dollar that bears the burdens of war.

Honor to the Dollar that Bears the Burdens of War.

All honor to the dollar that answers the call to arms and, when the battle is over, bandages the wounds of stricken soldiers, lays a wreath upon the graves of fallen heroes and cares for the widows and orphans.

All honor to the industries that bend their backs under the burdens of war; lift the weight from the shoulders of the poor and build a bulwark around the nation's credit.

All honor to those who contribute to the necessities and administer to the comforts of the boys who are marching; cool the fever of afflicted soldiers and kneel with the cross beside dying heroes.

A dollar may fight its competitor in business, industries may struggle for supremacy in trade and occupations may view each other with envy or suspicion, but when the bugle calls they bury strife and rally around the flag, companions and friends, mess mates and chums, all fighting for one flag, one cause and one country.

The luxuries in life have always been the great burden-bearers in government. We will mention a few of them giving the annual contributions to the nation's treasury: Liquor, $250,000,000; tobacco, $103,000,000; sugar, $54,000,000; silks, $15,500,000; diamonds, $3,837,000; millinery, $2,479,000; furs, $2,024,000 and automobiles, $870,000. We collect $665,000,000 of internal and custom revenue annually and $450,000,000 of this amount classifies as luxuries, and to this amount we should add the $100,000,000 war tax now levied.

The war tax is immediately effective. Tramp! Tramp! Tramp! the industries are marching $100,000,000 strong and beneath the starry flag they will fill the treasury again while they shout, "Hurrah for Uncle Sam!"

In every field of human activity the demand for more competent men and women is growing every day. Especially so in agriculture.

Home pride is a mighty valuable asset, and the farmer who has none is carrying a heavy handicap on the road to success.

Work is the salve that heals the wounded heart.

Making People Better.

There are more people in cities than anywhere else.

When you want to accomplish a certain result you go where there is the greatest opportunity.

To make government better you must make people better.

To make people better you must work where there are the greatest number of them.

Remove the cities, and the country will take care of itself.

In advertising campaigns one district is tried out first. If it succeeds, then the whole country is taken. This saves much money. It reduces the risk.

In this country we are trying to reform too many cities at once. Let us take one at a time.

Begin anywhere.

If New York is too large, take Fifth avenue. Let all the efficiency reformers in the country concentrate on Fifth avenue. Let's learn on Fifth avenue. If we can reform Fifth avenue we can reform the world.—Thomas L. Masson in Lippincott's.

Making an Apology.

Never be in too great hurry to apologize.

And don't apologize unless you are absolutely certain that you have given offense. More feelings have been hurt by unnecessary apologies than by careless words or actions.

In any case you need not copy the example of people who say, "I'm sorry I was so absentminded when you were talking to me," or, "I'm afraid I didn't seem very pleased to see you the last time you called."

A very wise old lady once said: "My dear, never apologize. The chances are that the people to whom you speak will not know they have been offended till you begin to explain to them. But once they have grasped it they will never forget it again.

"So leave well alone and show your regret by being extra nice next time to make up for past shortcomings."—Pittsburgh Press.

Mixed Orders.

The very last telegraphic dispatch wired from Germany before hostilities began in the Franco-Prussian war was from Count Benedetti, the French ambassador, and was sent to the French foreign office. After stating that war could not be avoided the dispatch wound up with the following extraordinary statement: "Do not put so much seasoning in your next consignment of sausages." The astonishment that this message caused to the recipients at such a time can well be conceived, but it afterward turned out that the imminence of war and a perfect flood of telegrams had befogged the German telegraphists. As a matter of fact, they had mixed a purely commercial telegram from a Teutonic pork butcher named Benedict with the historic message from Count Benedetti.—London Standard.

270,000 SLAVS BEFORE CRACOW

Czar's Forces Bombarding Suburbs of Austrian Stronghold.

100,000 RUSS TAKEN AT LODZ

Allied Army Gains Approach to Roulers—East Dunkirk Is Bombarded—Germans Place Siege Guns on Zeebrugge Houses to Fight Off British Fleet.

A Central News dispatch from Amsterdam says that according to a message from Berlin, it is reported there that upward of 100,000 prisoners were taken by the Germans when they captured Lodz, Russian Poland. News of the capture of Lodz aroused great enthusiasm at Berlin. According to telegrams from Sluis, Holland, fierce fighting has been resumed on the Yser. The Germans are taking renewed precautions against the bombardment of Zeebruggee by British warships. Windows and balconies in the houses at the seaside there are being provided with sand bags and machine guns in order to reply to such an attack.

LONDON — A Russian force numbering 270,000 under command of the Bulgarian General Radko Dimitrieff is reported to have arrived before Cracow and to have begun a bombardment of the suburbs to the southeast of the city, according to a Daily Mail dispatch from The Hague. The opposing Austrian forces have withdrawn into the Bartfield Pass in the Carpathians.

A Petrograd dispatch to the Morning Post says:

"While the situation around Lodz is not yet clear, it appears that both sides are establishing themselves in trenches, which is not difficult as the frost has broken and the rainy weather set in.

Fighting Is Continuous.

"The great numbers of re-enforcements which the Germans have brought up from the western front has resulted in continuous fighting on the eastern front. The battle line from East Prussia to Cracow is 300 miles long. Eleven German army corps are said to be around Lodz.

"Everywhere the situation is satisfactory to the Russians. The business of the Russian troops in Poland is merely t ohold their line. Meanwhile, on other sections of the front, mainly in East Prussia and Cracow, the Russians are pushing forward vigorously."

Allies Gain Approach to Roulers.

LONDON — By constant fighting along the Passchendaele road the French operating from the south of Ypres have all but reached Roulers in their flanking movement to cover Menin, an important point on the Lys.

Supported by the fire of the allied guns the French have gradually advanced their lines until they have practically cleared the railroad and now have a straight path to Roulers.

Allied Ships Shell Coast.

Despite the vigorous attack being made by the allied forces, reports indicate that the Germans have not abandoned their offensive at all points. Heavy firing is reported along the coast, with the Germans bombarding East Dunkirk, west of Nieuport. The allied warships are also reported to have been able to get back into action and have shelled the German positions.

The allies are now virtually in possession of the left bank of the Yser Canal, and in northern France, particularly in the neighborhood of La Bassee, where the Germans hold a strong position, the allies are beginning a heavy cannonade to feel their way eastward.

Allied Troops Advance.

The official communication issued by the war office in Paris said:

"In Belgium the Germans have bombarded Oost Dunkerk, situated about two miles and a half to the west of Nieuport.

"Between Bethune and Lens we have taken possession of the Village of Vermelles and the position of the Ruterre, to the east of which we are along the railway line.

"Our troops have advanced perceptibly in the region of Rouvroye, Parvillers and Le Quesnoy en Santerre, department of Somme."

Fight in the Water.

Telegraphing from Dunkirk, the Daily Chronicle's correspondent says:

"The Germans early Monday morning made another attack on the Belgian lines at Ramscapelle, near Dervyse. They came in numerous rafts which were armed with machine guns and towed by three powerful motorboats.

"As soon as the Belgian outposts opened fire the motor-boats flashed blinding searchlights on them and opened a murderous machine-gun fire. The Germans reached the shore and were preparing to land when the Belgians brought up a searchlight, enabling the Belgian and French artillery, stationed some distance in the rear, to shell the rafts acurately.

"The weight of the allies' heavier artillery soon began to tell, and the Germans were driven back. Several of their rafts capsized. Belgian troops advanced shoulder deep in the water, fighting the panic-stricken Germans, many of whom surrendered. The others retired."

WILSON IS AGAINST 'BIG ARMY' MOVEMENT

Holds Nation's Defenses Ample; Is For Powerful Navy.

WASHINGTON — President Wilson in his annual address to congress gave his answer to those who contend the United States is unprepared for national defense. He said:

"Let there be no misconception. The country has been misinformed. We have not been negligent of national defense. We are not unmindful of the great responsibility resting upon us. We shall learn and profit by the lesson of every experience and every new circumstance; and what is needed will be adequately done."

He further said: "We have had, and while we retain our present principles and ideals we never shall have, a large standing army. If asked, 'Are you ready to defend yourselves?' we reply: 'Most assuredly, to the utmost,' and yet we shall not turn America into a military camp. We will not ask our young men to spend the best years of their lives making soldiers of themselves.

"We must depend in every time of national peril, in the future as in the past, not upon a standing army nor yet upon a reserve army, but upon a citizenry trained and accustomed to arms. * * * We should encourage such training and make it a means of discipline which our young men will learn to value. * * * A powerful navy we have always regarded as our proper and natural means of defense."

30,000 DIE OF STARVATION

Three Hundred Thousand More Face Famine in Albania and Palestine.

WASHINGTON — Dire need of food among the people of Albania and Palestine was reported by Ambassador Morgenthau to the state department. In these countries, the report said, more than 300,000 people are facing famine and 30,000 already have died of starvation.

Mr. Morgenthau's dispatch was sent immediately to the Red Cross society, which issued an appeal for public subscriptions to finance relief measures.

PHILADELPHIA IS SWEPT BY STORM

Death and Big Loss Follow In Wake of Wind.

SEVEN DEAD AND NINE INJURED

Gale Rages in East Tying Up Vessels, Trains and Wire Service and Flooding Sections—Delaware River Goes on Rampage—Hail Stones Like Eggs Fall.

PHILADELPHIA — Seven dead and nine injured as a result of the storm, Delaware river shipping paralyzed by wind and fog, business sections along the river fronts flooded by the high tides, many railroad trains cancelled, New Jersey towns in particular cut off, and thousands of dollars in property damage is the toll to date for the severe storm which has raged along the Atlantic coast the last forty-eight hours. The deaths resulted from automobile accidents, exposure, electrocution and grade crossing accidents, all directly traceable to the storm.

Thirty Mile Gale.

A thirty mile gale lifted waters of the Delaware river over the bulkheads and flooded business houses along Delaware avenue. More than a score of ocean going vessels are tied up between the city and the breakwater. The British steamer St. Kentigorn, Norfolk to New York, after a hard fight at sea, managed to get into the breakwater for coal just before her supplies were exhausted.

The Pennsylvania railroad has been forced to abandon temporarily operating trains to Ocean City, Sea Isle City and Beach Haven. Water covers the tracks. Philadelphia and its suburbs have been hard hit. Many sections are in darkness at night because wires are down. Telegraph, telephone and electric light wires are down. A number of river piers were engulfed and thousands of dollars' worth of stores destroyed.

Hail Like Eggs.

Nearly two inches of rain has fallen. Hail as large as eggs bombarded the city hall in the afternoon.

Seabright's Loss $100,000.

SEABRIGHT, N. J. — The storm damage to Seabright and its cottage colony, extending north and south of the village between the ocean and the Shrewsbury river is estimated at $100,000 up to the time the night tide began completely to submerge what was left out of water.

By evening three-quarters of the population of the village had abandoned homes on the narrow spit of land on which Seabright rests to take refuge across the river.

R. I. RECEIVERSHIP IS DENIED

New York Justice Dismisses Application of H. L. Brand of Chicago.

NEW YORK — Supreme Court Justice Pendleton denied the application of Horace L. Brand of Chicago for the appointment of a temporary receiver of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific company to intervene in the foreclosure proceedings against the railroad now pending in the federal courts.

Justice Pendleton asserted that Brand and other bond holders are in as good a position as individuals to intervene in the foreclosure suit as a receiver would be.

POST ESTATE IS SUED FOR INHERITANCE TAX

Michigan Action Rests on Place of Legal Residence.

LANSING, MICH. — The state of Michigan, through Attorney General Fellows, has started suit by which it hopes to obtain an amount between $100,000 and $125,000 or double those amounts from the seven legatees of the estate of the late C. W. Post of Battle Creek, who died in California May 9.

Through the attorney general, Geo. I. Hauser, deputy auditor general, who has charge of inheritance tax matters in the auditor general's department, filed with Judge of Probate William H. Porter of Calhoun county, a petition asking for a determination of the amount of inheritance tax due the state.

The amount rests on whether Mr. Post was a resident of Michigan or Washington, D. C., as claimed by those who inherited his estate.

Should it be proved that he is a non-resident, the state will collect approximately $100,000 to $125,000, and if it should be proved that he was a resident of this state, the state will collect an amount nearly double that.

The will as filed shows that Mr. Post was a resident of Washington, where he owned a home, yet the state contends that Michigan was his residence, despite the fact he owned a home at the national capital. The estate is said to be close to $21,000,000 of which about $18,000,000 was in personal property.

CALHOUN MAN LOST ABROAD

Marshall Mayor Asks United States to Look for Paul Billhardt.

MARSHALL, MICH. — Mayor Gauss wired the state department at Washington to investigate the case of Paul Billhardt, sixty years old, of this city, who was last heard of at Bremen, Germany.

Billhardt went to Germany early last summer to visit relatives and expected to sail from that city for New York the day that Germany and England declared war. In October he cabled friends here that he was ill and had taken passage to sail Oct. 31 from Amsterdam. Nothing has been heard from him since. Mayor Gauss also sent a wireless message through Sayville, L. I., to Billhardt.

STOP THE CHILD'S COLDS.

They Often Result Seriously

Colds, croup and whooping cough are children's ailments which need immediate attention. The after-effects are often most serious. Don't take the risk—you don't have to. Dr. King's New Discovery checks the cold, soothes the cough, allays the inflammation. Kills the germs and allows Nature to do her healing work. 50c. at your druggist. Buy a bottle today.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Dec 11 1879

Walk up to the captains office gentlemen and pay your taxes.

A little rainy weather for a change, for the past few days.

Friend McNeil has so far recovered from his long illness as to be able to walk down town. We are very glad to see him out again.

Our young men are in a flutter
They are anxious one and all,
To receive an invitation
To the ladies leap year ball.

Ed Merritt has commenced work in his new location, the old stand of D. Lones & Son which he is to occupy as a Cigar & Tobacco Store. He is now manufacturing only, but before January 1st he intends to put in an assortment of goods for the retail trades. His location is a good one and Ed. is an energetic accommodating business man and he will no doubt receive a good patronage.

C. M. Burlingame has lately received a small box of gold quartz from Dr. P. C. Goodrich which was taken from the mines of the Black Hills. The quartz is said to contain about $105 in gold.

Fatlover informs us that Mrs. Fa. Evers says that if the present rain continues and if it doesn't freeze up, and if the bottom doesn't drop out of the roads, it is more than likely that we can expect a spell of weather before New Years Day.

Among the incidents recalled to mind and discussed at M. E. Conklins anniversary last week was a dance that was gotten up by himself and P. W. Adams 23 years ago this winter 58 years ago. They were the sole managers and proprietors sent to Toledo for music which cost them $60.00 other expenses in proportion, dance in Bidwell's Hall supper in Union hall. Tickets $1.00 for each. They sold 213 numbers paid all expenses and had a nice margin left.

The young ladies of Tecumseh have completed their arrangements for a grand leap year party to be given at the Opera House in this village on Friday evening Jan. 2, 1880. The entire bill is $2.00 and the music will be furnished by Hall & Arnolds celebrated constantine band. Supper will also be provided and the arrangements for this part will be on a new and much improved plan. Look out for a large attendance and a splendid party.

A Literary Bellboy.

At one of the great London hotels there is a page boy who in his spare moments is much given to the study of the best English literature.

A few days ago he was paid his wages with a small fine deducted for some breach of regulations. Indignant, the boy said to the manager. "Sir, if you should ever find it within the scope of your jurisdiction to levy an assessment on my wages for some trivial act alleged to have been committed by myself at some inopportune moment in the stress of one's avocation I would suggest that you refrain from exercising that prerogative. The failure to do so would of necessity force me to tender my resignation."

The manager, tottering, reached a chair and in gasps asked the boy what he meant. "In other words, if you fine me again I shall chuck the job!" said the lad.—London Standard.

For the New House.

When you commence to plan your new house get a good sized scrapbook in which to paste every kind of a suggestion you come across. There are hundreds of little ideas as well as some larger ones which will help you give your home added charm or comfort without much increase in cost—ideas about built in things, from a simple shelf to a medicine closet or a seat in an inglenook. There are things to do and things not to do about the placing of lights and of radiators and of water or steam pipes. There are principles of harmony to be remembered in the selection of rugs, draperies, wall decorations and furniture. We all run across such suggestions, but rarely remember them. So get a scrap book or else a large envelope or a flat box labeled "The New House." It will pay.—New York Sun.

Norman Kings and War.

The Norman kings had a way of their own of making money from their warlike preparations. William Rufus in the sixth year of his reign "caused 20,000 foot to be lifted in England to rendezvous in Normandy. But when they were come to the sea coast in order to be transported he sent them all home again after exacting 10 shillings from each of them for their diet." Years afterward Richard I., according to the old chronicle, "ordained that there should be jousts and tournaments throughout England for the better exercise of men in martial affairs, yet so that all persons should pay for their licenses to bear a part in these exercises after the following rates: Every earl 20 marks, every baron 10 marks and such as had no land 2 marks."

Boulogne.

Boulogne has been the base of almost every contemplated invasion of England from the days of Caligula to the time when Napoleon gathered 180,000 men there ready at any favorable opportunity to swoop across the channel. For six years—from 1544 to 1550—Boulogne was an English possession, and the English element in the town was large and influential long before the cross channel pleasure steamers made it the best known spot in France to the majority of the English trippers. Two famous poets, Churchill and Campbell, breathed their last in Boulogne.—Westminster Gazette.

THE GREATEST MAN

Do you know who the greatest man in the world is?

"Edison," you say? Wrong.

President Wilson, William Jennings Bryan, Theodore Roosevelt?

All wrong. The greatest man in the world is Santa Claus.

Some iconoclastic individual may have told you grown folk that there is no Santa Claus. But there is. There's no joke about it. It isn't merely a childhood dream.

We start the year with new resolutions. We wander through the mazes of the months. We battle for life and liberty and the right to pursue happiness.

By the middle of August our digestion has become hardened. We glare at each other and discourse on brotherhood. We kick about the weather. We jostle our neighbors in the street cars. We have permitted ourselves to become foes to our own happiness.

"What's the use?" we ask ourselves. "Where's the reward for the arduous labor we have put forth?"

August and September and part of November pass.

Suddenly, one day, we see in the window of a shop the picture of a kind-faced, white-haired old man. He has merry eyes. The picture awakens within us a thrill that we knew long ago—long before we cared about dollars and fame; long before we knew of hate and envy.

The muscles of our faces soften a bit. We wander down the street. We meet a child. Something about us must have attracted the little one, for we notice that the child smiled sweetly as it looked upon us. We turn and look after the youngster.

Seems like a long time since a strange child has smiled at us. We ponder over it. Finally, we know why the child has found pleasure in looking at our features. The twinkle that had been in the eyes of the white-haired man whose picture we had seen in the shop window had been caught up by our own eyes and remained there.

We meet Neighbor Bill. Why was Bill so cordial in his greeting? He saw the Santa Claus twinkle, too.

First thing we know, we're humming about our work. Where's the burden we used to complain about? It seems to have flown out of the window. Peace has come in its stead—peace and good will toward men.

You bet there is a Santa Claus. Maybe he lives in the northland. Maybe he lives within our hearts, near Christmas time. But he does live. He's a throbbing, pulsating, live being, with twinkly eyes.

—Omaha (Neb.) News.

SOMETHING STILL BETTER YET.

A Chiropractor will analyze your spine and tell you where your trouble is located.

The 25 pairs of Spinal Nerves which pass out through the spine lead to all internal organs any impingment of these nerves in the spine may lead to chronic troubles.

A Chiropractor removes these impingments and the trouble will disappear.

An Ice Drydock.

An army engineer once gave a demonstration on the Lake of the Woods, on the Canadian border, of the old saying that an engineer is a man whose business it is to do a task at half the cost others would incur. A dredge locked in the ice needed repairs nearly three feet below the water line. The surrounding ice at the time was nearly two feet thick. A trench eighteen inches deep was cut in the ice round the dredge. The next night the cold froze an inch or two of ice directly under this trench, and on the day following another inch of ice was dug out of the trench. Day after day an inch of ice, more or less, was chipped out of the trench, according to the intensity of cold on the preceding night. In a month the trench was nearly three feet deep, with a safe block of ice beneath it. Repairs to the hull were then easily made.—Saturday Evening Post.

Theory of a Scientist.

I have published for years that mind created electrons and formed them into matter. That mind I call creative mind, for mind alone is able to create. I do not know what mind is, so must content myself with a theory, totally opposite to a belief, of which I have none. My theory is that only one mind exists and that all other apparent minds are parts or fractions of the one original mind. I did not start up this theory. It is one of the oldest known to speculation or philosophy. I heard of it in early youth and have accepted it as a theory since. If humans could force electrons into a straight line side by side in contact, but this is impossible since they repel, then a row one inch long would contain 12,700,000,000,000. My theory is that only electrons have created, all else formed.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Verne and His Works.

It was Hetzel, the French publisher, who discovered Jules Verne. Hetzel began with Verne by a life contract, guaranteeing an annual sum of $4,000, which seemed immense riches to the unknown writer. It was not at all proportionate to the rapid success and sale of his books throughout the known world. Jules Verne was content with his bargain and for many years furnished dutifully his two volumes a year. At his death he left several more finished or nearly so, which explains the continued appearance after his death of new works bearing his name. Hetzel took pains to provide the writer who was laying golden eggs for him with a yacht and all other appurtenances necessary or useful to stimulate his inventive powers.

Money and Talk.

"I want you to tell me what this paper means when it says in its market report that money is cheap," said Mrs. McFee to her husband, who, like all husbands, is supposed to be encyclopedic.

McFee laid down the sporting sheet. "It's simply putting in a briefer form the statement that money talks," he replied, "and that talk is cheap."—Judge.

MRS. J. H. SMITH

A feeling of sadness settled over the community when the word was received that Mrs. Smith had passed away. She underwent an operation Saturday morning but came through it all right, and every indication pointed to her ultimate recovery and as the days passed by every one felt encouraged. But a change came Monday night and she grew steadily worse Tuesday until about three o'clock, when death came to her relief. Mrs. Smith was of a quiet retiring nature, and won many friends by her unassuring personality, who will mourn her passing away. She was a member of the Presbyterian church of the Eastern Star and the L. O. T. M. M. in each of which she was an earnest faithful worker. Mary Florence Rogers was born in Cambridge Aug. 23, 1854 and was united in marriage to Joseph Smith Jan. 1, 1877. They settled in Tecumseh in 1888. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband and two children, Mrs. Wade L. Jones of Tecumseh and Lavern Smith of Adrian also three brothers Ira, Bert and Cecil and one sister Mrs. H. S. Waring. The funeral was held at the home Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock her pastor Rev. Wm A. Rex officiating.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B. J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it. It is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

Miss Jessie Smith Writing From Oakland, Cal., to Renew Her Subscription Says:

"I believe that we care more about receiving the Herald now than we did when we were in Michigan. Certainly we would not like to be without it.

We are enjoying Oakland very much and we are not at all sorry that we decided to come, at least for a year or two. The position which was offered to me seemed too good to refuse, and I am finding it as delightful as I anticipated. It is realy educational psychology, and I am working under an exceptionally fine woman, with whom I have had two summer school sessons work, also. I have a class of fourteen peculiar children, and I do a great deal of social work and study too.

The weather here has been delightful so far, and we find plenty of interesting things about the Bay. I have made several good friends among Oakland people during my summer work at the University, so it has not seemed lonely.

Work at the big fair ground is progressing rapidly in spite of the fact war has dampened the enthusiasm of the people quite a good deal.

JESSIE SMITH."

Miss Smith was a former resident of Tecumseh and a graduate of T. H. S. Class of 1906 and has many friends who will be pleased to hear of her and her work.

December 14 Opening Day The Christmas Money Club

To Help Its Members Prepare for our Greatest Holiday Is the Club's Object. Provides Christmas Money

The day on which The Christmas Money Club opens for next year's members is near.

This is the club which the Lilley State Bank organized for Tecumseh and which is just finishing its first year,

No dues or fines of any kind are imposed. Everybody in Tecumseh and vicinity joins with the understanding that the only provision to be observed is to save small sums according to the plan of the club.

Encourages Savings for Christmas

also, the club affords a convenient method of starting to save for a home, education, or business.

The plan is as follows:

You decide how much money you want for Christmas for 1915 and the Lilley State Bank will give you a check for the amount December 10, 1915, if you follow the easy plan of The Christmas Money Club.

By this plan you can have $12.75, $25.50, $63.75, or larger sums for Christmas, the size of the check we make out to you will depend upon the division of the club you join.

A Cent or Two Will Start You

You may begin weekly deposits with 1c, 2c, 5c, 25c or 50c, according to which division you join. You may have two or more memberships in the same division, or you can have memberships in different divisions.

Come in and have us tell you more about it.

HELP FOR BELGIUM.

A lantern exhibition of pictures of the war zone will be given in the Assembly room of the Presbyterian church, Tecumseh, at 7:30 p. m. on Tuesday, Dec. 15th, on behalf of the Belgian relief fund. A descriptive talk will be given by Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy. Admission 10c, but no limit is placed on the liberality of the public. Do not miss this. You will enjoy yourself and help the starving women and children of Belgium at the same time.

The committee earnestly request all farmers and others to contribute to the flour and wheat fund. Every donor may rest assured that every ounce of food given will reach the starving Belgians without any deduction.

Carriage from Tecumseh to Belgium is free. The Lake Shore R. R. has offered to carry free all goods given to New York. The local committee in New York has donated office rent and all local expenses, also free carriage from there to Belgium, and the Hon. Brand whitlock U. S. ambassador to Belgium has given his guarantee that not an ounce of food will fall into the hands of any other nation. The people you wish to help will receive all you give. Contributions gratefully accepted by any member of the committee.

Everybody is responding nobly to the efforts of the committee, and in the last two days 30 barrels of flour have been donated.

Relief for Belgians

Meeting Held at Library Rooms to Discuss Plans Tuesday Evening, December 8.

A CARLOAD OF WHEAT AND FLOUR SOLICITED.

A public meeting was held Tuesday evening in the assembly room at the library to discuss ways and means of raising funds for the relief of the war sufferers in Belgium, and also to add members to the committee as the women who had been appointed felt that they needed the help and advice of the men. In spite of the very unfavorable weather, a fair sized and enthusiastic gathering filled the room.

Mrs. Mary F. Wright was in the chair.

The full committee as previously appointed and added to by the meeting is as follows:

Chairman—Hrs. Mary F. Wright
Treasurer—Frank J. Temple
Sec'y—Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy
Manageress of Cutting and Sewing Department—Mrs Sena Crane
Balance of Committee—Dr. L. G. North, Raynor Brewer, Joe Keeney

The chairman read extracts from the literature of the Belgian Relief Committee showing that unless the United States came to the rescue, about 5,000,000 people would face starvation, as we are the only large nation not involved in the war, and the only one whose help is allowed by the conqueror. Further a guarantee by the American ambassador Brand Whitlock was submitted, that every ounce of food would reach the sufferers without any deduction or risk of capture by any other nation.

The secretary read a letter from the Lake Shore railroad offering free transportation of all goods sent to the Belgians, and one from the New York committee guaranteeing free transportation from New York to Belgium.

The meeting then decided that a carload of wheat and flour should be raised locally, and all farmers asked to contribute wheat or flour out of their bounteous stores

The Revs. Hartzog and Rex offered the committee the use of their pulpits for next Sunday to make an appeal to their congregations for funds, Rev. Rex and Raynor Brewer offered to appeal to the societies and lodges to which they belong.

It was decided that on Tuesday a radiopticon exhibition of pictures of the war zone be given with an explanation of same by Mrs. Hardy, admission 10 cents.

Mrs. Sena Crane offered to cut out as many garments as she could obtain workers for. A number of ladies present made application for same and promised to knit and sew.

All contributions will be gratefully accepted by any member of the committee, Clothes most needed: Large shawls, warm skirts, stockings, mufflers, hoods with capes, blankets. Food: Wheat, flour, rice, coffee, peas, beans, canned goods, cured or salted meats.

For patterns and instructions in regard to sewing please apply to Mrs. Crane and leave bulky parcels at Mrs. Hardy's.

On account of the regulations of Holland through which supplies have to pass, old clothes cannot be sent.

HENRY FORD'S OWN MOTOR CAR STOLEN

Profit-sharing Appears to Be Making Divers Headway.

DETROIT, MICH. — Where will this profit-sharing end? Someone stole Henry Ford's automobile.

One of Mr. Ford's employes reported the matter to the police. The car was a beautifully finished coupe, he said, maroon in color, specially built for the motor car king and perhaps the finest machine ever turned out by the factory.

While Mr Ford was calling on Dean S. S. Marquis of St. Paul's Episcopal cathedral the automobile was whisked away, the employe said. Mr. Ford was asked to verify the report.

"Why, yes," he said, "one of the boys lost a car."

He seemed little concerned about it.

JUDGE SUDDENLY STRICKEN

John L. O'Mealey Dies When Blood Vessel in Brain Breaks.

ADRIAN, MICH. — Judge John L. O'Mealey, for the last six years circuit judge of Lenawee county, died suddenly in the morning when a blood vessel broke in his brain. Prior to being stricken Judge O'Mealey had been in excellent health and presided at the December term of court all last week.

Judge O'Mealey was born in Hillsdale county in 1845 and when twenty-three years old began to study law through the influence of Seth Bean, a prominent Lenawee county lawyer, father of Prosecutor-elect Leland Bean. Judge O'Mealey, although he never attended college, was admitted to the bar in 1882, and shortly afterward he was appointed assistant prosecuting attorney. In 1908, when the thirty-ninth judicial district was formed, Judge O'Mealey was elected to fill the unexpired term of Judge Chester, who was assigned to Hillsdale county. Judge O'Mealey was re-elected in 1911.

THIEVES RAID FRAT HOUSES

Members of U. of M. Chapters of Three Organizations Losers.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — Three more University of Michigan fraternity houses have been burglarized, according to reports made to the police. At the Phi Delta Phi houses a gold watch and about $100 in money was obtained; at the Beta Theta Pi house a gold watch valued at $100 and a number of scarfpins were taken, and members of the Delta Theta Phi lost $50 in cash and a number of articles of jewelry.

Other fraternity and sorority houses have been burglarized this fall and the police are without clues. The Phi Psi house has been robbed three times in the last two months. All of the robberies apparently have been committed by a person or persons well acquainted with the interior arrangement of the houses.

FRANK LOSES LAST APPEAL

Man Convicted of Murdering Mary Phagan to Be Re-sentenced.

WASHINGTON. — The supreme court refused to issue a writ to review Leo M. Frank's conviction of the murder of Mary Phagan, an Atlanta factory girl. This decision of the court ends attempts to save Frank's life by its intervention. Efforts will be made now, it was said, to procure a pardon or commutation of sentence from Georgia state officials.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 9.—Leo M. Frank will be resentenced today for the murder of Mary Phagan.

THIS WOMAN WAS VERY UNHAPPY

Physically and Mentally Worn Out—Tells How Nervous and Crying Spells Were Ended by Vinol.

Monmouth, Ill.:—"I was weak, worn-out and nervous. I had no appetite and was getting so thin and discouraged, one day I just broke down and cried when a friend came in and asked me what was the matter. I told of my condition and how nothing I took seemed to do me any good. Vinol was suggested. I got a bottle and before it was half gone I could eat and sleep well. I continued its use and now my friends say I look ten years younger, and I am well, healthy and strong. I wish I could induce every tired-out, worn-out, nervous woman to take Vinol."—Mrs. HARRIET GALE, Monmouth, Ill.

There are many over-worked, tired-out careworn, nervous women in this vicinity who need the strengthening, tissue building, and vitalizing effects of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, and so sure are we that it will build them up and make them strong that we offer to return their money if it fails to benefit.

Vinol is a delicious preparation of the extract of cod liver oil and peptonate of iron and contains no oil.

NEWS OF THE STATE

Hat Store Wrecked by Dog.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.—It wasn't a German invasion, just a mere bull pup which entered a local millinery store, sometime in the night and was accidentally locked up in the place, but the result was all the same when the store was opened the next day, ruin and devastation faced the owner. The dog had destroyed hundreds of dollars worth of hats during the night.

Tired out with his destructive play, he went to sleep in a box of hand made roses.

Zuppke Protege Makes Good.

MUSKEGON, MICH. — That Robert C. Zuppke, now mentor of the Illini university foot ball team, coached an exceptionally fine brand of the pig skin game when he was at Muskegon high school several years ago is again demonstrated by the showing of Francis Jacks, a former protege, who has coached the team which is pronounced undisputed champion of western Minnesota high schools. Jacks is athletic director at Montivideo, Minn.

Jail Soo Man as Chinese Smuggler.

ESCANABA, MICH. — Local officers apprehended Fenn Wagner, half breed Chinaman, on a charge of smuggling Li Lee and Young Lee, Chinamen, into the United States by rowing them across St. Mary's river at the Soo. United States Immigration Officer W. A. Ross has returned to the Soo with Wagner.

Wagner has been out of Fort Leavenworth but three months on a similar charge.

Building Wrecked in Blast.

BAY CITY, MICH. — The blacksmith shop of Walter Cleary, on Second street, was wrecked by an explosion. There is evidence of dynamite having been used, and the police are working on that theory.

Cleary believes he is the victim of an enemy, but declines to mention any names or give a possible motive. The building, a new one, was constructed of cement blocks.

Quick Justice For Slayer.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — Chas Palzer, confessed slayer of Mrs Della Stratton, his sweetheart, was sentenced to life imprisonment at Marquette by Judge Stuart of the supreme court.

Sentence was pronounced within eighteen hours after the crime was committed. Platzer, a Texan, confessed having shot the woman because of jealousy.

Bank Report Shows a Loss.

LANSING, MICH. — The quarterly report of Banking Commissioner E. H. Doyle shows a loss of $3,186,697.75 in the business of the Michigan state banks and trust companies since the last statement issued by the department in September.

Compared to the last report there has been a net increase in loans of $966,694.66 and a net increase in deposits of $5,137,598.99.

Prominent Lumberman Dying.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Frank J. Haynes, one of the best known lumbermen in Michigan, is critically ill at his home in this city and the attending physicians have about given up hope for his recovery. Mr Haynes owns large timber tracts in Oregon, Mississippi and Michigan and the family has been engaged in the lumber industry for many years.

Authorizes New Road to Sell Stock.

LANSING, MICH. — The Albion, Charlotte and Northern railroad, an electric line, was authorized to sell stock by the railroad commission. The road is to run from Albion to Lansing, by way of Charlotte and Grand Ledge. The capitalization is $100,000. The company had its charter passed by the secretary of state some time ago.

Soo Man Drowns; Son Saves Self.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH. — William Elkins of Algonquin was drowned and his son narrowly escaped the same fate when their row boat capsized near shore. Young Elkins gained the shore after a hard fight.

Saw Strips Off Man's Clothes.

MARSHALL, MICH. — Charles H. Katz had a narrow escape from death when his clothing caught in the shafting of a buzz saw. He jerked himself away, breaking his right shoulder. The saw stripped off his clothes.

Soo Votes $150,000 Bond Issue.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH. — The proposition of bonding the city for $150,000 for a new high school carried by almost 5 to 1 vote, final returns standing 476 in favor and 103 against.

Saginaw Pioneer Resident Dies.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Mrs. Sarah C. Allington, eighty-three, a pioneer of this city, is dead. She was mother of W. E. Allington, a prominent manufacturer.

Wants Wilson to Address Teachers.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Superintendent E. C. Warriner will make an effort to have President Wilson speak at the 1915 convention of the Michigan State Teachers' association.

Exacting Standards.

"I am afraid Biggins hasn't a powerful sense of humor."

"Oh, yes, he has. The only trouble is that when Biggins makes a joke he isn't satisfied to get a laugh. He thinks it's a failure if it doesn't hurt somebody's feelings." — Washington Star.

The Cult of Fashion.

Young lady at the theater to her friend, "What do you think of this play, my dear?"

"Why, it's absurd. Three months are supposed to pass between the first and second acts, and the heroine's still got the same hat on!"

EUROPEAN WAR SHATTERS KING COTTON'S THRONE

FLEECY STAPLE MUST PAY RANSOM INTO THE COFFERS OF WAR.

Nation Rings With Cries of Stricken Industry.

By Peter Radford
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

King Cotton has suffered more from the European war than any other agricultural product on the American continent. The shells of the belligerents have bursted over his throne, frightening his subjects and shattering his markets, and, panic-stricken, the nation cries out "God save the king!"

People from every walk of life have contributed their mite toward rescue work. Society has danced before the king; milady has decreed that the family wardrobe shall contain only cotton goods; the press has plead with the public to "buy a bale"; bankers have been formulating holding plans; congress and legislative bodies have deliberated over relief measures; statesmen and writers have grown eloquent expounding the inalienable rights of "His Majesty" and presenting schemes for preserving the financial integrity of the stricken staple, but the sword of Europe has proved mightier than the pen of America in fixing value upon this product of the sunny south. Prices have been bayoneted, values riddled and markets decimated by the battling hosts of the eastern hemisphere until the American farmer has suffered a war loss of $400,000,000, and a bale of cotton brave enough to enter a European port must pay a ransom of half its value or go to prison until the war is over.

Hope of the Future Lies in Co-operation.

The Farmers' Union, through the columns of the press, wants to thank the American people for the friendship, sympathy and assistance given the cotton farmers in the hour of distress and to direct attention to co-operative methods necessary to permanently assist the marketing of all farm products.

The present emergency presents as grave a situation as ever confronted the American farmer and from the viewpoint of the producer, would seem to justify extraordinary relief measures, even to the point of bending the constitution and straining business rules in order to lift a portion of the burden off the backs of the farmer, for unless something is done to check the invasion of the war forces upon the cotton fields, the pathway of the European pestilence on this continent will be strewn with mortgaged homes and famine and poverty will stalk over the southland, filling the highways of industry with refugees and the bankruptcy court with prisoners.

All calamities teach us lessons and the present crisis serves to illuminate the frailties of our marketing methods and the weakness of our credit system, and out of the financial anguish and travail of the cotton farmer will come a volume of discussion and a mass of suggestions and finally a solution of this, the biggest problem in the economic life of America, if, indeed, we have not already laid the foundation for at least temporary relief.

More Pharaohs Needed in Agriculture.

Farm products have no credit and perhaps can never have on a permanent and satisfactory basis unless we build warehouses, cold storage plants, elevators, etc., for without storage and credit facilities, the south is compelled to dump its crop on the market at harvest time. The Farmers' Unions in the cotton producing states have for the past ten years persistently advocated the construction of storage facilities. We have built during this period 2,000 warehouses with a capacity of approximately 4,000,000 bales and looking backward the results would seem encouraging, but looking forward, we are able to house less than one-third of the crop and warehouses without a credit system lose 90 per cent of their usefulness. The problem is a gigantic one—too great for the farmer to solve unaided. He must have the assistance of the banker, the merchant and the government.

In production we have reached the high water mark of perfection in the world's history, but our marketing methods are most primitive. In the dawn of history we find agriculture plowing with a forked stick but with a system of warehouses under governmental supervision that made the Egyptians the marvel of civilization, for who has not admired the vision of Joseph and applauded the wisdom of Pharaoh for storing the surplus until demanded by the consumer, but in this age we have too many Josephs who dream and not enough Pharaohs who build.

FEARS AN ITALIAN ATTACK

Austria Stations 200,000 Troops Along Border and 100,000 at Pola.

MILAN, (via Rome). — Advices received from the Austrian frontier and published in the Secolo are that the statement of Premier Salandra in the Italian parliament Thursday had an immediate echo in Austrian Military circles.

Friday night, the correspondent says, the railway lines poured troops all along the Italian border and also into Pola, the Austrian arsenal on the Peninsula of Istria. It is estimated that 200,000 men were stationed along the Italian border and 100,000 at Pola.

ASHORE AND MAY BE INTERNED

Wounded in Late Naval Battle Returning to England Aboard Steamer—French and German Commmunications Claim Gains—Berlin Says 11,000 More Russ Are Prisoners.

London, Dec. 14.—With British war ships hovering off the harbor to prevent her escape, the German cruiser Dresden, the only one of Vice Admiral Von Spee's squadron of five war ships left afloat, is reported aground at Puerto Gallagos in the Estuary of the Gallegos river on the Pategonian coast.

Puerto Gallegos is about 400 miles due west of the Falkland islands, off which the naval battle was fought, and sixty or seventy miles north of the Magellan straits. It is believed that even if the Dresden can get off, her commander will elect to have his vessel interned by Argentina instead of making a suicidal attempt to run the gauntlet of the British vessels waiting off the coast. The Estuary of the Gallegos is wide, but its shallow waters abound in sand bars upon which the Dresden probably grounded.

Wounded on Steamship.

The British steamship Oronsa, bound from Valparaiso to Liverpool, encountered the British squadron under Vice Admiral Sir Frederick Sturdee after the battle and the few British wounded and such German wounded as were rescued, were placed on board of her. She has probably reached Montevideo. The number of wounded on board of her is not stated in the dispatches received from Montevideo.

Germans Claim Double Success.

Berlin, Dec. 14.—The day's official communication issued by the German army headquarters announces that several Russian positions in North Poland were stormed and 11,000 prisoners taken and that an attack made by French troops over a wide area in France Saturday was repulsed by the Germans. The text of the statement reads:

"Following their unsuccessful attack on Apremont Dec. 11 the French again attacked yesterday afternoon over a large front by way of Flirey (Cirey). The attack ended in the loss to the enemy of 600 prisoners and a large number of men killed and injured. Our losses in this engagement amounted to about seventy wounded. The rest of the day passed quietly in the western theater.

"In northern Poland we captured a number of the enemy's positions taking 11,000 prisoners and forty-three machine guns. There is no news from East Prussia or from southern Poland."

French Statement.

Paris, Dec. 14.—The afternoon's war office statement says:

"The day of Dec. 12 was particularly quiet. The enemy's activity was shown especially by an intermittent cannonade at different points on the front. In the region to the southeast of Ypres there were ventured, however, three violent infantry attacks which were repulsed.

"In the woods of Lepretre we have made important progress.

"In the Vosges the enemy has attacked on various occasions the post of Lamere Henri, to the northwest of Senones, but was repulsed.

"Servia—The extreme Servian left wing pursuing the enemy has forced him to re-cross the Drina near Baina Basta. On the remainder of the front the Servian armies continue to drive back the Austrians to the north and northwest."

"DADDY COME BACK TO ME" TOO STRONG

Michigan Fugitive Gives Self up to St. Louis Police.

St. Louis, Dec. 14.—Christmas season and absence from home, and a five year old boy, to whom he wanted to play Santa Claus, proved an irresistible tug at the heart strings of Robert M. Billings, twenty-eight, a contractor of Flint, Mich., who accordingly stepped up to Patrolman Rick in the Union station midway and said:

"I guess I'm wanted for forgery, and rather than be away from home Christmas, I wish to be locked up and sent back."

Two or three days after the forgeries he became apprehensive of the consequences and came to St. Louis. A search for work here was fruitless, and all the time he said he heard the voice of his son calling:

"Daddy, come back to me; it's Christmas."

Friday night the call was too strong he said, and he decided he preferred a cell near home at Christmas to freedom away. The police have wired to Flint for instructions.

Flint, Mich., Dec. 14.—Robert M. Billings is wanted here for passing worthless checks to the extent of $98 on local merchants. He is charged with signing the name of E. J. Hewley, his former employer, to the checks.

CAN'T KEEP KAISER DOWN

His Physicians Announce He Will Be at Front This Week.

Amsterdam, Dec. 14.—Germany's troops in France and Belgium will again be fighting under the personal leadership of Emperor William before the end of this week.

The kaiser's health has improved so rapidly that he is now convalescent and his physicians have given permission for him to proceed to the firing line after a short period of repose.

"OVER HEADS OF AUDIENCE"

Germans Drop Sanskrit Messages to Indians Who Can't Read Them.

Paris, Dec. 14.—German aviators dropped messages to the Indian troops along the Yser recently properly printed in Sanskrit, informing them that the Sheik-Ul-Islam had proclaimed a holy war in which the Afghans had joined.

Sylvian Levy, the learned Sanskrit scholar, translated the message and allied aviators dropped proclamations on the German lines informing the Germans that the Indian soldiers are unable to read Sanskrit.

Italy Allows Cotton to Switzerland

Rome, Dec. 14.—The Italian government has consented to allow the transit through Italy of American cotton destined for Switzerland.

ZEPPELIN ATTACK ON BRITAIN

Correspondent Says Flyer Leaves Sheds Every Three Weeks

London, Dec. 14.—A correspondent of the Turin Stampa, who declares he had access to the Zeppelin sheds at Friedrichshaven, says that eighteen superzeppelins will take part in an attack on Britain and its fleet in the spring.

The correspondent says that every three weeks an airship leaves the works for a secret destination.

Paris, Dec. 14.—The censor has forbidden any headlines on the official communiques in the French press on account of abuses in playing up trivial incidents mentioned in recent dull communiques.

WANT $500,000 FOR ROADS CONSTRUCTION

Lapeer County Representatives Take Bull by Horns.

Lapeer, Mich., Dec. 14.—The latest developments in the Lapeer county good roads scrap occurred when a meeting of representatives from all over the county voted unanimously in favor of bonding Lapeer county for a half million dollars to build good roads with.

Mayor Frary, who was chairman of the meeting, appointed a committee composed of members from each township to circulate petitions for bonding the county. The petitions must be submitted to the board of supervisors at their January session in order to have the question come up at the April election.

Ex-Governor John T. Rich and other prominent speakers addressed the meeting and pointed out that the completion of the highways would make Lapeer one of the best counties in the state in the matter of good roads. The proposed half million bond issue will build 239 miles of good roads. The board of supervisors at their October session refused to appropriate anything for good roads as they were dissatisfied with the work already done.

A special meeting was called in November to consider the matter again but nothing was done on account of a law which allows no money to be appropriated at a special session.

Blind Joe Lewis Dies.

Petoskey, Mich., Dec. 14.—Joseph Lewis, widely known throughout northern Michigan as "Blind Joe," who made his livelihood by the manufacture and sale of brooms, died here, leaving a wife and thirteen children. Mr. Lewis' eyes were blown out by an accidental discharge of a shot gun when he was a young man and since then has walked all over northern Michigan many times soliciting orders and delivering brooms.

Slows Up Divorce Cases.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 14.—Attorneys who have been in the habit of rushing divorce cases through the circuit court, ran up against a snag when Judge George V. Weimer heard the first batch of divorce cases that have come before him since assuming the bench. Judge Weimer made it plain to attorneys that it will not be an easy matter to secure divorces in the future.

Convicted of Killing.

Bay City, Mich., Dec. 14.—Joseph Koesecki who has been on trial on the charge of slaying his wife, was convicted in the second degree. Kosecki was placed on trial exactly a month after the crime was committed. Emotional insanity was the chief reliance of the defense, which also brought in "unwritten law" features.

Is War Prisoner.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 14.—Mrs. T. E. Dorr of Saginaw has received a telegram from her son-in-law, Victor Von Borosini, that he is a prisoner of war at Southampton, England. He spent much of his time here, but at the outbreak of war offered his services to the German army and for some time has been unheard of.

Aged Woman Dies.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Dec. 14.—After a brief illness, due to advanced age, Mrs. Martha Waldo, eighty-three, of Plainwell, mother of Dwight E. Waldo, president of the Western State Normal school, of this city, is dead. Mrs. Waldo had spent the greater part of her life in this part of the state.

Old Reservists Called Out.

Rome, Dec. 14.—Mountain artillery and the reservists of the 1887 and 1888 classes have been called out for a month of training.

U. S. MINE TOLL EXCEEDS WAR'S

Total Loss Greater Than That of British Army.

HUMAN LIFE IS DISREGARDED

Figures From Annual Official Report Show a Total of Casualties Greater Than Total American Standing or Reserve Armies—Most of Accidents Are Preventable.

Washington, Dec. 14.—More men were killed or injured in United States mines in a year than England has lost in the present war. The figures are greater than those of the entire United States standing army or its reserve army.

Three thousand have been killed and 100,000 injured in the mining and metallurgical industries during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, according to the annual report of the director of the bureau of mines. England's losses in the war so far are estimated at 90,000.

Majority Were Preventable.

"One-half of these fatalities and three-fourths of the injuries may be regarded as easily preventable," says the report. "The money loss from the accidents may be estimated at not less than $12,000,000 a year, and this loss must ultimately be paid by the consumers of mineral products.

"Preventive measures will need to be based on investigations made by technically trained men. The bureau lacks the funds necessary to make the investigations."

Conditions Improved.

Even with a scant force of experts the bureau was able to improve conditions in the mines. Through the study of coal mine explosions and the work at the government's experimental mine, four types of explosion stopping devices were developed. The development of these barriers was the most important mine safety accomplishment of the year.

Mine rescue training was given 2,826 miners, first aid instruction and training to 5,780. At the end of the year the total of miners trained by the bureau since its organization in 1910 was 24,975.

ITALIAN CRUISER IS RUSHED

Turkey's Action Toward Consulate Coincides With Jehad Proclamation.

Rome, Dec. 14.—The Italian armored cruiser Marco Polo has been rushed to Hodeida. The foreign office is informed that the Italian consulate has been surrounded by armed troops since Nov. 11 and that its consul was practically imprisoned until the arrival of the Giuliania on Dec. 3. Baron Sonnino, minister of foreign affairs, has wired Constantinople insisting upon immediate reparation, adding that otherwise Italy will consider that Turkey approves of the violences and abuses perpetrated by the authorities at Hodeida.

Deputy Gallenga points out that the incident coincides with the proclamation of the jehad and also with the evacuation of Fezzan. Besides, he says that the islands off Hodeida have been converted into a German hospital, hence necessarily are in communication with Constantinople. These facts are regarded here as most significant.

Goethals Asks Torpedo Patrol.

Panama, Dec. 14.—In order to maintain neutrality of the canal Colonel Goethals has requested the navy department to assign destroyers to patrol the three mile limit.

The Victoria Cross.

The Victoria cross had its origin in the Crimean war and was primarily intended to be conferred upon junior commissioned officers and the rank and file. Neither rank, length of service, wounds nor any circumstance whatsoever can qualify for this noble badge save a personal act of signal bravery performed in the presence of the enemy. The decoration was instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856, the prince consort being, it is said, its originator and the designer of the insignia of it. Each Victoria cross is made from bronze which once formed part of some Russian guns captured during the Crimean war, and, although the medal itself is intrinsically worth only about fourpence halfpenny, a number of them have been sold at sales for £100 and over. The winning of the Victoria cross carries an annuity of £10, which may be increased to £50, payable quarterly, to all except officers, but including those who have risen from the ranks.

Queerest Dance In the World.

The Godavari dance of the malayers, or drummers, of Malabar is a very popular function when the native farmers are taking their ease after the hard work of harvest. The principal character is a weird figure supposed to represent the sacred cow of the gods, Kamadhenu. A small boy carries this about while the other performers, decked out in primitive fashion with painted bodies and hideous masks, go through a weird dance, accompanied by much drum beating and singing. Wherever it goes the cow is supposed to shower blessings and prosperity, and so, ostensibly to please the animal, but in reality to satisfy the dancers, presents of money, paddy or rice are given to the performers. This custom has been in existence from time immemorial and is likely to continue as long as agriculture endures among the Hindus of Malabar.—Wide World Magazine.

Lake Winnipeg.

Of the lakes of Manitoba Lake Winnipeg is the largest, being 275 miles long and from 40 to 60 miles wide. Its area being about 9,000 square miles and its total coast line longer than that of any of the great lakes except Lake Superior. No other province or state has entirely within its boundaries a body of water at all approaching it in magnitude. Great Salt Lake, in Utah, is only one-fifth of the extent of Lake Winnipeg. The largest of its tributaries is the Saskatchewan river, one of the four great rivers of the continent east of the continental divide. Its total length is 1,500 miles. The Red river, 700 miles in length, and the Winnipeg river, 300 miles in length, and many minor rivers also pour into Lake Winnipeg. The Nelson river is its principal outlet and connects it with Hudson bay.

A Glimpse of Parnell.

Like most men with claims for greatness, Parnell had his peculiarities as well. One of them was a distressing lapse of memory on occasions, which often caused him to be late for—indeed sometimes to miss—meetings where he had promised to speak.

When he failed a meeting like this where hundreds of people were waiting for him, I sometimes would urge him to telegraph or write apologizing or excusing his nonattendance. But this he would never do, saying: "You do not learn the ethics of kingship, Queenie. Never explain, never apologize," adding, with his rare laugh: "I could never keep my rabble together if I were not above the weakness of apology."—From "Charles Stewart Parnell," by Katharine O'Shea.

Brain of the Gorilla.

The gorilla is in stature about the same as man, but is far behind him when it comes to the contents of the brain pan. The greatest capacity of the gorilla's brain is only 34½ cubic inches, the least 23, as against 62 in the least capacious human skull and 114 in the greatest.

Art In the Soup.

The artist's wife leaned over and looked at her husband's soup after she had handed it to him.

"Oh," she cried, "look at the scroll the fat has made in your soup. Isn't it artistic? Don't eat it. It is so beautiful!"—Exchange.

Fighting Dust With Dust.

About the hardest problem is found in coal mines, where dangerous dust is produced by the ton every day and scattered over miles of roadway and workings, the removal of which by vacuum or other means is next to impossible.

The best preventive found thus far seems to be that of fighting dust with dust. Sprinkling has been tried to keep the air free from inflammable dust mixture. Salt has been scattered over the floors to gather moisture and prevent dust from rising. The dust has been cleared from parts of the mine to form barriers, over which the flame from a dust explosion is not likely to pass. Now, however, the best results seem to come from the scattering of stone and clay dust over the coal dust throughout the mine. This makes the coal dust nonexplosive, and sections treated with the noninflammable dusts form better barriers against an explosion than the old dustless barriers.—Saturday Evening Post.

Old Time Bell Ringers.

"Bell ringing," said the bell ringer, "reached its height in Belgium in the middle age. The Belgian bell ringers invented the clavecin. This was a keyboard similar to a piano's, and each key being struck caused a hammer to hit a bell. In that way a clever bell ringer could get out of his chimes swift changes and intricate harmonies unknown before. The clavecin lifted bell ringing from manual labor to high art, but it must have been funny to see a performer playing on his piano like clavecin. The keys were stiff; they had to be struck very hard, and hence the player wore thick gloves. He stood off from the instrument, sleeves rolled up and brow knitted and, doubling his fists, he rained blow on blow with all his force. We bell ringers have no clavecins today, nor have we the skill of the ringers of the past."

Humanizing Geometry.

I used to try to work up a factitious enthusiasm for geometry by naming angle A Abraham, B Benjamin, C Cornelius, and so on; side AB then became Abrajamin, side BC Benjanellus, side AC Abranelius, and the perimeter Abrajaminellus—that last a name of Miltonic sonorousness, mouth filling and perfectly pronounceable if one scanned it as catalectic trochaic tetrameter. Although I never had the courage to introduce them to my teachers, I looked upon the Abrajaminellan family with some affection until one day I tried to name the perimeter of a dodecagon, when I came to the conclusion that it would require less time to learn the proposition by heart than to learn the name, and from that date I gave up all attempt to infuse an adventitious interest into Legendre and simply memorized him.—Atlantic.

Boiled Clothes.

Some housekeepers believe in boiling the clothes before rubbing, and some do not believe in boiling them at all. Others believe that clothes are made yellow by boiling. Boiling does not make clothes yellow. Clothes become yellow when they are improperly rinsed, when there is iron in the water or a deposit of iron is formed from the boiler or by the use of an impure soap. On the other hand, boiling takes an important part in the dissolution and removal of the soap, which expert housekeepers, who know that the soap must be removed if the clothes are to keep their color and wearing qualities, will recognize as an indisputable reason why the clothes should be boiled—and boiled after rubbing. In these days of sterilizing it seems illogical to accept as clean unboiled clothes.—Woman's Home Companion.

Badly Mixed.

A booking agent for a Chautauqua bureau visited a small town. He called on a man who said that in order to introduce a Chautauqua it would be necessary to see the most prominent man of the town. Together they called on the "first citizen," and the booking agent was introduced.

"Mr. Jones," said he, "I called to see you in regard to a Chautauqua."

"It won't do a bit of good," spoke up the prominent citizen. "My wife and I have looked over all the catalogues carefully and have already decided on another machine."—Everybody's.

THE MONDAY CLUB.

The regular meeting of the Monday club was held at the usual time and place, with a fair attendance. Mrs. E. M. Lewis acted as leader.

Mrs. R. M. Molles had a paper on the "Age of Depression" and was followed by Mrs. Emilie Hall with a paper on "The Architecture of the Renaissance." "The Sculpture of the 16th Century" was given in a paper by Mrs. G. R. Gillespie.

A holiday recess will be taken and the next meeting will be held Jan. 4th, 1915 with Mrs. R. B. Gillespie leader.

WIT AND WISDOM

The Wit and Wisdom Club met with Mrs. J. F. N. Bowen last evening and in spite of the extreme cold there was a good attendance. The subject of the evening was Michigan, Rev. Wm. A. Rex presiding. Rev. W. B. Hartzog had a paper on Michigan Poets, Prof Reed on "Trees, birds, and animals of Michigan" and Fred Rector told of the Agriculturel and Manufacture of the State. After refreshments some very good stunts on Michigan were given with Rev. W. B. Hartzog and Prof Reed leading the two sides. An acrostic, historical events and history by supplying adjectives were the stunts. A tie resulted and the prize a box of candy was secured by Prof Reed when a draw was made. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rosacrans, Mrs. A. O. Howard being hostess.

In Doubt.

Ethel—Oh, dear me! I don't know what to think! Algy asked me last night if I wouldn't like to have something around the house that I could love and would love me. Edith—Well? Ethel—Well, I don't know whether he means himself or whether he is thinking of buying me a dog!—Puck.

Bull Racing In Burma.

A form of sport very popular in Burma is bull racing. These contests are largely attended by the natives, who bet considerable sums of money on the result. A native sportsman who owns one of these bulls values it at $12,000, and it is said to bring him in yearly from $5,000 to $7,000.

BIG FIRE AT BRITTON

About 11 o'clock last night fire broke out in the Lee block in Britton. Lowe's implement store and Amos Underwood's barber shop were located in the block which was totally destroyed. By prompt work most of the stock in the implement store was saved and the people of Britton worked bravely to save the adjoining buildings.

OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO SINGERS.

Mr. William A. Thorpe of Jackson vocal instructor and soloist, was in Tecumseh Friday to arrange for a class in voice culture to begin the first week in January. Mr. Thorpe will open a studio and will teach one day each week in Tecumseh. He will receive beginners and advanced pupils for private instruction in the art of singing. Further announcements will appear in this paper later. adv

SURPRISE PARTY

The Dignified Dozen gave Mrs. Ella Sheldon a surprise party Saturday evening as a good-bye party as Mrs. Sheldon is planning to spend the winter months with a sister in Florida, a sister from Batavia, N. Y. will join her on her trip. A merry evening was passed and a pot-luck supper was served. As the guests departed each one voiced the wish for a pleasant sojourn in the sunny south.

JUDGE GUY M. CHESTER

Of Hillsdale to fill vacancy in the circuit court made by the death of Judge O'Mealey.

Word was received Thursday by County Clerk Knowles from the governor's office at Lansing that Judge Guy M. Chester would take up the work for the October term in the circuit court which has been delayed by the death of Judge O'Mealey.

RED CROSS SEALS DECREASE TUBERCULOSIS RATE.

"Would to God your work had started fifty years ago," was the comment of an Arizona consumptive, in writing the other day to Dr. Hoyt E. Dearholt, executive secretary of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis Association. Part of the letter follows:

"Fine work, old chap! That decrease in the death rate seems a remarkable gain to me. I had not expected results as soon as that. I have laughed at the authorities who claimed that in ten years a case of tuberculosis would be as rare as one of smallpox is today. The bad work of centuries cannot be undone in ten years, and so I marvel at your wonder progress. I trust the errors in statistics, if any, are all in your favor. You inspire me. Would to God your work had started fifty years ago. Probably then the disease would have missed me."

The letter contained a check for Red Cross Seals, from the sale of which the entire support of the Wisconsin work is derived. Every seal you buy is a bullet in the fight against tuberculosis.

The reports up to December 10 of the Red Cross Christmas Seal Sale to State headquarters is far in excess of last year, some 760,000 seals having been sold. This is $7,600 for anti-tubercolosis work.

Mrs. William Weatherhead

Albert O. Howard received word last week of the death of his aunt Mrs. Wm. Weatherhead who passed away in Pontiac Thursday Dec. 10, 1914 aged 73 years.

Justina O. Deuel was a resident of Tecumseh for many years being the daughter of Mr and Mrs. Timothy Deuel and sister of the late Fred Deuel.

Her husband Capt Wm Weatherhead passed away a number of years ago. While living here he organized a company for the Civil war and served with it until the close.

Tina will be held in loving remembrance by her old friends in Tecumseh as schoolmate and friend in social life.

A henpecked looking floorwalker in one of our large department stores was standing in the aisle with a pained and faraway look in his eyes. Suddenly a woman hustled up back of him and demanded, "Where are the children's dresses, sir?"

"In the bottom bureau drawer, Maria," said the floorwalker, hastily turning around. And then he fled.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Many Kinds of Hard Work.

"I want you to understand," said young Spender, "that I got my money by hard work."

"Why, I thought it was left to you by your rich uncle."

"So it was, but I had hard work to get it away from the lawyers."

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B. J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it, it is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

The Dr. lost no time in throwing water and otherwise deadening the flames and one pipe fell to the floor while they were at work.

RELIEF FUND

FOR THE BELGIANS GROWS

Tecumseh People Responding Liberably to Fund

Recently a movement was started in Tecumseh by the ladies of the Monday Club to raise funds for the war sufferers in Belgium A public meeting was called at the library Tuesday evening, Dec. 8, which was well attended and the plans for raising funds were presented.

Mrs Mary F. Wright acted as chairman. A permanent organization was effected and a committee was appointed to canvas the village for subscriptions. Our ladies are contributing material to be worked up for clothing and under the leadership of Mrs. Sena Crane the work is progressing nicely.

The canvasing committee composed of Dr. L. G, North, Raynor Brewer and J. R. Keeney, started out to raise funds to purchase and ship a carload or flour. There has been up to Monday noon about 65 bbls. of flour subscribed amounting to $325 00 and cash subscriptions to the relief fund amounting to $75.00. This amount has been paid in.

Our people are responding generously and as usual are making a big success of it. Watch the fund grow.

Do not forget the lantern pictures of the war zone at 7:30 to-night at the assembly room of the Presbyterian church. Admission 10c.

The following appeals from Belgium have lately come in: "If somebody does not come to our aid soon, God knows what will become of us," write two leading residents of Blankenberghe where the community has contrived to feed 1,600 people daily, but all funds are exhausted.

The American consul in Antwerp appeals for food for his family, for his consular staff and for himself. He says that Antwerp is not victualized, and the bakers no longer supply bread for lack of flour. Children have been picked up who had not tasted food for many days and what flour the people have is being mixed with bran and potatoes to eke it out, and make bread of it.

ATTENTION !!

The Village Council wishes to call attention to the Village Ordinance which provides that owners and occupants of property in said Village shall keep the sidewalks adjoining their property free and clear from snow.

Under Section 3. said ordinance reads as follows:

All expense incurred by the Village in the keeping of the sidewalks clear and free from snow, ice, filth and other nuisances, as above provided, shall be assessed, as a special assessment, against the premises adjoining the sidewalk in connection with which such expense is incurred, plus a penalty of ten per cent of such expense, to be levied and collected upon the next assessment roll of the Village.

The Street Commissioner has orders to clean all sidewalks where owners and occupants have not complied with this ordinance, and if you do not wish to pay this special assessment for the cleaning of your walks, see that they are kept clear from snow.

A UNIQUE RECORD

Very Few Like It In Our Broad Republic

Home Testimony for Doan's Kidney Pills, published in every locality, is of itself conclusive evidence of merit. Continued testimony forms still stronger evidence. Years ago, a citizen of Tecumseh gratefully acknowledged the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed—the proof more convincing. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pills—the record is unequaled.

[illegible], carpenter, N. [illegible] St., Tecumseh, says: "My kidneys were [illegible] and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. The results were satisfactory. I am in hopes that, other kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience." I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

MRS. KUHNS WINS IN J. J. BRADY SUIT

Gains Breach of Promise Victory Over State Auditor.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—When the $50,000 breach of promise suit filed by Mary Kuhns Brady against State Auditor James J. Brady was called in Judge Tuthill's court Mr Brady was not present. Inquiries were made. It was shown the state official had received personal service in the case. That was the only evidence taken. The court then entered a decree for the plaintiff. An order was entered finding Mr. Brady had defaulted by failing to file an appearance within the time limit fixed by the statutes.

Mrs. Brady was on hand with her attorney. She refused to discuss the case and when the court order was entered she left the room wearing a happy smile. Her attorney claimed a "moral victory," a vindication for his client pleased her more than the prospect of a judgment of $50,000.

The sensational suit was filed on June 1, immediately prior to the Lorimer bank crash, and the disclosures of the plaintiff concerning the workings of the auditor's office soon became interwoven with the stories of the tangled affairs uncovered by the bank scandal. The complainant charged she was married to Brady once but illegally. She said he promised to make the marriage legal by a second ceremony and that he broke that promise.

TURN DOWN FULTZ DEMANDS

Ban Johnson Admits Players Fraternity Requests Were Denied.

New York, Dec. 14.—Ban Johnson, president of the American league, admits that the national commission has flatly denied to entertain favorably any one of nine demands presented to the triumvirate in special meeting here last week by David L. Fultz, president of the Base Ball Players fraternity. The refusal of the commission was based upon a line in keeping with the recent policies of economy endorsed by both the National and American leagues.

Mr Johnson declared that the two most important concessions demanded by the union would have imposed upon organized base ball unfair financial burdens. Fultz and his board of directors wished organized base ball to bind itself to accept immediately, upon purchase or draft, players secured from the smaller circuits. It was also desired that these same club owners should guarantee full salaries to those players turned back to clubs of lower classification.

There have been several cases of burglary at various villages in this county during the past few weeks and officers believe that with the arrest of these men the mysteries will be cleared up. Starry is said to have talked, implicating his companions in the Novi case at least.

BOY RESCUED MAY YET DIE

Two Lads Break Through the Ice While Skating.

Birmingham, Mich., Dec. 14.—Harold Sanford, aged eleven, and Leonard Fyfe, aged thirteen, went skating on a pond and both were nearly drowned. Sanford broke through the ice and Fife got a rope and tried to help him out with the result that he, too, went through. He scrambled out, however, and got help. Sanford had been clinging to the ice at the edge of the hole and lapsed into unconsciousness when taken from the water.

He is in a serious condition and may die.

TAX COLLECTOR 74 YEARS OLD

Expected to Resign on Account of Feebleness — Gained Strength and Twenty-four Pounds by Taking Vinol.

Corinth, Miss.: — "I am a city tax collector and seventy-four years of age. I was in a weak, run-down condition so that I became exhausted by every little exertion. My druggist told me about Vinol, and I decided to take it. In a week I noticed considerable improvement; I continued its use and now I have gained twenty pounds in weight, and feel much stronger. I consider Vinol a fine tonic to create strength for old people."—J. A. PRICE, Corinth, Miss.

As one grows old their organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth, circulation is poor, the blood gets thin, the appetite poor and digestion weak. Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, is the ideal strengthener and body builder for old folks because it creates a good healthy appetite, strengthens digestion, enriches the blood, improves circulation and in this natural manner builds up, strengthens and invigorates feeble, run-down, nervous and aged people, and if it does not do all we say, we will pay back your money.

KIDNAPED

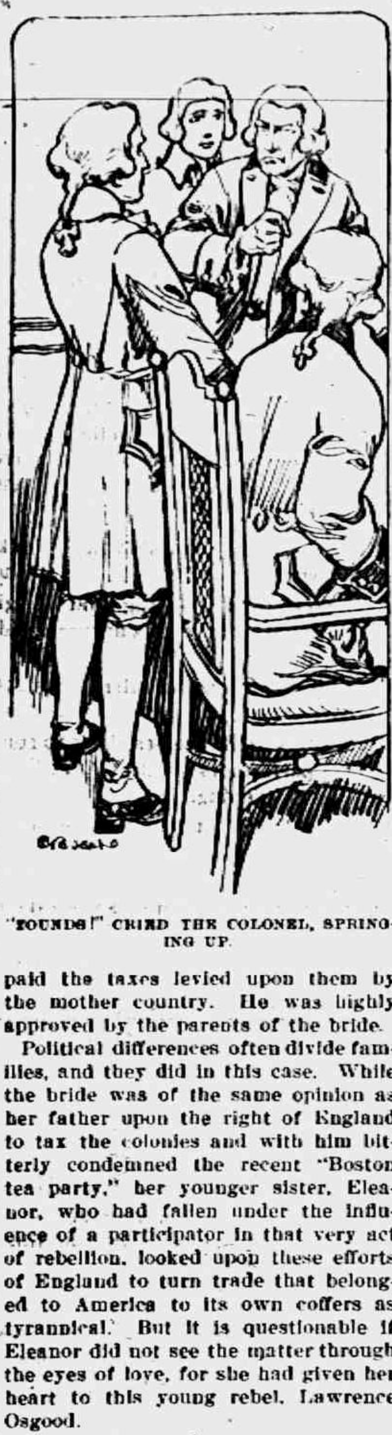
A Story of an Early Fourth of July.

By F. A. MITCHEL.

Between Boston and Concord, Mass., stands a colonial dwelling that is typical of the middle part of the eighteenth century.

One evening (it was the Fourth of July, by the way) in the summer of 177— this property was brilliantly lighted for a wedding. The grounds were adorned with paper lanterns of variegated colors, while the interior of the house was illuminated with myriads of candles—a light whose softness has never been attained by any modern contrivance. This exquisite light touched tenderly the dainty decorations and the cheeks of beautiful women, while the prismatic glass pendants of the chandeliers broke the rays into miniature rainbows.

The bride was Marion, eldest daughter of Colonel Harwood, who was about to be united to Captain Trelawney, an officer of the force that had been sent over from England to Boston to keep the refractory citizens of that town in order and see that they paid the taxes levied upon them by the mother country. He was highly approved by the parents of the bride.



"ZOUNDS!" CRIED THE COLONEL, SPRINGING UP.

Political differences often divide families, and they did in this case. While the bride was of the same opinion as her father upon the right of England to tax the colonies and with him bitterly condemned the recent "Boston tea party," her younger sister, Eleanor, who had fallen under the influence of a participator in that very act of rebellion, looked upon these efforts of England to turn trade that belonged to America to its own coffers as tyrannical. But it is questionable if Eleanor did not see the matter through the eyes of love, for she had given her heart to this young rebel, Lawrence Osgood.

Colonel Harwood was as much perturbed about his younger daughter's choice as he was pleased with that of her sister. No more loyal Briton than he ever lived, and the mere thought that he should have a daughter married to a man who would raise his hand against his king was harrowing. He had forbidden Osgood the house and had so circumscribed the freedom of his daughter that all communication between the two was cut off.

When we speak of all communication between lovers being cut off we mean ordinary communication. We do not refer to the many devices they adopt to confer with each other secretly. Eleanor and Lawrence Osgood had a postoffice under a corner of the high wall that inclosed the house. It had been made by some burrowing animal, and the lovers had concealed it with dry leaves.

Many pleadings of Osgood found their way by this underground route that Eleanor should elope with him. But she resisted, at first declaring that she could not thus bring sorrow upon her dear father, then that she would blame herself if she did so and, lastly, that there was no opportunity. Young, vigorous love will in the end triumph over such scruples, and Eleanor knew that her father's only objection to her lover was that he resisted tyranny. What wonder that she eventually gave as a reason for not yielding to her lover's suit that there was no opportunity! At the very time she made the statement the opportunity was at hand.

The colonel of Trelawney's regiment directed that the regimental band furnish music at the wedding. At the appointed hour the musicians began a wedding march, and the bride and groom, followed by the family and guests, marched from one drawing room to another on the opposite side of the hall and stood before a great open fireplace facing the clergyman and the assembled throng. When the ceremony was over and congratulations were begun the band struck up the national British anthem, "God Save the King."

Those present who believed that the king could do no wrong were inspired by the air dear to the heart of all Britons, while those who smarted under the burdens King George had imposed upon them listened sullenly.

The wedding was over. The two had been made one. The bride had retired. A number of guests were making merry when suddenly a cry arose:

"Bride stealers!"

In the old days in the American colonies a curious custom prevailed. Certain of the guests at a wedding would conspire to kidnap the bride. Watching their opportunity, they would carry her out of the house, place her on a horse behind one of the kidnaping party and gallop to a neighboring tavern. Rescuers would follow, and there would be a merry chase. If the fugitives reached the tavern before the rescue party the rest of the night would be spent in feasting and dancing, the bridegroom being expected to pay the reckoning.

No sooner had the cry of "Bride stealers!" been raised in the Harwood house than it was followed by:

"To the rescue!"

"To horse!"

"Which way?"

A drummer of the band, catching the spirit of the occasion, beat the long roll (which in war is used to rouse soldiers in case of an attack), and the house was in an uproar. Every man who had come to the wedding on horseback mounted in hot haste and set off at a gallop in the direction he was told the kidnapers had gone, while many of the women for whom horses stood ready were not far behind. It was not long before the road was lined with horses, chaises, vehicles of all kinds, carrying shouting, laughing parties in pursuit of the stolen bride.

Colonel Harwood contented himself to let the young people have their fun and, with the commander of the regiment to which his son-in-law belonged, repaired to the supper room, now deserted, and the two sat down to a bottle of port and to talk over the situation, which was becoming more serious every day. Colonel Harwood was advocating the use of cold lead in case a rebel mob grew unmanageable by ordinary means when Captain Trelawney entered. His father-in-law looked at him in astonishment.

"Why are you not with the rescue party to recapture your wife, sir?"

"Because my wife is upstairs. I have come to partake of a parting cup with my father-in-law and my commander."

"Your wife is upstairs!"

"Yes, sir. It is Eleanor who has been kidnaped."

"By whom?"

"I don't know, but I suspect it is Mr. Osgood."

"Zounds!" cried the colonel, springing up more sprightly than he had done since he was on the active list. "My horse! My horse!"

There was a new commotion in the Harwood household, not so humorous, but with more real emotion than had arisen at the cry of "Bride stealers!" Colonel Harwood as soon as he could obtain a horse galloped to the tavern and entered it like a storm cloud. Lawrence Osgood was standing by Eleanor, holding high a wineglass to drink with the assembled company, who had just proposed the health of himself and his bride. The fugitive couple had not only arrived at the tavern before their pursuers, but the groom had sent a parson there who had married them, pronouncing them man and wife just as the first follower had thrown himself from his horse and dashed into the house.

The moment Eleanor saw her father she ran to him and threw herself at his feet. He turned from her and bowed his head. Those of the bridal party who were present gathered round him and interceded for her, begging him to crown the happiness of all by his forgiveness, declaring that there was no finer fellow in the world than Osgood, and as for a man's politics no one should seek to control those of his son-in-law. Eleanor, seeing her father waver, threw her arms about his neck and added her pleadings to those of the others. Some one put a cup of wine under the colonel's nose.

Perhaps it was the welcome odor; perhaps his love for his daughter prevailed over his hatred for a rebel. At any rate, he slowly extended his hand, took the cup, drained its contents, then put his arm about his daughter. Others seized Osgood and forced him to his father-in-law, who extended his hand, and, though no word of forgiveness was spoken, all knew that the reconciliation was complete.

Singularly enough, the couple whose union the guests had assembled at the Harwood house to celebrate did not mingle in the festivities. It was daylight when the last stirrup cup was drunk at the tavern and the company broke up, each taking the road to his own home.

When the Revolution came on the Trelawney and the Osgood branches of the Harwood family were separated. Captain Trelawney and his brother-in-law fought on different sides. Colonel Harwood, who was too old for military service, remained at home, but loyal to his king. At the conclusion of the struggle his property was confiscated, and he joined that band of Tories who sought a new American home in Canada. He remained very bitter toward the rebels, as he called them, until the day of his death, though, except for Osgood's part in the Revolution, he never had cause to regret that he had forgiven him for kidnaping his daughter.

Strange Symphony.

A certain clergyman was the guest of the Rev. Edward Everett Hale over night. In the morning he came downstairs with a look of pleased surprise on his face.

"What a delightful custom you have here," he said, "of chiming the bells at midnight! I got up and leaned out of the window to listen. It was a pretty air they played, although I did not recognize it."

"This," said Dr. Hale, telling the story afterward, "was the first time I ever heard of a fire alarm being taken for a symphony."—St. Joseph News Press.

NEAR WAR WITH JAPAN IN 1913

Hobson Tells How U. S. Guns Were Manned For Weeks.

SEC'Y. DANIELS DOESN'T DENY

Alabama Congressman Before House Committee Denies Charge Made by Member of Navy General Board of "Seeing Things"—Discussion Provokes Administration.

WASHINGTON — A statement made before the house committee on naval affairs by Representative Hobson of Alabama that the United States got itself in readiness for a possible war in the Pacific in May 1913 was permitted to go unchallenged by Secretary of the Navy Daniels, although Mr. Hobson called on Mr. Daniels to deny the truth of the assertion.

Mr. Hobson's challenge to the secretary of the navy to deny that the government was fearful or trouble in the far east a year ago and that it actually made preparations for war in that quarter was dramatic in the extreme. Mr. Hobson was impelled to make this declaration by the testimony of Capt. A. G. Winterhalter, a member of the navy general board, who intimated that Mr. Hobson and many other persons in the United States are constantly seeing visions of war.

Hobson Very Angry.

Mr. Hobson, who exhibited great anger over Captain Winterhalter's rather facetious testimony, denied that he was "seeing things." Then it was that he made the statement.

"For my own part," he said, "I have not been seeing things. In May, 1913, and for several weeks thereafter our gunners at Corregador island stayed at their guns night and day. The harbors were mined. Troops were sent there. Everything was prepared for a two years' siege. Everything had been moved there except the government which was ready to move. I have noticed other things from time to time. I do not notice them now any more than I ever have."

Secretary Daniels and Captain Winterhalter looked grave as Mr. Hobson proceeded. The former made no direct reply to the assertion of Mr. Hobson about the alleged preparations for war on Corregador island, whereupon Mr. Hobson exclaimed: "Well, the secretary of the navy is here. I will ask him if what I have stated is not true. Let him deny it." Secretary Daniels, his face pale and lips drawn, looked Mr. Hobson squarely in the eye and made no reply. Turning angrily toward Captain Winterhalter Mr. Hobson remarked:

"I don't want people to say any more that I am seeing things."

Land Question Recalled.

Mr. Hobson's charge that the United States was preparing for war in 1913 created something of a sensation in the committee room. It was recalled that it was just about that time when diplomatic negotiations were pending with Japan relative to the alien land law question in California. The relations between the two countries were strained, much more strained in fact, than was generally supposed at the time. It has been said in well informed quarters that it was due largely to the good offices of Great Britain that the situation was smoothed over.

Figured in Tolls Repeal.

It was just about this time also that the president recommended the repeal of the free toll clause of the Panama canal act saying that unless congress yielded to him on this occasion he would not know how to deal with other questions "of a more delicate character." It was said tonight that administration officials are exceedingly bitter over the developments before the house committee on naval affairs in the past few days and that as a result of today's incident in which there was a frank discussion of a question that the government would rather have ignored, an effort may be made to prevent further discussion of naval subjects before the house.

IS WARDEN RUSSELL SLATED TO RETIRE?

"Big Jim" Byers Is Believed in Line for Prison Job.

LANSING, MICH. — And now Old Dame Rumor is about again whispering that the skids are being greased for Warden "Jim" Russell of Marquette prison. According to the tale in circulation here, the most of which comes down from the upper peninsula, Governor Ferris is going to appoint Frederick W. Bawden of Houghton, who was the Democratic candidate for congress in the Twelfth district in November on the Marquette board to succeed Ira Carley of Stephenson, whose term expires this coming February. And Mr. Bawden will go on the board with the intention of seeing that Warden Russell is ousted in favor of "Big Jim" Byers of Houghton, former sheriff of that county and one of the most prominent Democrats in the upper peninsula.

In support of the story, it is pointed out that Mr. Byers recently turned down the virtual assurance that he could have the postmastership of Houghton, and that the reason assigned was that he "had something more to his liking in sight."

It is reported here, that when approached on the subject the former sheriff has been very coy about denying the imputation that he was to land the prison job. Mr. Byers made an excellent record while sheriff of Houghton, and has a large number of influential friends through the upper peninsula where he is best known.

GERMANS HURLED BACK BY ALLIES

Fight In North France Resumed and London Reports Progress.

TURKS SHELL RUSSIAN PORTS

Petrograd Claims Rout of Kaiser's Troops in North Poland Is Complete and That Men Have Been Withdrawn—Rumor of Zeppelin Raid Brings Scare to Paris.

The official information bureau at London gave out the following statement: "After a period of comparative quiet the fighting in northern France has recommenced. A combined attack by the allies was made on the line from Hollebeke to Wytschaete, in Belgium. Several German trenches and a number of prisoners were captured and substantial progress was made."

Austria has made a tentative peace proposal to Russia, but exchanges between the two governments in which Russia made known the terms that would be demanded were without result, Swiss newspapers report.

BERLIN, (by wireless to Sayville, L. I. — The official press bureau gave out the following:

"The Turkish cruiser Midirli (formerly the Breslau) has bombarded Sebastopol. The Turkish official bulletin says that the large cruiser Sultan Selim (the Goeben) bombarded Batum Dec. 10, setting fire to the city. The Russian land batteries returned the fire without success. Constantinople learns authoritatively that a Mohammedan uprising has occurred in the Caucasus and that 50,000 armed Russian Moslems went over to fight against the Russians."

North Poland Cleared of Germans.

PETROGRAD — So complete was the rout of the German army which invaded northern Poland from Mlawa that the force is now cleared from Russian territory and this plan of movement against Warsaw has apparently been abandoned, according to reports here.

The army suffered extremely heavy losse in being driven back after taking Przasnysz. The remaining forces are now being redistributed, however, it is declared. Part are reported as being sent north in East Prussia to aid in the defense of the line in the Mazurian Lake region. Another part is being hurried south to aid in the fighting in the Carpathians.

Forced Into War, Says Sultan.

LONDON — A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram company from Constantinople by way of Amsterdam gives the gist of a speech from the throne by Sultan Mehmed V. at the opening of the Turkish parliament. The sultan announced that he was forced to war when the Russian fleet attacked the Turkish fleet in the Black sea and England and France began actual hostilities by sending troops to the Turkish frontiers.

Street Lamps Extinguished.

PARIS — All the street lamps in Paris were extinguished at midnight. The reason for this precaution is said to have been the receipt of a report that two Zeppelin dirigible balloons had been sighted at Amiens proceeding in the direction of Paris.

Petrograd Fears Spy Fires.

PETROGRAD — Petrograd is without water supply. There are grave fears of a possible disaster in case of fire, and the danger of blazes being started by spies who may be in the Rusian capital is believde to be acute. This is the first time in thirty years that Petrograd has suffered from a lack of water. The supply has been cut off by ice blocking the conduits from the Neva from which the city's water is taken.

WANT $500,000 FOR ROADS CONSTRUCTION

Lapeer County Representatives Take Bull by Horns.

LAPEER, MICH. — The latest developments in the Lapeer county good roads scrap occurred when a meeting of representatives from all over the county voted unanimously in favor of bonding Lapeer county for a half million dollars to build good roads with.

Mayor Frary, who was chairman of the meeting, appointed a committee composed of members from each township to circulate petitions for bonding the county. The petitions must be submitted to the board of supervisors at their January session in order to have the question come up at the April election.

Ex-Governor John T. Rich and other prominent speakers addressed the meeting and pointed out that the completion of the highways would make Lapeer one of the best counties in the state in the matter of good roads. The proposed half million bond issue will build 239 miles of good roads. The board of supervisors at their October session refused to appropriate anything for good roads as they were dissatisfied with the work already done.

A special meeting was called in November to consider the matter again but nothing was done on account of a law which allows no money to be appropriated at a special session.

SUSPECT TALKED TOO MUCH

Three Men Are Arrested for An Alleged Robbery.

PONTIAC, MICH. — Frank M. Gityoung, alias Frank James, of Mahoney City, Pa.; Homer Starry of Dayton, O., and Helmer Campbell of Wyandotte were placed under arrest at Highland, near here, by Under Sheriff O. H. P. Greene and Deputy Sheriff John McDonald, on the charge of robbery, committed at Novi.

There have been several cases of burglary at various villages in this county during the past few weeks and officers believe that with the arrest of these men the mysteries will be cleared up. Starry is said to have talked, implicating his companions in the Novi case at least.

BOY RESCUED MAY YET DIE

Two Lads Break Through the Ice While Skating.

BIRMINGHAM, MICH. — Harold Sanford, aged eleven, and Leonard Fyfe, aged thirteen, went skating on a pond and both were nearly drowned. Sanford broke through the ice and Fife got a rope and tried to help him out with the result that he, too, went through. He scrambled out, however, and got help. Sanford had been clinging to the ice at the edge of the hole and lapsed into unconsciousness when taken from the water.

He is in a serious condition and may die.

PRINGLE HAS MORE WOES

Wife in Divorce Case Names Woman in Slayer's Infidelity.

PORT HURON, MICH. — Mrs. Georgiana Pringle, of St. Clair, has filed suit for divorce from Ralph T. Pringle, well known marine man. Mrs. Pringle names Mildred Kerr, a Port Huron woman, as co-respondent.

Pringle was convicted of killing George B. McKinnon in a saloon at St. Clair in 1909 and was sentenced to serve ten years at Jackson prison. He was pardoned by Governor Osborn after he had served but a few months more than two years.

Saved by Dead Men

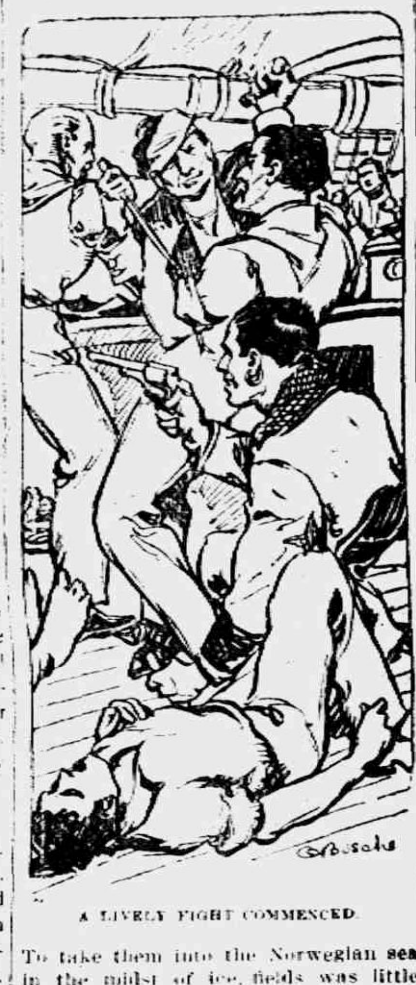
It Happened In the Olden Sail Ship Days.

By JOHN Y. LARNED.

W[illegible] sail ship when I [illegible] and at twenty-[illegible] vessel. I sailed in southern waters and in northern waters, and I couldn't tell you which I disliked more those of the far north [or] those on the equator, where the sun [beats] down, there being no way of getting away from the heat. Sometimes up north, with the thermometer 60 degrees below zero and the wind blowing a gale, a man could warm up a bit by getting into a sleeping bag, but on the equator, where the temperature was hanging about 120 day after day, he couldn't cool off a bit.

When I commanded the Pelican I struck the island of Borneo in July, when the weather was so hot that the men couldn't stand it. Some deserted, some died, for we had a lot of sickness [in the] hot weather, and I found myself with a quarter of a crew. I was obliged to pick up a few natives in Borneo, got a few more men at Ceylon, another lot at Bombay, and so on, working westward, taking on a worse lot at every port. By the time I reached the Suez canal I had a crew 25 per cent of whom were respectable seamen and 75 per cent desperadoes. Of the 75 per cent half had Asiatic blood in their veins.

I was on a long cruise around the world, trading from port to port, and on entering the Mediterranean my course was Gibraltar, through the strait, then northward to Rotterdam, up the west coast of Norway, thence through the Dover strait and down the Atlantic to Boston. I should never have ventured to carry out such a course with such a crew. Most of my men came from the tropics and were hard enough to control even in a temperature to which they were used.



A LIVELY FIGHT COMMENCED.

To take them into the Norwegian sea in the midst of ice fields was little short of madness.

There was trouble continually during our passage over the Mediterranean, which required all the management of which I and my first and second officers were capable. But we were near land all the while, where we could reach marine courts, and the crew realized that any overt act of mutiny might be punished. In moving up the coasts of Spain, France and Holland the temperature was falling right along, and when any duty was to be performed most of the men had to be driven out of their bunks, where they were endeavoring to keep warm, to do it. By the time we reached the Norwegian coast it was almost impossible to get them to do any duty.

On reaching Christiansand my men became so unmanageable that I decided to go no farther northward. Sailing due west, I proposed to work southward along the east coast of Scotland. A gale arose, and the temperature fell to a point which the men could not be made to face aloft or in some cases on deck. We were driven between the Shetland islands and the Hebrides and thence toward the west coast of Ireland.

Fancy three officers of a vessel in such a region with such a crew! I being the master, the chief responsibility devolved upon me, but as our lives were at stake I do not doubt that my officers felt the situation as keenly as I. My two mates and four of the original crew worked the ship under my direction. I offered to serve with them, but they insisted on my remaining their commander.

It would not have been difficult for this diminutive crew to navigate the ship in a temperate climate and fair weather, but the decks and the rigging were covered with ice, and much of the time the weather was stormy. Some [of our] sails were blown away, and [th]ose that were not we managed to furl, except the jibs, which we kept out for steerage way. With these few sails to handle, our little crew were enabled to get on.

I kept the ship headed southward till at last we reached a zone where the temperature was not so low and the weather was fair. I hoped the men would return to duty, but they did not. They understood that they were in the position of mutineers and in case I could get them into a civilized port they would be hanged. So when the temperature and the weather were improved, instead of the men being improved also, they gained the will power for a desperate maneuver. One of their number, a Malay, who knew something about navigation, told them that if they would seize the ship he would take them to the coast of Ireland, where they could abandon her and thus save their lives. This seemed to them to be their only chance, and they agreed to adopt it.

We were several hundred miles south of Greenland when the mutineers came to this decision. They kept it secret from those of the original crew who had stood by their duty, but their secret was suspected from observation of their actions. When a crew known to be mutinous are seen putting their heads together it is evident that they are [plotting] some stroke. One of our [crew] who had sailed a great deal in eastern waters and had a smattering of several languages spoken there made an eavesdropper of himself and [picked] up enough from their talk to get their plan. He came with it straight to me.

There were some twenty cutthroats among the crew against whom we could oppose only myself, my two officers and four men—in other words, seven against twenty. The mutineers' plan was to kill all those who were not of their number, make for shore—either Ireland or Newfoundland—leave the ship and scatter.

There was one enemy they did not reckon upon. After leaving the Mediterranean on our way north we had taken aboard fifty casks of port wine, to be sold in New York on the completion of the voyage. Some of the mutineers, considering the matter of taking the ship as good as accomplished, broke into the compartment where the wine was stored and helped themselves. Others, seeing a plentiful supply of the beverage at hand, drank also, and in the course of a couple of hours two-thirds of their number were drunk.

Unfortunately their leader kept sober and succeeded in keeping the rest of his men in like condition. Nevertheless after holding a consultation with my two officers I decided to make an attempt to suppress the mutiny. Realizing what kind of a crew I had to deal with, I had before leaving the east taken a supply of arms to my cabin. As soon as it appeared that the orgie was not likely to go further I called my officers and my four men to my cabin, armed them, and together we went out and I called for those of the crew who were sober to come forward. They did so, and it was evident from their looks that they intended to put up a fight. I knew they were armed, though they kept their arms out of sight. Since it was their nature to fight, there was every reason why they should attempt to carry out their purpose of taking the ship.

I intended to talk with them, endeavoring to persuade them to return to duty, but they did not give me an opportunity. They had traversed but half the distance between them and us when their leader said something in a tongue I did not understand. Then some drawing pistols and some knives, they made a rush for us, and a lively fight commenced.

We drove them back, with one of their men and one of ours lying on the deck. But, rallied by their leader, they returned and this time succeeded in dropping two of our men—the second officer and a seaman—out of the fight while they lost but one man, leaving them nine to our four. We had stronger stuff in us, but they were more agile and could better avoid our blows, the principal weapons used on each side being cutlasses.

The odds were now much against us. We were preparing for a third attack when on our starboard quarter I saw a ship. She had been unnoticed by our party on account of the excitement we were under fighting for our lives. The mutineers did not see her because they were fighting with their backs to her. When they started for us the third time I held up one hand as a signal for a parley and with the other pointed to the coming vessel.

The sight of a ship that I might signal for help took the courage out of them. Their leader urged them to strike a final blow before we could avail ourselves of her assistance; but, panic stricken, they scattered, running back to the forecastle, whence they had come, and down the companionway. I ordered one of my men to close the door and bar them in, which he did.

Meanwhile the ship that had saved us came on. I saw no one on deck except the helmsman, who seemed to be lashed at the wheel, though there were men lying on the deck. Putting the Pelican on a course to pass the stranger at close range, when she came abreast of us I saw that the helmsman was dead, a man propped against the mainmast was dead, and those lying on the deck were dead.

We had been saved by dead men.

The ship had been caught, probably long before, in a northern latitude in extreme cold weather, and the crew had been frozen. Likely they had run out of provisions. Since then she had been sailing in these frigid waters at the mercy of the winds.

Dandies.

The coat does not make the dandy. The proper wearing of proper clothes is but part of the whole duty of a dandy man. A complete dandy is dandified in all his modes of life. Have you ever thought what a conspicuous part the dudes and dandies have played in history? Mark Antony was one of them; so were Alcibiades, Claude Duval, Buckingham, Byron, the poet; Disraeli, the statesman, and dandyism is not dead yet, only moribund, palsied, shaking and decrepit with old age, blown upon by an over practical world, a world only too ready to learn how to obtain the means of living without acquiring also a knowledge of how to use those means to good purpose.—From W. T. Shore's Essay "Dandiacal."

Turkish Origin of Military Bands.

Talking of the military element at the Yildiz palace under Abdul Hamid, including the military band, Sidney Whitman in "Turkish Memories" remarks that military bands as such are quite a modern feature in Europe and owe their origin to the janissaries:

"Janitscharenmusik" is still to this day the term used in Germany for an infernal din of tin kettles, pipes and brass. To the Turk, then, is due all the noise which has become such a public nuisance in our time on the continent of Europe—a heavy responsibility before the tribunal of decency and decorum.

Queen Bess' Shadows.

"I do not approve of shades in painting," said Queen Elizabeth to Daniel Myers. "You must strike off my likeness without shadows." Her majesty, when she spoke thus, was near sixty, and the "shadows," as she humanely called them, were wrinkles big enough to have laid a straw in them.

The Common Selfishness.

Sheep will follow an old bell wether through an opening in the fence in regular order, but human beings all want to get on the street car at the same time.—Toledo Blade.

Ethan Allen.

There never was a portrait made of Ethan Allen. The heroic style of statue of the hero in the national capitol is an imaginative representation.

A LETTER

FROM SANTA CLAUS TO THE CHILDREN.

Dear Children:
I write in great haste just to say
I've met with an accident coming this way.
As Christmas is near, and I've so much to do,
I really must beg a slight favor of you;
And unless I mistake, the small folks of this nation
Will spare poor old Santa a great mortification
By setting about with their might and their main
To see that the accident's righted again.
You know, I suppose, that the distance is great
I travel each year and for fear I'll be late,
I whip up my reindeer and make each good steed
Go prancing along at the top of his speed.
This year my big sleigh was as full as't could hold;
I wrapped me up warm, for the weather was cold—
And started once more on my gay Christmas tour
With lighest of heart, you may be very sure
H[ow] how the bells jingled in tune!
I bowed to the stars and winked to the moon
I found myself crossing the great open sea,
With dolphins and merchildren gazing at me;
I bent a bit over the side of my sleigh
To wave them a hand, when—ah me, lackaday!—
A stocking crammed full to the very small toe
Fell over the back to sea down below.
And then the merchildren made merry ado
With that I had ment for some dear one of you.
So this is my accident, and I would ask—
I know you won't deem it a troublesome task—
That if you should see some poor child with no toys
Upon Christmas morning, dear girls and dear boys,
You'll know the fat stocking he was to have had
Is deep in the sea and poor Santa is sad.
And see that the accident's righted, because
'Twill be a great favor to Yours,
SANTA CLAUS.

MRS. CARL GLANCY

Mrs. Evaline Boyce Glancy passed away at her home north east of town Wednesday at 3 p. m. after a brief illness at the age of 36 years, leaving a babe but a few days old. Her husband and several brothers and sisters are left to mourn her early death. The funeral was held at noon today from the home with burial in the Grubb cemetery just west of Tipton.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO
DEC. 13, 1879

H. W. Stevens bought a large clip of wool last Tuesday at 35c per lb.

We have a good start for sleighing. Now let the clerk of the weather office give us a little more snow.

A very enjoyable Club hop was held at the Bass Ball rooms last evening which was well attended.

There was a tremendous crowd in the village last Saturday and great excitement over the attempted murder of Dr. E. Hause the evening before.

Walt Merritt of Franklin was in town yesterday for the first time since the Grand Stand disaster. His friends were very glad to see him out and he was glad to get out himself. He is gaining rapidly now.

Mr. W. W. Fowler business agent of the celebrated Berger family troupe, was in town yesterday arranging for the appearance of his company on Monday Dec 29th.

Jim Cole has his new engine set up and it works like a charm. He does his sausage grinding by steam now.

The new plate glass windows were placed in position in Wright's Drug Store yesterday which add very much to the appearance of the front.

The Cosmopolitan Club of Adrian and a few of their gentlemen friends will receive calls from the ladies at their Club rooms on the coming New Years Day.

The Sheriff and Prosecuting Att'y offer a reward of $250.00 for the arrest and conviction of the persons who waylaid assaulted and robbed Dr. Hause on the evening of the 12th inst.

ATTEMPTED MURDER

Dr House knocked down and robbed last Friday evening. He was dragged upon the Railroad track and left to be run over by the train. A large Citizens meeting was held and $500 pledged for the arrest and conviction of the assassins. The Doctor was on his way home from a meeting of the Knights of Honor, and when passing Hayden Warehouse was struck from behind with a stone or sand bag and left senseless. He was robbed of about $83 which he had on his person. The late freight train ran over his right hand which was badly mangled the thumb and index finger entirely destroyed. At the Citizens meeting a set of resolutions was drawn up and a committee appointed consisting of W. C. Fitzsimmons, R. B. House and J. S. Strong to raise the sum of $500 as a reward for the arrest and conviction of the assassin.

Only One Face.

Bobby walked round and round the visitor and seemed to be inspecting her from all sides.

"Why do you look at me so, Bobby?" said she.

"Mamma said you were two faced, but I can't find but one," said Bobby gravely.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B. J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it. It is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

HOLY NIGHT

A portrayal of the Holy Night in scenes and song to be given at the Baptist church Sunday evening Dec. 20 at 7 o'clock by nearly 50 people in approiate costume.

"A group of old Christmas carols sung by the entire chorus.

Reading by the Gospel of the Nativity.

Solo, "Cantique de Noel".

Scene of the Annunciation; The angel appears to Mary and tells her that she shall become the mother of Jesus.

Solo, "The Annunciation".

The Vision of the Shephards.

Music "There were Shepherds abiding in the fields," "Glory to God in the Highest".

Offertory

Solo, Angels from the Realms of Glory.

Holy Night, The Manger Scene

Solo, Mary's Manger Song. Visit of the Shepherds. Music, "Holy Night".

Visit of the Magi. Music, "We Three Kings of Orient Are." "Adoration Hymn"

Finale, "Joy to the World the Lord is Come."

In producing these scenes we hope to leave the impression of the true Christmas not the Christmas of Santa Claus and the receiving of gifts but the birth of our Savior and the giving of gifts. A silver collection will be taken and will every person attending respond so that we may give our gifts to those less worthy than ourselves.

JUDGE O'MEALEY'S SUCCESSOR

A good deal of interest is being shown throughout the county as to whom the governor will appoint to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge O'Mealey.

Our friend and fellow townsman, Gen. F. B. Wood, is being mentioned by his friends for this appointment. He has been a life long Democrat, has always been active in party matters and was twice the choice of this county for prosecuting attorney, overcoming a normal Republican majority of some 1500 votes.

Most of his life has been spent in Lenawee county, Tecumseh being his birthplace and home. As a lawyer he has made a fine record, is a careful student of the law and, as a fellow-attorney expressed it, "Fred always goes to the bottom of things and has a clear conception of the law."

General Wood has a host of friends in this community and throughout the county who would be pleased to see him get the appointment and should the governor bestow this honor upon him he would make for this county an excellent judge.

ARTHUR GOVE

Arthur Gove was arrested Dec 10, and brought before Judge Hosmer on a charge of intoxication, and was let go on $100 bail to appear for trial Dec 17 On being arraigned before Judge Hosmer Thursday for trial he changed his plea to guilty. He was let off on signing the pledge and paying the costs. A J. Waters of Manchester was attorney for Gove, and L. F. Bean Assistant Prosecuting attorney of Adrian, for the people.

SOME POTATO

W. S Bordine has received a potato for his Christmas dinner from Homer Sisson of Chinook, Mont., and brought it into the office for our inspection, The potato weighs 4½ pounds and measures 23x16 inches around. Mr. Sisson reports that he and his brother-in-law Arthur Baldwin raised 1,000 bushel on two acres of land. Both Mr. Sisson and Mr. Baldwin are old Tecumseh boys and their friends will be glad to hear of their well doing.

Severe Head Pains Caused By Catarrh Cured By Peruna

I Feel It a Duty to Mankind to Let All Know of My Cure. Peruna Did It.

Mr. W. H. Chaney, R. F. D. 2, Sutherlin, Pittsylvania Co., Va., writes: "For the past twelve months I have been a sufferer from catarrh of the head. Since taking four bottles of your Peruna I feel like a different person altogether. The severe pains in my head have disappeared, and my entire system has been greatly strengthened.

"This is my first testimonial to the curative qualities of any patent medicine. I feel it a duty to mankind to let them know of Peruna. In my estimation it is the greatest remedy on earth for catarrh."

We have thousands of testimonials like Mr. Chaney's. Some of them were written after years of suffering and disappointment in finding a remedy.

Send for free copy of "Ills of Life." The Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now procure Peruna Tablets.

A UNIQUE RECORD

Very Few Like It In Our Broad Republic

Home testimony for Doan's Kidney Pills, published in every locality, is of itself convincing evidence of merit. Continued testimony forms still stronger evidence. Years ago, a citizen of Tecumseh gratefully acknowledged the benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills. The statement is now confirmed. Keeps of more convincing. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pills—the record [illegible]

[illegible] carpenter, N [illegible] says: "My kidneys were disordered and made me miserable. Knowing of several people in this vicinity who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with success, I got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug store and began using them. The results were satisfactory. I am in hopes that other kidney sufferers will profit by reading of my experience. I willingly confirm the statement I gave before praising Doan's Kidney Pills."

Ages Show Man Changes Little.

Though it is conceivable that mankind may have spread from a common center over the entire earth in a few thousand years, Professor Arthur Keith in a Birmingham university lecture has pointed out that the discoveries of the last fifty years clearly indicate that the dispersion and separation into widely separated races has not been a rapid process. The inhabitants of the lower Nile valley, though immigrants have arrived among them, show clearly persistence of the [illegible] types for 8,000 years. The persistence of human types [illegible] also shown in America, and a human skeleton of Lansing Kan., found at a depth of twenty-three feet in a glacial deposit, probably dates back 12,000 years. The men of England of 5,000 years ago had the modern stature, with the form of head and strength of muscle of many men of today. Professor Keith declared that his audiences had representatives of the men of the Derbyshire cave, in America the red Indian preserves the form of men who lived before the last glacial invasion, and the predynastic Egyptian survives in tribes on the Red sea.—New York Press.

She Knew How.

They had been married but a few weeks when they decided to have a turkey dinner for some friends. The young wife was very inexperienced in cooking and spent some time in consulting her cookbook. The bird arrived, and the young husband asked:

"Don't you know how to do it, dearest?"

They both gazed solemnly at the turkey for a moment, and then the wife replied:

"Yes, darling, it's all quite clear except one thing, and I can't quite understand that."

"And what is that, love?" asked the young husband anxiously.

"Why, the book says, 'First clean your turkey,'" replied she, "and I am wondering whether I should use toilet or regular scouring soap."—Boston Herald.

Measuring a Tree's Height.

The simplest way to find out the height of a tree is one that civilized man owes to one of the most primitive races—the Australian bushmen. Stand with your back toward the tree at a point that you think the top of the tree would reach if the tree were felled. Stoop down and look back between your legs at the top of the tree. Move forward or backward until you can just see the sky over the highest branch; there make your mark. The distance from that mark to the trunk will be the height of the tree. There may be some boys so built that they cannot measure anything higher than a gooseberry bush by this method, but even these will find it an amusingly accurate substitute for more scientific methods.—Youth's Companion.

Cash and Credit.

Old Reverdy Scarlett of Baltimore in return for a favor of some kind or other set out one day to give a young Baltimore business man some good advice.

"Young man," he began, "have you got any cash?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"And have you got any credit?"

"Yes, sir."

"Humph!" said Reverdy, and he blew a cloud of smoke into the air. "Well, my boy, I'll just give you this one little piece of counsel. Use your credit up first. Your cash is good at any time."—Exchange.

Manna.

The manna of commerce comes chiefly from Sicily. It is a sweet substance obtained from a small tree known as the manna ash. This tree can be grown as far north as England, but in that country it yields no manna and is cultivated for ornament only. The manna is formed from the sap. The trees are ready to be tapped at the age of eight years, when the stems have a diameter of about three inches.

Mr. Bore—I don't see why people keep diaries, do you?

Miss Lenore—Why, to write down their thoughts, keep a record of their affairs and—

Mr. Bore (interrupting her)—But that's all foolishness. I can keep those in my head.

Miss Lenore—That's a very good way, but, then, not everybody has the room!—Judge.

Human Sacrifice.

Rollin in his ancient history says, "The government of Carthage was founded upon principles of the most consummate wisdom." And on the same page the historian makes this record in reference to the same people (the fortunes of war had gone against them): "They attributed this to the anger of their god, Saturn, because that, instead of offering up children nobly born, who were usually sacrificed to him, there had been fraudulently substituted in their stead the children of slaves and foreigners. To atone for this crime 200 children of the best families of Carthage were sacrificed to Saturn, besides which upward of 300 citizens from a sense of guilt of this pretended crime voluntarily sacrificed themselves. Diodorus adds that there was a brazen statue of Saturn, the hands of which turned downward, so that when a child was laid on them it dropped immediately into a hollow, where was a fiery furnace. We are indebted to the Bible for the difference between that nation and this of today.—Christian Herald.

GOETHALS NOT TO GET SHIPS

Request for Torpedo Boat Destroyers to Be Denied.

WASHINGTON — The request of Colonel Goethals for the services of torpedo boat destroyers to be used as a police force to compel the observance of the regulations regarding the neutrality of the canal was referred by Secretary of War Garrison to Secretary of State Bryan and Secretary of Navy Daniels. Though conferences were held by officials of the three departments no decision was reached in the matter.

It developed that the navy department does not want to detach destroyers from other duties to the service of Governor Goethals in the Panama canal waters. It now seems doubtful whether Colonel Goethals will get the ships he has asked for.

RULERS WILL CONFER ON WAR QUESTIONS

Scandinavian Kings Hope to Maintain Neutrality.

COPENHAGEN — By invitation of King Gustav of Sweden, King Haakon of Norway and King Frederik of Denmark will visit him at Malmo, southern Sweden, next Friday and Saturday. The three kings will be accompanied by their ministers of foreign affairs and secretaries, and will discuss affairs of common interest which have arisen as a result of the war and especially measures for helping the economical situation in Scandinavia.

The coming conference is regarded as showing that excellent relations exist between the three Scandinavian countries and also as indicating their determination to maintain neutrality.

GAS EXPLOSION KILLS SEVEN

Blast Injures Nine and Wrecks Apartment House in Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O. — A blast of gas which rocked the entire west end of the city wrecked a two story brick apartment and business block at 1161 West Madison avenue early in the evening, killed seven persons and injured nine others. Three families were practically wiped out of existence by the explosion. The force of the explosion was such that the bodies of the victims were terribly mutilated and made identification a slow process.

The explosion is believed to have resulted from an accumulation of gas from a leaky pipe in the basement of the building. Fire started in the wreckage and firemen and police risked their lives in the flames to rescue the dead and injured.

TAX COLLECTOR 74 YEARS OLD

Expected to Resign on Account of Feebleness — Gained Strength and Twenty-four Pounds by Taking Vinol.

Corinth, Miss.:—"I am a city tax collector and seventy-four years of age. I was in a weak, run-down condition, so that I became exhausted by every little exertion. My druggist told me about Vinol, and I decided to take it. In a week I noticed considerable improvement; I continued its use and now I have gained twenty pounds in weight, and feel much stronger. I consider Vinol a fine tonic to create strength for old people."—J. A. Price, Corinth, Miss.

As one grows old their organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth, circulation is poor, the blood gets thin, the appetite poor and digestion weak. Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, is the ideal strengthener and body builder for old folks, because it creates a good healthy appetite, strengthens digestion, enriches the blood, improves circulation and in this natural manner builds up, strengthens and invigorates feeble, run-down, nervous and aged people, and if it does not do all we say, we will pay back your money.

STEAMERS DELAYED BY GALE

Three Vessels Bound Up Remain in Shelter at Soo.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH. — Three steamers which arrived at the Soo on their way up Lake Superior are detained by a northwest gale. The Lakeport arrived Saturday afternoon, but decided to wait for her sister ship, the Lakewood, which arrived safely Sunday. The Donnacona joined them that evening. Ten or twelve steamers are still expected down. The Davis lock will be kept open to handle them.

Ice conditions in St. Mary's river are still favorable.

E. V. ZIMMERMAN TAKEN BY DEATH

He Was Father-in-Law of Duke of Manchester,

PROUD OF HIS NAVAL RECORD

Cincinnati Railroad Magnate Served With Distinction During Civil War—Became Rich Through C., H. & D. and Pere Marquette Railroad Deals—Had Many Interests.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 21.—Eugene Zimmerman, father-in-law of the Duke of Manchester, dropped dead while at his club here.

Proud of Naval Record.

Eugene Zimmerman once said that he attributed his success in life to his training and general experience as an officer in the United States navy, but comparatively few people who knew of his remarkable career as one of the west's railroad kings ever heard of him as a naval hero. His friends say that he was fully as proud of his record as a sea fighter for Uncle Sam as he was of his exploits that made him a power in the financial world.

Mr. Zimmerman was born at Vicksburg, Miss., in December, 1845, being the son of Solomon and Hannah J. Briggs Zimmerman. In 1856 he moved with his parents to Clifton, a suburb of Cincinnati, and in 1858 his father died. Two years later—he was then fifteen—his mother passed away.

He was educated at Farmers college, College Hill, O., and at Gambier, O., but left school at the outbreak of the civil war, and after a competitive examination was appointed master's mate in the United States navy. He took part in the bombardment of Vicksburg, familiar ground of his boyhood days; in the expeditions on the Black Ouachita and Yazoo rivers; in the capture of Arkansas Post, Harrodsburg, Louisiana, Fort Pemberton, Fort De Rusy and Haynes Bluff. He was in the thick of the fight when the confederate rams "Webb" and "Missouri" were captured. His gallant services were recognized and he was promoted successively to the ranks of ensign, master, lieutenant and lieutenant commander. In 1868 he was placed in command of the U. S. S. Ouachita, on which he remained until the war ended.

Elected C., H. & D. Director.

Mr. Zimmerman was elected a member of the board of directors of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad and as such was active in the reorganization of the system. He was elected vice president of this railroad in 1892 and in 1902 became its president. In 1903 he secured control of the Pere Marquette system, which deal alone increased the total mileage of the system to 3,443. He also purchased the control of the Chicago, Cincinnati and Louisville railroad.

In addition to his C., H. & D. holdings Mr. Zimmerman had heavy interests in the Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Western, the Birmingham and Atlantic, the Dayton and Union and the Northern Alabama Coal and Iron railroad company, in all of which he was a director.

Thinks Poorly of Dukes.

Mr. Zimmerman leaves one daughter, Helena, who married William Angus Brogo Montagu, the ninth duke of Manchester. The wedding took place in 1900 and although the Manchester family were furious, Mr. Zimmerman said that he approved of the marriage. The bride declared that it was a love match and she would have married the duke "if he had been plain John Smith."

Mr. Zimmerman's titled son-in-law was his greatest source of worry in recent years, and only last November he admitted that his faith had been shaken in the financial capacities of dukes.

At this time it was announced that the duke of Manchester, following the collapse of his scheme of the international education league to supply churches, universities, missionary societies, etc., with high class historic, educatonal and scientific moving picture films, had sailed for England.

"He is a rank failure as a financier," Mr. Zimmerman said.

Sued in Love Case.

Suit was brought against Eugene Zimmerman in June, 1914, by Icy Wareham, known up to that time as a dog fancier, who asked $100,000 for breach of promise. At that time Miss Wareham said that she turned over to her attorneys a number of ardent love letters from Mr. Zimmerman, which would be used to prove her case.

She is about forty years old and has been known at bench shows for a number of years. Her kennels were at Elmhurst, L. I., where she, after she brought suit, told of her meeting with Mr. Zimmerman about eight years ago and of his alleged courtship.

The suit dropped out of sight when, about two months after it was brought, Icy Wareham was arrested in a raid on her apartments by the police and she was sent to jail for ninety days on a charge of violating the tenement house law.

SERVIA'S BOOTY IS TREMENDOUS

Takes Enough Guns from Austria to Supply Army.

NOT DONE COUNTING PLUNDER

Sixty Thousand Killed and Wounded and 80,000 Prisoners Claimed—French Claim Further Gains by Allies—Berlin Concedes Loss of One Trench in Western Terrain.

Rome, Dec. 21.—The Austrian losses in Servia are placed at 60,000 in killed and wounded and 80,000 in prisoners. The booty captured by the Servians consist of 3 banners, 126 field guns, 29 howitzers, 362 munition wagons, 70 machine guns, 2,160 horses, 32 camp kitchens and innumerable rifles. This is in addition to the booty captured in Belgrade when the Servians re-entered that city, which has not yet been estimated.

Paris Claims Gain.

Paris, Dec. 21.—The afternoon's war office statement says:

"From the sea to the Lys we have gained a little ground before Nieuport and Saint Georges.

"To the east and south of Ypres, where the enemy reinforced his organizations, defensive artillery battles occurred and there was slight progress on our part.

"From the Lys to the Oise the allied forces have seized a portion of the German trenches of the first line on the front running through Richebourg, L'Avoue and Givenchye-Lez-La Bassee.

"To the southeast of Albert the trench captured by us on the 17th, near Maricourt and lost on the 18th was recaptured yesterday.

"In the region of Lihons the Germans twice attacked and very violently, for the purpose of retaking the trenches and was retaken by us on the 18th. They were repulsed.

"From the Oise to the Argonné the superiority of our artillery continues to be manifested by the interruption of the enemy's fire, the destruction of machine gun shelters and observers and the dispersion of a considerable number of troops.

"In the Argonne, in the forest of La Grurie, we have repulsed three attacks—two upon Fontaine Madame, one at St. Hubert.

"Between the Argonne and the Vosges there has been salient incident to report."

Berlin Admits Losing One Trench.

Berlin, Dec. 21.—(Via London.)—The German army headquarters today gave out an official communication as follows:

"On the west front the enemy has ceased his unsuccessful attacks upon us in the vicinity of Nieuport and Bixschoote. The attacks near La Bassee, which were made by the French and English, were beaten off with heavy loss to the enemy. Two hundred colored and English prisoners were captured. Six hundred bodies of English soldiers lay on our front near Notre Dame De Lorette.

"Southeast of Bethune we lost a trench sixty metres long, which was taken by the enemy. Our losses were insignificant.

"We made some progress in the Argonne. We took three machine guns.

"On the frontiers of East and West Prussia there is nothing to report.

"In Poland the Russians are preparing strong positions near Rawa and Nidu. We are attacking them everywhere."

MR. "SPEAR" BREAKS IN ON JOHN MITCHELL

Socialist Interrupts to Know About Diamond Ring.

New Rochelle, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Just after John Mitchell, the labor leader and member of the New York state workman's compensation commission, had addressed an audience of 1,800 in the People's forum at the New Rochelle theater in the afternoon on the good done by trade unionism, he was heckeled by a man in the gallery who said his name was "Spear," and that he was a member of the I. W. W. U. After denouncing the effort of the New York bricklayers to bring about the enforcement of the anti-alien labor law on the construction of the New York subways he pointed to the diamond ring that Mr. Mitchell wore on his left hand and said:

"I have my suspicions of any labor man who wears diamonds."

The remarks were greeted with laughter and hisses by the crowd of workingmen and women in the audience. When Mr. Mitchell explained that the ring was a testimonial to him from union coal miners for his successfully settling a great strike a few years ago, men and women stood up and cheered.

Spear, who came from New York city to attend the meeting, said he had once been a member of the American Federation of Labor, but had left it because he believed it was interested more in politics than in the workingman.

Mr. Mitchell said in answer to this: "I have no respect for a man who leaves his union because he is dissatisfied. That is the time he should stay in and fight to make it better or try to make it think as he does."

LOST HIS RIGHT HAND

Ernest Updyke the Victim of a Circular Saw while Sawing Wood on Otis Sisson's Farm

Friday afternoon while working around a circular saw that was in motion, Ernest Updyke met with a most serious accident. His mitten was caught in the machinery and his right hand was completely severed at the wrist. A further cut on the arm rendered it necessary to amputate it three inches further up the forearm. Drs. Hardy and Briegel were called and rendered the necessary service. Mr. Updyke has a portable saw mill and goes from place to place sawing lumber through the winter months.

When Christmas giving becomes a necessity it ceases to be a virtue.

FARMERS UNION

The Farmers Union were entertained by Mr and Mrs Alfred Wright on Friday Dec 18. A bountiful dinner was served there being [illegible] present. After the dinner was served a program of music and recitations was enjoyed which was followed by a discussion led by Dr. Hartzog on "The Problem of the Rural Church." At the close of the discussion officers were re-elected for the new year as follows: President Wm. R. Wilson, Sec. and Treas. Edna VanVleet. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr and J. B. Kennedy on Jan. 8, 1915.

Women Savers Join Club

Our Christmas Money Club is especially advantageous to them. Women more frugal than men

The Lilley State Bank is enrolling many women in its Christmas Money Club.

The club is especially convenient for women as it enables them to save without interfering with regular household requirements. Women as a rule are considered more frugal than men.

Many a man hands his entire monthly earnings over to his wife regularly and lets her attend to the home finances, even to the extent of looking after the bank account. In many homes "Mother" attends to most of the Xmas buying.

Money for Christmas for Every Woman Who Joins The Christmas Money Club

Every woman joining this club will receive from the Lilley State Bank a check for the amount she specifies at the time of joining.

Holiday Gifts, Trips, Special Pleasures

can all be easily provided for by saving a few cents weekly through the Christmas Money Club.

December 15, 1915, every member of the club can receive from this bank a check for $12.75, $25.50, $63.75, $89.25, $127.50—in fact any amount, depending upon which division of the club the member joins.

A Cent or Two Starts You

This plan relieves many women of the worrisome problem that comes up in their minds each year: How can I Have Money to Buy Christmas Presents This Year?

Courteous attention to all is extended by the bank. We particularly invite ladies to come in and join the club. It is simple, easy, and to join takes but a few moments. Come in today.

THE LILLEY STATE BANK,

USE THE VILLAGE SNOW PLOW

I have noticed with a great deal of pleasure since living in your midst the splendid way in which the majority of people keep their sidewalks clear of snow. Nowhere have I been where people seem to take such pride in keeping them free from snow. Prehaps one reason for it is that the elements blow most of the snow to the west end of town where a few of the more unfortunate people live.

Here, as in most communities there are a few people who neglect to do their duty. Reports come to us that people coming in on the morning trains which stop at the D. T. & I depot have to plow through snow getting up town from the depot. These days we are urging our out-of-town friends to come to Tecumseh. We want them to make Tecumseh their community headquarters and we want their trade If the property owners along this street do not clean their walks our Village council should make it their duty to see that the walks are kept clear of snow early enough so that people arriving on the morning trains will have a clean walk to town A little more effective use of the Village snow plow would correct this trouble.

HOLY NIGHT

Successfully Given Under Auspices of Mrs. R. S Moore

MANY TURNED AWAY

The Baptist church was packed to its capacity Sunday night for the protrayal of the story of the Nativity which was given by about 50 people in appropriate costume. A group of Christmas carols with the singing of "In Bethlehem" by Miss Jones of Ypsilanti to was first upon the program. Dr. Hartzog then read the Scripture Story followed by the Cactique de Noel as beautifully rendered by Miss Edna Taylor.

The opening scene with Mrs. Maynard Mulvaney as "Mary" as the Angel of the Annunciation appears to her telling her that she should be the Mother of Jesus was wonderful and the Annunciation Hymn sung by Mrs. R S Moore was most finely given.

The Subject of the next scene was the Vision of the Shepherds in the fields as the angel appeared and told them of the glad tidings that the Savior was born in Bethlehem of Judea.

The solo, "There were Shepherds abiding in the fields" by Lynn Rogers and solo by Mrs Critchfield "Fear Not" made the whole scene most impressive and then the Manger scenes with Joseph and Mary watching over the young child and Mary singing to the baby Jesus was beautiful in the extreme and as the Magi came singing "We Three Kings of Orient Are" and presented their gifts of Gold Frankinsence and Myrrh, the "Adoration Hymn was sung by the throng that gathered around the place where the young child lay.

Then as a grand finale, all voices joined in singing "Joy to the World the Lord is Come," with a zest that proclaimed that every heart had accepted the glad tidings

AT THE OPERA HOUSE

After a lapse of over two months, with nothing but motion pictures as the attraction, the management of the Bradley Opera House takes great pleasure in announcing the fact that he has secured a number of first class attractions for his patrons. Although the list is not as large as is usually booked, owing to the scarcity of attractions this season, they are all of the best class and should draw some record houses.

Among the first of these bookings comes Rupert Hughes' big Pullman Car comedy "Excuse Me," one of the heaviest scenic productions playing any one night stands. The company booked for Tecumseh is the same one playing in Detroit week of December 27th. "Excuse Me" will be at the Bradley on Friday January 8.

On Monday, January 11, will be shown the first and only authentic pictures of the European war, taken in Belgium by Edwin F. Weigle, staff correspondent for the Chicago Tribune, and lectured by Arthur H. McKechnie war correspondent for the same picture. These pictures were secured by the Tribune through their offer to give 50 per cent. of the earnings of the pictures to the Belgium Red Cross. The pictures are under the management of Chas. L. Hertzman who had "Neptune's Daughter" here in November.

Christmas night the attraction will be a program of feature pictures headed by that screaming comedy "Pigs is Pigs" taken from the famous story by Ellis Parker Butler and produced in the Vitagraph's most pretentious manner Undoubtedly eight people out of every ten have read the story. Every one will want to see this picture.

FIRE

An alarm of fire was sounded Sunday morning during Church time and created some excitement. An oil stove in the bath room at the home of Andrew Taylor became over heated and a slight flame started. Wilson Aldrich was the first to make the discovery and running over gave the alarm Mrs. Taylor at once gave him a sack of flour which smothered the fire. The damage was slight, aside from that done by the smoke which ruined the paper and paint in the bathroom and adjoining room. Mr. Taylor said he thought the soot was half an inch thick on the walls.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B. J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it. It is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

KITCHENER HAS 2,000,000

Plunkett of Ireland Says Quick Organization Marvel of Ages.

New York, Dec. 21.—Sir Horace Plunkett, head of the Irish agricultural board, who was a passenger on the White Star liner Baltic, asserted that Earl Kitchener has now a British army of 2,000,000 men well trained and almost ready to be sent to the front. Sir Horace said that the quick organization of the great British army was one of the surprises of the war, and he stated that Earl Kitchener, by his organization work, had won a place as one of the most wonderful military men of all ages.

SHAVES, THEN ENDS HIS LIFE

Minneapolis Young Man Complained of Inability to Sleep.

Mt. Clemens, Mich., Dec. 21.—Alvois E. Hinz, a florist of Minneapolis, aged twenty-two, arrived at the Medea hotel a few days ago and registered under an assumed name. A few days afterward he went to his room early after telling the clerk to call him at 10 in the morning. Then he shaved, took a bath and cut his throat with the blade of a safety razor.

Hinz had told people about the lobby that a very dear friend of his had died and that he was unable to sleep through worrying over it.

SANTA HAS MILITANT LOVER

If Kris Kringle Don't Come This Fellow Licks His Dad.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Dec. 21.—James Granger of Buchanan, a village near here, has requested the local officers to place his son, William Granger, nineteen years old, under peace bonds until after the holidays.

Last year young Granger hung up his stocking on Christmas eve, and when he discovered the next morning that Santa Claus had failed to call during the night and leave him a present he gave his father a sound thrashing, discoloring his parent's eyes. Willie has threatened to do the same thing this year in case his stockings are not filled. The sympathy of the villagers is with the father. The officers are making an investigation.

ANN ARBOR STUDENTS DRY

Court Puts Ban on Liquor Drinking In University.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 21.—By affirming the conviction of Lawrence Damm, an Ann Arbor saloon keeper found guilty of selling liquor to University of Michigan students, the state supreme court placed the ban on undergraduate liquor drinking in the university town.

"The statute forbids the sale of liquor to any student in attendance at any public or private institution of learning in the state," said Justice Ostrander, who wrote the opinion. The court explained that adult students would be denied drinking privileges the same as citizens living in a local option county may be denied rights enjoyed by their neighbors in an adjoining county.

WOULD CLEAR BOOKS OF ABUSED STATUTE

Act Used In Domestic Trouble to Extort Blackmail.

Owosso, Mich., Dec. 21.—At a meeting the Prosecutors' and Sheriffs' association at Lansing the last of the month, legislation will probably be formulated for the erasure of a statute now on the books which is described by Prosecutor Joseph H. Collins of this county as an invitation to blackmail.

This statute provides that in case of infidelity, only the husband of the woman involved, or the wife of the man may make complaint. At any time during the examination in justice court or even when the case is ready to go to the jury in the circuit court, the complaining witness, without the consent or sanction of either the court or the prosecutor may withdraw the action and free the defendant. Money is used more freely to end such cases than in any others.

BELIEVED LUMPY JAW CASE

Inspector Discovers Disease Much Dreaded by Live Stock Men.

Muskegon, Mich., Dec. 21.—What is believed to be a case of lumpy jaw, a contagious cattle disease feared by cattle men as greatly as the hoof and mouth trouble, was found in Muskegon county by W. J. Mickel, state dairy inspector, in the herd of Harry Spicer, an Egelston township farmer. The cow, whose mouth was swollen and covered with sores, was examined by Mickel, who is practically certain the animal is suffering with "lumpy jaw." The herd was found in a filthy condition.

Inspector Michel has notified the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture of the situation and expects a federal inspection here at once.

VON HINDENBURG IN DANGER FROM REAR

Petrograd Claims German Advance Is Checked.

London, Dec. 21.—It is now apparent that the German armies in Poland have been checked by the Russians in front of Warsaw and that Von Hindenburg's invaders are actually in danger of attack from the rear.

The great victory claimed in Berlin dwindles down to an orderly withdrawal of the Russian troops for about twelve miles to strong defensive positions which they are holding in spite of massed German attacks. Meanwhile the Grand Duke Nicholas is reported to be hurrying reinforcements to his battle line. It is no longer believed here that Warsaw is in grave danger. On the contrary, the opinion of military critics is that Marshal Von Hindenburg must break through the Russian line within a very few days or find his communications cut by the Russian army operating on the left bank of the Vistula northwest of Plock.

In addition to holding firmly in front of Warsaw, the Russians are attacking in East Prussia and along the frontier of West Prussia. This is apparent by the latest statement from the German war office, a communication which makes no assertions of victory, but says merely that the German armies are attacking. A rumor that the Germans have taken Lowicz is not confirmed either in Berlin or Petrograd, but may possibly be true as they have been around Lowicz for several weeks and the city may have been evacuated by the Russians in their withdrawal to a line of defense farther east.

So far as Warsaw is concerned the Russians are in a position similar to that which they occupied two months ago, when the first German invasion reached a point about eight miles from Warsaw.

HOW A DEEP SEATED COUGH

And Sore Lungs Were Overcome by Vinol—Mr. Hillman's Statement of Facts Follows:

Camden, N. J.—"I had a deep seated cough, a run-down system and my lungs were awfully weak and sore. I am an electrician by occupation and my cough kept me awake nights so I thought at times I would have to give up. I tried everything everybody suggested and had taken so much medicine I was disgusted.

"One evening I read about Vinol and decided to give it a trial. Soon I noticed an improvement. I kept on taking it and today I am a well man. The soreness is all gone from my lungs, I do not have any cough and have gained fifteen pounds in weight and I am telling my friends that Vinol did it."—FRANK HILLMAN, Camden, N. J.

It is the curative, tissue-building influence of cods' livers aided by the blood-making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, that made it so successful in Mr. Hillman's case.

We ask every person in this vicinity suffering from weak lungs, chronic coughs, or a run-down condition of the system to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails to help you.

Jack Rose And Violets

A Story of a College Commencement

By EDITH V. ROSS

Fred Caruthers and George Gay, two students, emerged from the laboratory of E. university, where they had been engaged in work pertaining to the course of analytical chemistry. It was 4 o'clock in the afternoon—the time for recreation—and they agreed that they would take a stroll. The spring had opened, the birds were singing in the trees, and the chums trudged along with all the light heartedness of youth.

Some six or seven miles from E. university was a women's college. When the students of E. took walks they naturally bent their steps in the direction of the women's college, and Messrs. Caruthers and Gay did so on this occasion. They were crossing an open field not far from the college grounds when Caruthers, casting his eyes upwards after peering into the sky for awhile, remarked:

"What's that?"

Gay also looked up and said he thought it was a bird. Then Caruthers pronounced it to be a balloon.

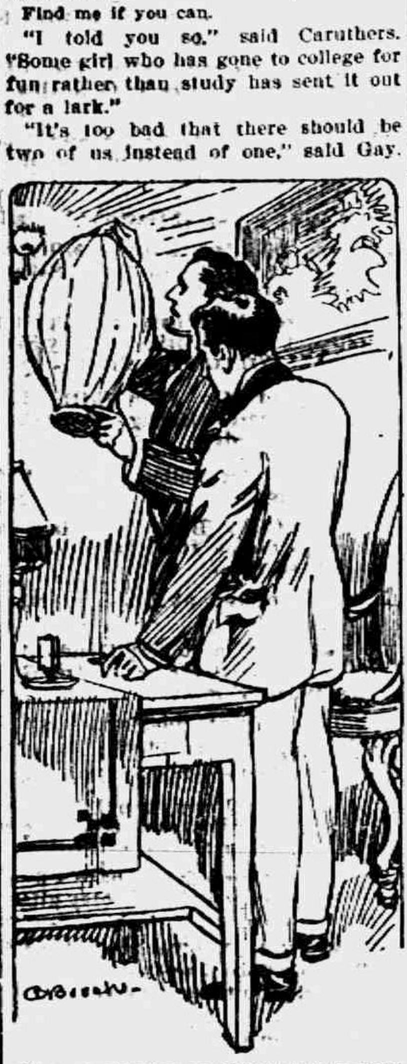
"It will come down pretty soon," said Caruthers. "Let's follow it. Ten to one it has been sent up by some student of the women's college."

They ran for half a mile, at the end of which the balloon got caught in the branch of a tree, and Caruthers went up and brought it down. It was an ordinary tissue paper balloon, with cross wires at the bottom, to which had been affixed a sponge soaked in alcohol. The alcohol had burned out. To one of the cross wires dangled a card, on which was written in a feminine hand:

Find me if you can.

"I told you so," said Caruthers. "Some girl who has gone to college for fun rather than study has sent it out for a lark."

"It's too bad that there should be two of us instead of one," said Gay.



FRED CONTINUED TO WARM THE PAPER.

"If either of us had found it he might have solved the riddle and had an adventure. You suggested what it might be. I'll forego my claim to it."

"Girls up to mischief always move in couples. Very likely there are half a dozen in this scheme."

The young men took the balloon back to college and the same evening met in Caruthers' room to investigate it. They first examined the card carefully. It gave the impression that it had been tampered with in some way, but they could not tell how. Its smoothness had disappeared.

"My opinion is, George," said Caruthers, "that about the only way a message could be concealed is by chemicals. They have a laboratory over there, and I shouldn't be surprised if the girl who wrote this is taking the laboratory course."

"In that case we'll have to wait till tomorrow, when we can get into the laboratory, where we can try various agents."

The next day at 4 o'clock, instead of going out for recreation, they began a series of experiments on the card. They finally found an agent that brought out letters of a dark violet hue:

So far, so good. Try some more.

They spent the time till the laboratory was closed in a vain attempt to get something more out of the card, but failed. The same evening they met again, and Caruthers suggested that the rest of the secret might be in the balloon itself.

"In that event," Gay replied, "we'll have to take it to the laboratory tomorrow and apply tests."

Caruthers took the balloon to a gas jet for examination. In order to get the best light on it he held it very near the jet, turning it so that the light would shine on its different parts. Presently he noticed a brown line on the paper.

"I have it, George," he cried.

"What is it?"

Fred made no reply to this; he was too intent on what he was doing. George joined him and saw that he was holding the brown line up close to the jet. The line developed not only into a letter, but into a word—"rose." Fred continued to warm the paper and finally brought out the following:

Jack Rose and Violets.

"Well, now," he remarked, "perhaps we're going to get at the bottom of this prank. This is only a part."

He turned the paper and soon was rewarded with more of the message—

Class day.

"Any more, do you think?" asked George.

"There isn't any need for more. It's plain enough as it is, and there's enough for us both."

"What do you mean?"

"That two girls will be somewhere about their college, either on the grounds or at some function or exercise indoors, on class day. One will wear a jack rose, the other violets. If we can't find them after all this information we'll never deserve a sheepskin."

"Good for you. But what do you suppose this message was written with?"

"Citric acid. Quite likely lemon juice; that would do it."

"I've a lemon in my closet left over from my last punch. I'll try it."

He dipped a pen in some of the lemon juice, wrote a message with it on a bit of paper, held it to the gas jet and the letters turned brown.

"I have an idea," said George. "What do you say to writing a message on the balloon and sending it back?"

"It wouldn't do any good or any harm provided the message were invisible till brought out. I doubt if these girls have confided to others sending the balloon, and if it were picked up on the college grounds they would not be likely to get it. Besides, to send a return message would be giving away an advantage we possess over them. If we meet them with their decorations on we can do so pretending not to be in the secret. In other words, they will give themselves away to us, but we won't give ourselves away to them."

"Bully boy! You've hit the nail on the head."

When class day at the women's college came on Messrs. Caruthers and Gay, who had learned what functions they would be admitted to, found that they might attend a dance in the large hall used for such purposes. They had not been there long when they saw two girls enter together, the one wearing a jack rose, the other a bunch of violets.

"By Jove," exclaimed Caruthers, "they are a pair of beauties!"

"Which would you choose?" asked Gay.

"The jack rose."

"Very well; if we tackle them I'll freeze to the violets."

It did not require much time for the young men to secure an introduction to the girls, and Fred was soon dancing with Jack Rose, while George was doing the same with Violets. Since the girls were chums the men did not have much difficulty in keeping the four together. They were eating a supper in company when Caruthers remarked:

"You young ladies being chums, I should think you would wear the same floral decorations."

The girls glanced at each other and smiled knowingly.

"Wherefore that smile?" George asked.

"Can't we smile at each other without any especial meaning?" asked Jack Rose.

"You can," said Fred, "but you don't. Come, tell us the secret."

"What secret?" asked Violets.

"Why," replied Caruthers, "when I remarked that I should suppose you young ladies would wear the same kind of flowers you smiled mysteriously. All we ask is an explanation."

"I believe," said George, "that these flowers are a signal."

"What do you mean?" asked Violets.

"You have been flirting with some one by correspondence whom you don't know and who don't know you. You expect them here to night, and they are to know you by the flowers you wear."

This was getting pretty near home. The girls looked at each other, not smiling, but serious.

"What a funny idea!" said Jack Rose.

"Ridiculous!" chimed Violets.

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said Fred. "We'll bet you ten pounds of candy against a kiss from each of you that those flowers mean just what George has said, and we can prove it."

The girls looked very serious, indeed. "Will you permit us to consider your bet?" asked Jack Rose.

"All you like," replied the young men together.

The girls withdrew and after a long consultation returned. The possession of ten pounds of candy was a temptation to take a risk. The possibility that these young men had captured their balloon and deciphered their message did not occur to them. Even if the balloon had been picked up there was little probability of its secret having been interpreted.

"We have decided," said Jack Rose, "to take the bet, you to win in case you prove what you say."

No sooner had she spoken the word than Fred drew forth from his pocket the balloon, unfolded it and held up the message written in brown letters.

There was a commotion on the part of the girls, who blushed and laughed and looked grave all at the same time, while the young men exulted.

When and where the bet was paid does not pertain to this story.

Very Awkward.

Two Frenchmen, one an artist and the other a subeditor, fought a duel. The combatants faced each other with grim determination, both being confident of victory.

After much parleying the subeditor managed to get in an overwhelming cut, which severed the artist's nose. The wounded man dropped his sword with a groan, but in falling had the misfortune to fall across the big toe of his right foot, cutting it clean off. After this interesting state of affairs he was rendered hors du combat.

The doctors rushed up to replace the pieces, but in doing so they made the fatal mistake of putting the toe on the artist's face and his nose where the toe should have been, and ever since the accident when the unfortunate fellow wanted to sneeze he has been obliged to take off his boot.—Strand Magazine.

Scared the Beast.

The extraordinary skill with which Sir Edwin Landseer painted animals was due not merely to his mastery of the brush, but also to his intimate knowledge of the animal world. One of his many talents was the power of imitating to perfection the cry of any creature with which he was familiar. One day when the artist happened to be the guest of Lord Rivers he was requested to go and see a very savage dog that was tied up in the yard. As Landseer approached the growling beast he dropped quietly upon his hands and knees and then, crawling forward, snarled so alarmingly that the dog, overcome with terror, suddenly snapped his chain, jumped over the wall and was never seen afterward.

HER RETURN

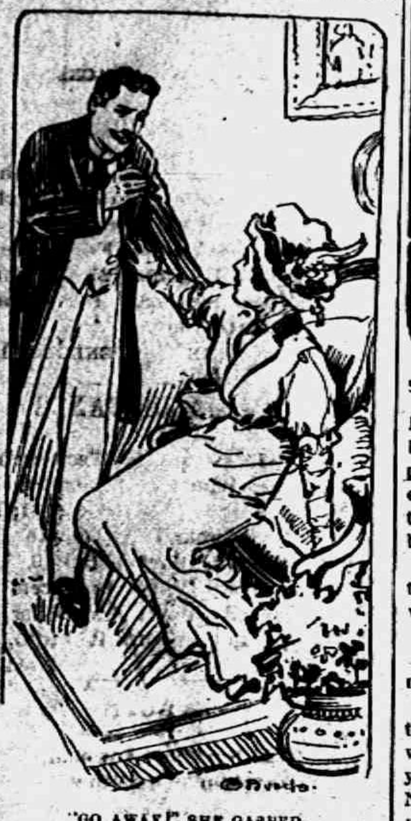
She Found What She Did Not Expect

By WILLARD BLAKEMAN

May Penrose when she was married had been somewhat spoiled by the number of her suitors, each one of whom was ready to promise that he would kotow to her through life if she would be his wife. For that reason none of her intimate friends could understand why she finally married a man twenty years her senior and who, so far as could be learned, promised nothing except what was included in the marriage service.

Some said that her mother made the match between May and Herbert Fenwick, realizing that her daughter was wayward and would need a cool head and a strong will to keep the connubial peace. But there is no doubt that May was perfectly satisfied to marry Mr. Fenwick, and it is quite probable that she had become a trifle tired of having her own way with the other suitors.

May's mother, having a quiet way with her and an abundance of common sense, had always exercised a healthy influence over her daughter. After the marriage this was kept up, not to the disadvantage of the young wife and her husband, but to prevent breaks that would have occurred had it not been for the mother-in-law's persuasive powers with her daughter. But when the couple had been married five years Mrs. Penrose died, and May was deprived of her mother's restraining influence. Then came the crisis of the wife's completing the passage from the partial guidance of a tactful mother to the sole influence of her husband. It proved a crisis indeed.



"GO AWAY!" SHE GASPED.

It would be impossible to state the exact rock on which the couple split, for a number of differences occurred, which culminated in the wife's announcement, with great dignity, that after the treatment she had received she could not maintain her self respect and remain in the same house with her husband. Mrs. Penrose's house had been closed after her death, and her daughter determined to remove there. When her husband went to his office one morning she packed what articles she needed, and when he came home in the evening he found the house deserted.

Mrs. Fenwick did not go away in a huff. She had been thinking the matter over for some time and decided that life was not worth living tied to a man with whom she did not get on. Doubtless there was a way for her to get on with him, but she had not found it.

For a week Mrs. Fenwick occupied herself in putting her abode to rights. After her mother's death she had intended to weed out the accumulation of articles whose value had passed away with those who had treasured them. Old schoolbooks, children's story books, packages of letters, even her own dolls, were got rid of. The work of selecting what should be destroyed brought before her a dead past and a corresponding loneliness. It was a work not calculated to re-enforce her resolution in separating herself from the only being who still belonged to her and whom, in spite of their disagreements, she loved. However, she kept at her work till it was nearly finished, when one day she needed an article that she had left at the residence from which she had departed.

She would have written her husband to send it to her, but could not direct him exactly where to find it. A search would be necessary, and she knew by experience that he was no hand for such a purpose. There seemed to be no way open to her but to go and get what she wanted. At least she convinced herself that there was no other way, but the truth is she desired to visit the home in which she had passed, despite connubial quarrels, many happy hours. Had not her resolution forbidden she would have liked to go when she would have a chance of finding her husband there.

She chose the middle of the afternoon for her visit. She had taken a latchkey with her when she left, though why she desired to let herself into a house she had resolved to leave forever does not appear. But when she put it into the keyhole she found that the door had been locked. She winced at being locked out of her home and unwillingly rang the bell. Expecting to see the maid she had left there, she was disappointed to see a stranger.

"I am Mrs. Fenwick," she said. "I am going upstairs." And she endeavored to brush past the servant, a strong girl, who placed herself in her way.

"Go into the parlor," said the domestic, "and I'll call the mistress."

The mistress! A pang shot through Mrs. Fenwick's heart. She was no longer mistress there, and, still worse, another was. Unwilling to make a scene, she went into the parlor and awaited the coming of the mistress.

WE GIVE AND REDEEM MERCHANTS' DISCOUNT STAMPS

In a few minutes a young woman of between thirty and thirty-five, in appearance remarkably attractive, entered and indicated that she was ready to listen to the visitor's reasons for being there.

"I am Mrs. Fenwick. I have come to get something I left behind when I went away from here."

"Is it anything that I can bring you?"

"You!" with rising choler. "Of course not. I shall get it myself."

"You must consider, madam," said the lady, "that I am responsible for what is in this house, and I have only your word that you are Mrs. Fenwick. Not only that, but, granting you are what you claim, I have no authority to permit you to take anything which has been placed under my care."

All this was said in the most conciliatory manner and with an engaging smile. Mrs. Fenwick did not know whether to be charmed with the speaker or inordinately jealous of her.

"Will you be good enough," she replied, controlling herself with difficulty, "to tell me what position you occupy in this house?"

"I am Mr. Fenwick's housekeeper."

"And you refuse me permission to go about the house which is—or has been—my home and take away any articles that belong to me?"

"It is not necessary for me to do that. If you will wait a moment I will call up Mr. Fenwick and get his instructions."

"I'll call him up myself." But there came an exceeding distaste to ask her husband to direct his housekeeper to permit her to go about in her own house. "No," she added; "I'll go away without what I came for. I have not been accustomed to ask permission of any one to go where I please on these premises, and I'm not going to begin now."

"But surely you don't blame me for doing what it is my duty to do?"

"Oh, no. I don't blame you!"

"Won't you have a cup of tea with me before going?" asked the lady, maintaining the same pleasant manner and tone.

"No, I thank you," replied Mrs. Fenwick disdainfully.

The housekeeper on Mrs. Fenwick's arrival had stood at the landing on the second floor and heard what had passed between the visitor and the maid. She had at once gone to a telephone booth, closed the door and called up Mr. Fenwick at his office, when the following brief dialogue occurred:

"Is that you, Herbert?"

"Yes. What is it, Maud?"

"May is downstairs."

"You don't mean it!"

"Yes. Hadn't you better come? I'll do what I can to keep her till you arrive."

"All right. I'll take an auto and be there in ten minutes."

As Mrs. Fenwick declined the cup of tea offered her she swept out of the room, but stopped on the threshold. There was the sound of a latchkey in the lock, which this time worked, the door opened, and Mr. Fenwick entered. But before he could get a glimpse of his wife she had retreated into the room. What was her horror to hear a smack and "What brings you home so early?"

"Oh, I got through my work ahead of time today."

Mrs. Fenwick collapsed. She sank on a sofa half unconscious, where her husband and his housekeeper found her on entering the room. Fenwick stood looking down at his wife. Her appearance was so pitiable that he approached her and bent over her with an anxious look on his face.

"Go away!" she gasped.

"Sweetheart!"

"Sweetheart! I had hardly got out of the house when my place was supplied by"—

"But, my dear, I must have some one to run the house. I telegraphed Maud to come on."

"Maud!" starting up. "Is that Maud?"

"Yes," said the housekeeper, taking the wife in her arms, "I'm Maud, whom you have doubtless often heard my brother speak of. I came to help him out and as soon as you came called him from his office. I can't stay with him any longer, for my own husband and children need me. So you two must stop this nonsense and be good."

She placed her sister-in-law in the arms of her husband and left the room.

There was a happy dinner in the Fenwick home that evening, which was provided by the housekeeper. She announced her intention of departing the next morning, but Mrs. Fenwick vowed she would lock her in if she attempted it. She had heard Maud's praises sounded so long and so often without seeing her that now she had got her into her possession she would not let her go.

The Fenwick matrimonial crisis passed without any further complication, and the tranquillity of the household was never again disturbed.

PERSIAN GULF PEARLS.

The Divers Are Practically Slaves of the Boat Masters.

Bombay, noted for its pearl markets, is not a pearl producer, though the gems are bought there for shipment to all parts of the world. The pearls sold in Bombay come from the Bahrein islands, a small archipelago on the western side of the Persian gulf, which, although adjacent to territory under the control of Turkey, is governed by an independent sheik under special British protection, the British government maintaining a political agent there.

Of this group of islands only those of Bahrein and Maharak are of any size. Their importance, however, is out of all proportion to their extent, for they are the great center of the Persian gulf pearl fisheries, which are the world's chief source of supply for pearls. The sheik of Bahrein is said to have a customs revenue amounting to about $400,000 per year, which makes him the richest ruler in the Persian gulf. The pearl fisheries under his control may in a good year bring to his islands as much as $2,500,000.

It is difficult for newcomers to obtain the services of good divers owing to the system in vogue, which practically makes this class of men slaves to the masters of the pearling boats. The men's earnings in the majority of cases are insufficient to keep them all the year round, and consequently they take advances from their masters year after year to such an extent that they can never repay their debt. When a diver elects to engage himself to another boat the owner of the latter has to pay up the debt due to the former master should he engage him.—Argonaut.

SCRAPS AND A DINNER.

A French Chef's Feat With Food That Had Been Discarded.

A year or two ago I was chef in a country gentleman's household in England. The morning after my arrival I looked around the kitchen garden, and in the dust bin that stood in the back yard I saw a mixture of food that could have been turned into a first class dinner.

In about four quarts of milk that had turned sour were swimming stale half loaves, drumsticks of fowls, old ham bones, cold boiled potatoes, trimmings of dough made for piecrusts, cracked eggs, some old codfish and some spoiled macaroni.

Next day I found a second consignment, very similar, about to be carried away and thrown out. I stopped this lot, sorted it out and, with the help of a little stock, half a dozen eggs and a hare that had been shot on the estate, served a seven course dinner for a family of ten that night, and the master of the household called me up and complimented me before the whole family on the best dinner they had had for a year.

Afterward his wife sent for me and told me that, though pleased with the dinner, she feared I had been too extravagant and said that her rule was not to allow more than 7 shillings per head in housekeeping. It was a severe shock to her to hear I had fed the family on the sins of the cook that had left the day before, the cost being not over ninepence per head.—From an Interview With a French Chef in National Food Magazine.

Next Thing to It.

"How terribly mangled that poor man was they took to the hospital in the patrol! Was he in a railroad wreck?"

"No. He was one of the judges of a baby show."—Baltimore American.

Shaved Foreheads and Ear Sticks.

The Wakikuyu people of East Africa are known as the Kikuyu and Akikuyu and inhabit the Kikuyu hills, one of the most beautiful, fertile and economically important parts of the British East Africa protectorate, not far from Nairobi. These people have rich farms, a great variety of food to eat and are a very finely built race. The good looks of the women, however, are often spoiled by their curious custom of shaving their foreheads in order to make room for the headstraps to which they attach their loads. These people have many curious customs. They are very frightened of the spirits of the dead, for instance, and when any one of them falls ill and is at all likely to die the poor sufferer is at once put out and left to the mercy of the hyenas, entirely deserted by the rest of the tribe. The unmarried women wear sticks through their ears as a sort of badge, while the married ones sport bunches of bangles.—Wide World Magazine.

Dresden's Model Theater Stage.

Dresden seems to have theatrically solved the problem of long waits, for the Konigliches Schauspielhaus brings the technical side of the theater up to the highest point that has ever been reached. The three principal features are simplicity, rapidity of working and the liberal allowance for space, air and light. Instead of having the conventional stage where one scene must be taken down before the next can be set or of having a revolving stage the Schauspielhaus is provided with a stage which is lowered hydraulically for the purpose of shifting the scenery. While one scene is being used, the second is all set up below on the left hand side. The stage is then lowered, and the first scene is rolled off to the right by electric motors, the new scene at the same time being rolled on. Then the stage is again raised, and the play goes on with an interruption of but thirty seconds.—Exchange.

Height of the Panama Canal.

The middle section of the Panama canal, thirty-four miles long, has a water level of eighty-five feet higher than the two end sections, which are sea levels. Vessels entering the canal from the ocean on either side are lifted to the middle section, a height of eighty-five feet, by three sets of locks, each of which raises the vessel a fraction over twenty-eight feet, making a total of eighty-five feet. These locks are constructed side by side like a double track railway, so that one ship may be going up while the other is going down. Only one ship can be in a lock at the same time, but as the locks are constructed in pairs, side by side, two ships going in opposite directions, one going up the incline and the other going down, may pass each other within hailing distance. Vessels are towed through the locks by electric machinery.—Philadelphia Press

A Domestic Disturbance.

The trouble began with a tea fight. The milk was sour, the cake cut up, and the sugar fell out with the tongs. The spoons clashed, and the table groaned. The fringes on the doilies snarled, and the crackers snapped. The easy chairs were soon up in arms, and even the clocks did not agree. Things were no better in the kitchen. The pitchers were all set by the ears and stuck out their lips, while the teapot and kettle poked their noses into everything. The range was redhot, which made the saucepan look black and finally boil over. The bells started jangling, all the pickles and preserves in the cupboard were jarred, and there were any number of scraps in the refrigerator and meat safe. Naturally when the mistress of the house reached the scene of disorder the cook was put out.—Judge.

A Facial Contortionist.

Mrs. Wunder—Washington was a versatile man. Mr. Wunder—He had to be to look like all his pictures.—Baltimore American.

Just the Trouble.

Knicker—All men are equal before the law. Bocker—That's just the trouble; they should be equal after the law.—Judge.

To know the future is no virtue, but it is the greatest of virtue to prepare for it.—Samuel Smiles.

UNCLE SAM'S MACARONI CO LANDS ANOTHER BIG ORDER

Although Italy has managed to maintain a neutral position with the various powers now involved, she has never-the-less made extensive preparations for any emergency. One of these has been to place a street embargo upon the exportation of macaroni products. This has caused a very unusual condition among the Italian importers who are obliged to turn to the American macaroni manufactors. The idea has prevailed among the Italians and other people of foreign birth that macaroni made in America could not compare with that made "at home."

One of these is one of the largest importers west of New York who is located in Chicago and who spent Sunday in Tecumseh at the Uncle Sam's Macaroni Plant. His visit to this modern factory was a complete revelation to him. After partaking of Uncle Sam's macaroni and spaghetti prepared in the Italian style, he pronounced them very much superior to anything he had formerly eaten and immediately arranged for the Uncle Sam's Macaroni Co. to supply him exclusively with domestic products. The business of this importer is very large as his purchases of macaroni products alone amount to more than 75,000 boxes annually.

While slicing some meat at the grocery of F. D. Avery Tuesday afternoon L. D. Kenyon had the misfortune to have the thumb and first finger of his left hand quite badly cut. The nail on his thumb was entirely taken off. In pushing the meat up to the knife his hand slipped with the above result.

MRS J. A. FISK

Julia A. Fisk died at the home of her niece, Mrs. J. G. Hanford at 5 o'clock Wednesday Dec. 23, 1914 at the age of 78 years. The funeral will be held at the home at 8 o'clock Saturday morning. Rev. G. W. Jennings officiating. The burial will be at Tompkins Center.

For the past 16 years, Mrs. Fisk has spent the winter months in Tecumseh and has made many friends who will miss her from her place in the home.

PUNCH BOARDS PROHIBITED

Notices signed by the prosecuting attorney are being circulated about town warning our merchants that after Saturday, December 26, 1914, all persons, firms and corporations operating or permitting to be operated in their place of business, so-called "punch boards," "candy boards" and devices of kindred nature, whereby sums of money are paid to draw numbers or punch out numbers, where a chance is given to win or lose something of value, will be prosecuted under the statute made and provided in such cases.

For the reason that there are so many of these boards in the county, and that they are so widely distributed, and so many are being operated in good faith, it would be impossible to enforce this order fairly without giving proper notice, and therefore, as above stated, all such prosecutions will be made after the 26th day of this month. This action is not taken without due consideration as he has considered the matter for some time past and believes this action meets with the hearty approbation of the officers of the county and will be fairly and rigidly enforced.

RAILROAD CHANGE

Consolidation of the Lake Shore Railroad Co., with the New York Central Railroad Co., was effected at Cleveland, Ohio on December 22, at a meeting of the Lake Shore stockholders when they ratified the action taken by the New York Central stockholders of July 20 last. On Tuesday evening last the Library Association of Ridgeway held a very enjoyable meeting at the Library with a banquet at the M. E. church with 250 in attendance.

F. J. Temple, wife and daughter Vie and Frank Davidson represented Tecumseh. Messrs. Temple and Davidson were former residents of Ridgeway and were among those who helped form this association.

An interesting feature of the program was the reading of poems written and delivered by Mr. Temple in 1885—1893. Mr. Davidson had with him a gold headed cane presented to him by the Association in 1893 as an appreciation of past services, Mr. Temple making the presentation speech at time. Mr. Temple was the first librarian and catalogued the books.

A most delightful evening was the report of all present.

A Speedy Turtle.

"Look here, waiter!" shouted the angry, hungry guest at the restaurant.

"Yessuh, yessuh!" answered the waiter, who appeared to be all out of breath, as from some sort of violent exertion.

"I ordered that turtle soup an hour ago, and you haven't brought it yet!"

"Yessuh, nosuh! Ah'm plum sorry, suh, but it jest couldn't be helped. When Ah done cotched dat turtle an' was a-takin' him to de cook he done slipped outah mah hands an' ran out do back doah an' up de alley. Yessuh, Ah had to chase him foah blocks befo' Ah could catch him. Yessuh, he'll be ready in er minute."—Kansas City Star.

Merry Christmas

We give you hearty greeting,
This Merry Christmas Day.
May every one be happy,
May every one be gay;
And as you meet together
To partake of Christmas cheer,
May this day be the gladdest
Of all the passing year,
And may the New Year greet you
With a happy smiling face,
And all the world be bright and fair
In every clime and place.
We give you greeting near and far,
Yours most sincere,
THE EDITOR.

CHRISTMAS AT THE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Wednesday evening the members of the Sunday School met for their Christmas exercises. Five trees were beautifully decorated and laden with gifts for all. The exercises were given by the primary and junior departments and were very interesting. At the close of the exercises Mrs. Sam Boyce' class presented the church with a fine reading lamp and Mr and Mrs. H. W. Stevens presented a Bible.

The church was a bower of beauty and the Christmas Spirit was everywhere.

All the music both for the drills and song, given by the Juniors, was composed by Mrs. Albert Deming. To each little Junior and their teachers, the Misses Rector and Gillespie, Mrs. Deming gave a gingerbread man.

ROUND ABOUT US

Clinton is nothing if not up to date on Christmas eve they plan to have a municipal Christmas tree on the four corners near the band stand. Everybody expects to be remembered by Santa Claus on this occasion. A fine program is also to be given.

SALINE—How would you like to live in a town without a single store? How long would you live in such a town? And yet if every one sent their money away for goods, as some do, there would not be a store left in this town in sixty days. Loyalty is a God-given trait, and should be freely given to the commuity that gives you shelter and sustenance.—Observer.

Monroe is gradually coming to the front. The latest evidence of its importance is the appearance of a daily newspaper which made its bow there the first of last week.

AS IT SHOULD BE—In the school house in Belleville, Wis., a few evenings ago, upon motion of the Catholic priest, the Methodist minister was elected president of the community's social center for the coming winter.

PINCKNEY—The patrons of the Pinckney post office will be pleased to learn that commencing with January 1st, 1915, rents on all post office boxes will be advanced? As the office was recently changed from a fourth class to a third class office, the post master has been authorized to advance the price to that of third class offices.—Dispatch.

Adrian was the Mecca of all school trustees in the county last week. The court room was well filled for the purpose of getting posted on the school laws of the state. Deputy Superintendent of Public Instruction Orcott was present and most of the morning session was devoted to answering the questions asked by the trustees. He gave an instructive and interesting talk in the afternoon. The meeting was very profitable, for many points not previously clearly understood were successfully explained.

THIRTY-FIVE YEARS AGO DEC. 25, 1879

What did Santa Claus bring you?

We wish you all a Merry Christmas.

Have you received an invitation to the Leap Year Party?

The merchants of Tecumseh have never had a better trade than during the last few days.

Wesley Keyser distributed his Christmas around the Herald office yesterday. Thanks!

Thomas Miller of Washington is at his father's in Raisin, making his old friends a visit.

The Tecumseh boys who are attending school at Ann Arbor are home to spend the holidays.

George Train and wife left town last Monday on a holiday visit among their old friends in Central New York. They will be gone two or three weeks.

The M. E. church which has been closed for repairs for the last few weeks will be open Sunday morning for divine service. Sermon by Rev. R. J. Pardington of Detroit. All cordially invited.

If the farmers persist in coming to town as numerously as they have for the past few days, we shall need a lot of more hitching posts. It was almost impossible to find a place to hitch a team last Saturday. Farmers had to take their turn like customers in a barber shop.

Our people have improved the opportunity offered of getting around with sleighs lately.

Christmas trees—and railroad talk—is all the go lately.

A. O. Miller will soon complete his northwestern tour and at an early day he will present his new drama, entitled "Over the Hills to the Poor House," to a Tecumseh audience.

A large and fine assortment of New Years calling cards are now in stock at the Herald job rooms.

Adrian Times: A young lady sends to the Clinton News a communication on some presumably interesting topic, with the request "Please print if not too fall." The News says it wont publish the communication. The audience can draw their own conclusion.

NEW YEAR'S CALLS.

We understand that several of the young ladies of Tecumseh will make calls New Year's Day, provided the young men give them an opportunity. Those persons intending to receive calls are requested to leave their names at the Herald Counting Room as early as possible and a list will be kept for the inspection of interested parties. Since the above was in type we learn that several clubs are organizing to receive calls.

Worry.

Worry is itself a species of monomania. No mental attitude is more disastrous to personal progress and achievement, personal happiness and personal usefulness in the world than worry and its twin brother, despondency.

TO THE PUBLIC

The Committee for the Relief of Belgium Fund wishes to thank all who have so generously responded to their appeal for help. We thank the ministers who gave the use of their churches; the mills for grinding the wheat and for transporation of same, the merchants of Tecumseh, and the farmers for contributions of money, clothes and food; the ladies for their gifts of wearing apparel, and their work in making garments; the boys and girls for the self sacrifice involved in raising $37.50; the Superintendent of Schools, and the teachers for their help, the press for their publicity; and all others who helped to raise the 98 barrels of flour, and the three cases of groceries and clothes, for the relief of the sufferers in Belgium from this the most dreadful of all wars. The Committee has suspended work until after the New Year.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B. J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it, it is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

PE-RU-NA

Peruna is not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used it.

Fifty years ago it was on sale, nearly every drug store in the country can supply it. It is recognized as a household remedy in thousands of homes for coughs, colds, grip, catarrh and those troubles arising from such disturbances.

TODAY IT IS JUST AS EFFECTIVE, JUST AS RELIABLE AS EVER AND NOTHING BETTER HAS BEEN DEVISED AS A READY-MADE MEDICINE.

Those who object to Liquid Medicine will find Peruna Tablets a desirable remedy for CATARRHAL CONDITIONS.

No Elopements in Germany.

One seldom hears of elopements in Germany, because it is impossible for young people to marry in that country without the consent of their parents or legal guardians. Certain prescribed forms must be gone through or the marriage is null and void. When a girl has arrived at what is considered a marriageable age her parents make a point of inviting young men to the house, and usually two or three are invited at the same time, so that the attention may not seem too pointed. No young man, however, is invited to the house until after he has called at least once and thus signified his wish to have social intercourse with the family. In Germany a man must be at least eighteen years old before he can make a proposal. But when it is made and accepted the proposal is speedily followed by the betrothal. This generally takes place privately, shortly after which the father of the bride—as she is then called—gives a dinner or supper to the most intimate friends of both families, when the fact is formally announced, and shortly after it becomes a matter of public knowledge.

Two Famous English Orders.

On Oct. 13, 1399, was founded by Henry IV. "the Most Noble Order of the Bath." During the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries "The Bath" fell into disrepute, and its restoration to favor we owe to the German George I., who reconstituted the order in 1725. The reason for its loss of reputation is possibly to be found in one of the ceremonies which preceded the investiture. The candidate for knighthood was ceremoniously disrobed, conducted to a bath and while there was duly instructed and counseled by two grave and ancient knights concerning the order and feats of chivalry. The English are a prudish nation and preferred to be clothed and in their right mind if they are to be preached at. The Order of the Garter rather tried their reserve concerning the intimacies of apparel; the bath overstepped every limit.—London Chronicle.

No Soft Bed For Him.

There is an immensely rich man in New York who never slept on a bed of eiderdown, goose feathers, felt, hair or excelsior. When a boy he slept on a pallet of straw. When a young man his bed was an old fashioned shuck mattress, in the making of which he assisted to the extent of sorting the shucks. In the army (1861-5) he was glad to sleep on the ground. Later, as a civil engineer, he reposed on a puncheon, and now, rolling in wealth goes to bed every night on a trundle bed which he bought from his aged "nigger mammy." This affair is not over fourteen inches high and is corded up with half inch hemp. There is no mattress, and of course there are no springs. A rag quilt covers the ropes, another covers his body as he sleeps. His health is superb.—New York Press.

Peerless Geneva.

The most glowing tribute to Geneva is Frederic Harrison's. "I hold Zurich, Basel and Geneva to be the model cities of our age—the fine type of what cities will one day be in a regenerated age—the true type of civic organization, having site of rare beauty and convenience, spacious streets and avenues, noble public walks and gardens, perhaps everything short of grand antique buildings." Geneva in particular is "the finest type of a rational city that Europe possesses * * * a true city where, as in Athens, Florence, Venice, Antwerp or Ghent of old, men can live a wholesome civic life, not in huge, amorphous caravanseries, such as London, Paris or Berlin—not in suffumigated barracks, such as Manchester or Lyons or Glasgow—but in a beautiful, well ordered, free, organic city."

His Sermon on Women.

An English preacher in the seventeenth century, speaking to the text "To be or not to be," said that woman should be like and unlike three things. She should be like a snail, always keep within her own house, but not like a snail, to carry all she had on her back. She should be like an echo, to speak when she was spoken to, but not like an echo, always to have the last word. She should be like a town clock, always keep time and regularity, but not like a town clock, to speak so loud that all the town might hear her.—Minneapolis Journal.

Comets' Tails and the Sun.

A theory to explain the tails of comets is advanced by the French physicist, M. Houllevigue in the Revue Scientifique. It is natural to suppose, he says, that the incandescent nucleus of a comet is throwing out electrons into the extremely rarefied atmosphere that surrounds it. The observations of George Ellery Hale, the American astronomer, prove that the sun behaves like a negatively electrified body. Therefore he repels electrons, which are negatively electrified bodies. These particles so repelled would be driven to that side of the comet which is farthest from the sun, and by contact with the molecules of the gaseous and rarefied atmosphere would produce just the luminous appearance that we call a comet's tail.

Every comet's tail always extends away from the sun. Arrhenius, the Swedish astronomer, believed that the particles of the tail were repelled by the light of the sun.

Actors and Their Teeth.

"There is only one feature of an actor which will 'give him away' when disguised in a perfect makeup," remarks a young actor, "and that feature is the teeth. Let a man do what he will to his face, let him cover it with all kinds of paint, beard, whiskers and what not, but the teeth will disclose his indubitable identity directly he opens his mouth to speak a line or to raise a laugh.

"I myself, when sitting in the front of a house watching other people's performances, have frequently been puzzling myself as to the identity of a cleverly made up player, but no sooner has the said player disclosed his 'ivories' than I have at once recognized him, provided, of course, he has chanced to be a man whose face I know moderately well. Strangely enough, hardly any one is aware of this curious truth, but it remains an undeniable fact all the same."—Pearson's Weekly.

Curious People of New Guinea.

New Guinea contains some of the most remarkable people in the world the Papuans. One curious fact about one of the tribes of New Guinea is that they wear what are probably the largest hats in existence. These hats are from six to eight feet high and gorgeously colored. They are adorned with feathers, colored fibers and shells, beaks of hornbills and plumes of the birds of paradise. They are handed down from father to son as heirlooms, and a native will not be tempted to part with his headdress for any price. New Guinea, too, contains some of the smallest people in the world, pygmies that were only discovered a few years ago, for the great island has still thousands of square miles that have not been explored. These pygmies are only just over four feet in height, but what they lack in inches they make up in ugliness.

His "Name."

A young chap notorious for his conceit was boasting in the presence of several elderly gentlemen about the conquests which he had gained over the female heart.

"Look," said he, "here's a handsome present I had from my last inamorata at the same time handing round a beautiful cigar case."

All admired the article, which had an indorsement of its quality stamped upon it.

"Very nice gift," remarked one of the company. "I perceive your lady love even had your name put on the case."

"Well, that's queer," answered the boaster. "I never noticed it."

"Look again," rejoined the candid one. "The case is distinctly marked 'Real calf.'"—Philadelphia Record.

Climate and Consumption.

In a treatise on the relationship of air to tuberculosis, issued by the Smithsonian institution, Dr. Guy Hinsdale says there is no specific climate for tuberculosis. The important things are pure air and sunshine. A climate in which the humidity varies greatly is to be avoided. The best combination is one of low humidity and moderately cool temperature.

BUILDING OF PETROGRAD.

Peter the Great's Ruthless Methods In Erecting the Capital.

Most disadvantageously situated of all the capitals of Europe—indeed, of the world—Petrograd is a monument of the pride and energy of Peter the Great. He wanted a European capital in order to signalize and immortalize his conquests. In 1703, when the first foundations of the city were laid on the marshy island on the delta of the Neva, at the eastern end of the gulf of Finland, the surrounding territory had even then not been entirely conquered.

Peter went to work with his usual energy and with his usual ruthlessness to create a capital in what was worse than a desert. He himself superintended the building of the city and gave the directions of the details to half a dozen lieutenants. The work was pushed with almost incredible rapidity, so that by 1712 sufficient advance had been made to permit the transfer of the imperial family from Moscow.

One measure ordered by Peter was that thousands of peasants must settle in or near the new capital. A special tax was put on his empire to meet the expenses of building the city. Such a small difficulty as the scarcity of masons was nothing to a man like Peter the Great. He simply forbade the erection of stone buildings anywhere else in the empire until Petrograd was finished.—New York Times.

MILITARY COWARDICE.

A Sample of Its Punishment During the Thirty Years' War.

Punishment for cowardice in the German army at the time of the Thirty Years' war was so severe as to be ferocious. In the year 1642 the Swedish General Torstensson stormed Leipzig. A force under the command of the Grand Duke Leopold gave him battle before the gates of the city, but during the engagement the Madlonische regiment became suddenly panic stricken and fled.

Punishment immediately followed. When the regiment had again assembled six other regiments surrounded it and tried it by court martial in the open field. The verdict was that the colonel and the captains should die by the sword and that every tenth man among the noncommissioned officers and men should be hanged.

The stern verdict was carried out to the letter, except that at the request of Leopold the men were shot instead of hanged. Colonel George Madlonische was beheaded after he had sought in vain for a pardon. The survivors were consigned to quarters with other commands, and the regiment never regained its name or former prestige. In those days there was no alternative but to be brave. Cowardice meant either death or everlasting disgrace.—Youth's Companion.

Poetic Justice.

A couple in a certain village, each the parent of six children, had meted out to them a kind of poetic justice in which they failed to see the poetry.

The woman, a widow, pleading that she had no home and was therefore unable to care for her children, induced the local authorities to admit them to an orphan asylum. The man, a widower, pleading he had no housekeeper and therefore no one to care for his children, induced the authorities to admit his six also. Thereupon, being freed from all incumbrances, these two married.

All went well for a few months, when the authorities, learning of the situation, promptly dispatched the twelve children back to their parents, and, the woman no longer able to represent herself as homeless or the man as without a housekeeper, they were forced to receive them.

HOW A DEEP SEATED COUGH

And Sore Lungs Were Overcome by Vinol—Mr. Hillman's Statement of Facts Follows:

Camden, N. J.—"I had a deep seated cough, a run-down system and my lungs were awfully weak and sore. I am an electrician by occupation and my cough kept me awake nights so I thought at times I would have to give up. I tried everything everybody suggested and had taken so much medicine I was disgusted.

"One evening I read about Vinol and decided to give it a trial. Soon I noticed an improvement. I kept on taking it and today I am a well man. The soreness is all gone from my lungs, I do not have any cough and have gained fifteen pounds in weight and I am telling my friends that Vinol did it."—FRANK HILLMAN, Camden, N. J.

It is the curative, tissue-building influence of cods' livers aided by the blood-making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, that made it so successful in Mr. Hillman's case.

We ask every person in this vicinity suffering from weak lungs, chronic coughs, or a run-down condition of the system to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails to help you.

The Lilibridge Scandal

A Mistake In the Name

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Miss Tabitha Way scuttled across the street and entered the gate of her nearest neighbor, Fenella Mason.

"Fenny, what do you think?" she gasped as she sank into a chair.

Fenny Mason lifted her little brown eyes from the molasses cookies she was rolling out and spoke calmly:

"My, Tab, but you're all het up!" she said.

"What if I be?" snapped Tabitha, mopping her face with a corner of her white apron in lieu of a pocket handkerchief.

"Makes you look so uncomfortable," remarked Fenny casually as she knelt before the stove to put a pan of cookies in the oven.

For a moment Tabitha glared at her friend, and then her eagerness to impart her news to Fenny Mason overcame her indignation, and she said:

"I asked you if you'd heard the news?"

"You never asked me any such thing," retorted Fenny over her thin shoulder. "You asked me what I thought, and I told you I thought you looked all het up, so there!"

"I declare, Fenny Mason, you air the greatest critter," Tabitha said. "You won't listen till you get good and ready, so I'm jest going to set right here until you say you're ready to hear about the scandal."

"Scandal?" shrieked Fenny, sitting up straight in her chair, with open mouth. "Why didn't you say so before? I thought you'd come to tell me about the new twins down at Black Hannah's, and I heard all about that from the milkman."

"Well, I never!" gasped Tabby, for this was news to her. "Boys or girls?"

"Girls."

"I wonder what Hannah's going to name 'em?"

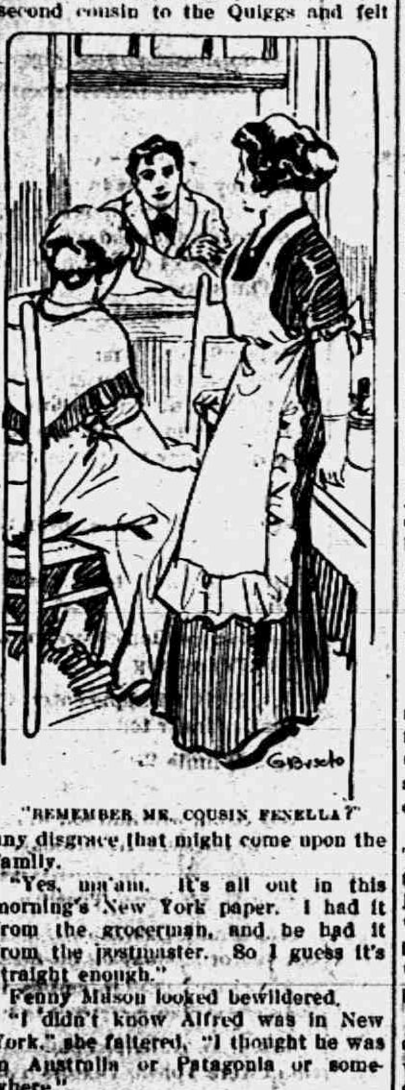
"They're all named—Magnolia and Pergolia."

"The idea! Now, for the news. I'll bet you haven't heard about Deacon Quigg's son."

"Not Alfred?"

"Yes, ma'am! He's robbed a bank!"

"No!" shrieked Fenny, for she was second cousin to the Quiggs and felt any disgrace that might come upon the family.



"REMEMBER ME, COUSIN FENELLA?"

"Yes, ma'am. It's all out in this morning's New York paper. I had it from the groceryman, and he had it from the postmaster. So I guess it's straight enough."

Fenny Mason looked bewildered.

"I didn't know Alfred was in New York," she faltered. "I thought he was in Australia or Patagonia or somewhere."

"The newspaper said that Alfred Quigg, a clerk in the Kinticum National bank of New York city, had absconded with $10,000 of the bank's funds. It said that detectives were close on his trail and that they expected to apprehend him within a day or so. It said that he was the scapegrace son of Deacon Quigg of Lilibridge. There!" said Tabitha Way.

"Well, I don't believe it. There's some mistake," protested Fenella obstinately.

"Anything's possible nowadays, with folks running around in automobiles and airyplanes as cool as you please," remarked Tabby, nibbling pensively at a ginger cooky.

Fenella turned and faced her friend. There was a look of obstinacy in her brown eyes.

"No matter what was told me about Alfred Quigg, I wouldn't believe it—not if it was real bad!" she declared loyally.

"Hurrah for you, Cousin Fenella!" cried a merry voice from the open window.

The women turned with one accord and stared at the sunbrowned, curly haired young man who leaned his arms on the window sill and grinned at them, showing perfect rows of white teeth.

"Remember me, Cousin Fenella?" he asked with easy nonchalance.

"Alfred Quigg!" gasped Fenella, sinking into a chair and quite pale with alarm.

"And I guess Miss Tabby remembers me by this time," smiled Alfred, agreeably nodding at Miss Way. "Last recollection I have of Miss Tabby is that she chased me around the mill pond and told me I'd end on the gallows, all because I teased her old turkey gobbler!"

Fenella Mason looked at Tabitha Way, and Tabitha stared back at her with questioning eyes.

"Come inside, Alfred," whispered Fenella. "I've got something important to tell you."

"Thanks," said Alfred, going round to the screen door and letting himself inside.

As he stood there hat in hand, smiling good naturedly around at the familiar old fashioned room, he was startled at the actions of the two good spinsters whose earnest gossip he had interrupted.

Fenella flew to the door through which he had just entered and slammed it tight shut and locked it. Tabby pulled down the window sash, locked it and pulled the shade to the sill. Then from window to window of the little house flew the two women, pulling down shades and drawing curtains until from without the place looked deserted.

"What's up?" demanded Alfred Quigg when they rushed breathlessly back to the kitchen and caught him by either arm.

"They're coming, Alfred, and you must hide," warned Fenella. "Remember, Tabby and I don't believe a word of it, but you don't want to be caught. Remember your poor parents. You just hide until the worst blows over, and then we'll know what to do. I'm so thankful you came to my house first. You will be safe here. No one would dream of looking for you in Fenella Mason's house. Come!"

So, half explaining, they dragged the bewildered young man up the narrow back stairway to the little closet in the loft room over the kitchen. Here they locked him in, confident that he could not suffocate, for the tiny diamond shaped ventilator would let in sufficient air.

"They're a pair of crazy loons, and I may as well let them have their own way until dark," decided Alfred when his indignation had cooled. "Then I can push out of this place and go home."

. . . .

It was drawing toward sunset, and Fenella Mason and Tabby Way still sat in Fenella's kitchen discussing the fugitive concealed in the loft room closet.

They had been up there once and handed Alfred a well laden tray of food, for which he had given them scanty thanks.

"I'm glad he came here first," Fenella was saying for the hundredth time that afternoon when there came a thundering knock at the kitchen door.

"It's them!" hissed Tabby.

Fenella went to the door and peeped through an opening in the shade.

"'Tain't no one but Alfred's pa, the deacon," she whispered. "Guess I better let him in."

She cautiously opened the door and permitted the amazed old man to enter the darkened room.

"What in taruation pumpkins is the matter with you, Fenny?" he asked testily. "Locked up here tight as a drum! You old maids air the confoundedest critters! You act as if a bull regiment of marriageable men was lurking around the yard waiting to break into the house and elope with you! Have you seen Alfred?"

"Alfred?" gasped Fenella.

"Alfred?" echoed Tabitha.

"Yes, Alfred!" barked the deacon, flinging his cap down on the table. "We had a telegram from him saying he'd just got back from Patagonia. You know he went as first mate on a freight steamer. Station master has just told me Alfred arrived on the 11 o'clock train this morning and somebody said they saw him coming into your gate. Ma and I are worn out waiting for him. Where is Alfred?"

"Up in the loft room closet," said Fenella faintly.

"Why?" thundered the deacon.

It was Tabitha who told him the news of the bank robbery and how Alfred Quigg, scapegrace son of Deacon Quigg of Lilibridge, had become an absconder and that the detectives were close on his trail.

"Bosh!" snorted the deacon when Tabby had concluded her tale. "I read that rubbish in the paper myself. Name was Twigg, not Quigg, and 'twasn't this Lilibridge he was from; it was Lilibridge in Connecticut. Where's my Alfred—the best sailor boy in the whole world?"

He stamped upstairs, and the two chagrined women heard him arguing with Alfred. They talked for a long time, and at last they heard the sound of muffled laughter.

When father and son came downstairs their eyes were twinkling. "Come over to the house tonight, girls," said the deacon pleasantly. "We're going to have a little housewarming for Alfred, and he's got some little presents from furrin' parts for each of you. I declare, from what Alfred tells me, he ain't forgot one of his old friends."

Fenella Mason looked Tabitha Way straight in the eye.

"I told you it couldn't have been our Alfred," she said proudly.

"You was in a mighty hurry to hide him just the same," retorted Tabitha. "Still," she added hopefully, "if there hadn't been a mistake in the name it might have been him after all!"

Honesty In War.

The French marshal Turenne was not only a great general, but a man of singular honesty of character as well. Many incidents which are related of him show his modesty, generosity and honesty, as well as his courage and military ability. A little story of one of his German campaigns illustrates his rare scrupulousness, even in time of war. The authorities of Frankfort believed, from the movements of his army, that he intended passing through their territory. They sent a deputation to him which offered him a large sum of money if he would alter the direction of his march and leave Frankfort unmolested. They were surprised in more way than one by his answer. "Gentlemen," said he, "my conscience will not permit me to accept your money, for I have never intended to lead my army through your town."

Rank In the Cabinet.

"Do some members of the cabinet occupy a higher position or receive a higher salary than others? If not why do the secretary of state and secretary of the treasury always head the list?" asks a reader of the Indianapolis News, which replies: "They all receive the same salary, but they are usually named in the order that the positions were created—the secretary of state, 1789; war, 1789; treasury 1789; postoffice, 1794; navy, 1798; interior, 1849; justice, 1870; agriculture 1889; commerce and labor, 1903; department of labor separated in 1913. Latterly they are sometimes named in the order of their succession to the presidency as fixed by what is called the succession law, which differs somewhat from the foregoing."

BALLOT CROOKS AID "UNCLE JOE"

Startling Tale Is Told Federal Grand Jury at Indianapolis.

SOLD VOTES IN TWO STATES

U. S. District Attorney Throws Scare Into Republicans By Saying They Had Conspiracy of Their Own—Mayor Roberts and Over Hundred Terre Haute Men Indicted.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 28.—The Republican election workers, who have embarassed the citizens' movement for a "cleaning up" of political conditions, resulting in the wholesale indictment of the Democratic leaders and their red light district henchmen in whose three precincts practically all the corrupt work has been done for a quarter of a century, electing Mayors, judges, and sheriffs almost alternately of the two political parties and who were gloating over the downfall of the Democratic organization, headed by Mayor Donn Roberts and brought about by these indictments, were dumbfounded by this statement from Frank C. Dailey, United States district attorney:

"The Republicans conducted a separate conspiracy of their own. The grand jury will reconvene on January 4, at which time further opportunity to tell what they know will be offered witnesses acquainted with the facts concerning the last mentioned conspiracy."

Republicans Also In Bad.

Those who are intimately acquainted with the confessions made by thirty or forty of the men who have done the repeating believe that two or three Republican candidates on last month's ticket will be indicted and perhaps some higher ups who handled the money in the campaign. Some of the Republicans who have been pushing to the front in the contests in the local courts for judge and sheriff now held by Eli Redman and Denny Shea, respectively, who have been indicted, are likely to be indicted. It is said that at least four progressives who served on election boards will be indicted. It is not known how far back the investigation will go, but if it goes back to 1912, it is said there will be pay dirt in the congressional investigation. The purchase of delegates was so commonly reported at that time that men said money was paid for delegate's votes to a red light boss on the stage of a convention hall. The grand jury's finding in the case on which indictments have been returned said that there had been an attempt corruptly to procure the return of the election of a candidate for congress who was not elected. Congressman Ralph Moss was returned as elected. The mere reference has led to many surmises.

Forty-six confessing crooks were released on their own recognizance, though each signed a $2,500 bond as a matter of form. Twenty-two including the mayor, were taken to Indianapolis.

Repeaters Helped "Uncle Joe."

It is learned that the grand jury investigation is to cause a like one by the grand jury of the federal court which will meet at Danville, Ill. Thirty-one floaters of Paris, Ill., who came over the state line to vote in Terre Haute at $5 a man were before the federal grand jury at Indianapolis and not only told of doing this, but of corruption at Paris. It is now known that the federal authorities have reason to believe that 700 voters were bought by some one representing the stand-pat Republicans who were working for the election of "Uncle oJe" Cannon who was returned as elected in his old district in which for many years Paris was his standby for a good vote.

It is said at Paris, Ill., that thirty-one floaters went from that place to testify before the federal grand jury at Indianapolis about coming over the state line to Terre Haute to vote and that they also told a story about the purchase of votes in Paris to the number of 700. This latter information, it is said, has caused an investigation which will result in submitting testimony to the federal grand jury soon to meet at Danville.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 28.—Ninety-three persons, including practically every member of the city administration of Terre Haute, are in the hands of United States authorities as a result of the wholesale arrests made there on indictments charging a conspiracy to corrupt the election of Nov. 3 last.

Marshal Mark Storen is in Terre Haute and other arrests are being made. It is said more than 125 persons were named in the indictments.

Among the men taken were Mayor Donn M. Roberts, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor in 1916; Dennis Shea, sheriff of Vigo county; Circuit Judge Eli H. Redman, City Judge Thomas Smith, and other leading Terre Haute politicians.

Refusing offers of bond for $10,000 demanded by Marshal Storen, Mayor Roberts was included in a party of twenty-two of the prisoners, who had failed to provide bond, being brought to this city to be placed in jail.

The others had been released on bonds ranging from $2,500 to $10,000 each. Sheriff Shea and Judge Redman were given their freedom on bonds of $10,000 each late in the day. Mayor Roberts is regarded as the ring leader in the conspiracy.

RANK OWNER IS DEAD HUGE FAILURE HINTED

Private Du Quoin, Ill., Institution Keeps Doors Closed.

Duquoin, Ill., Dec. 28.—The Duquoin bank, a private bank with deposits estimated at between $350,000 and $400,000, is closed. The best line that alarmed creditors can get on the inner affairs of the institution is that it will pay about 33 1-3 cents on the dollar and not to exceed 50 cents.

One of the biggest court fights ever started in southern Illinois will begin on Tuesday at Belleville, when a large block of the depositors will go before Circuit Judge George A. Crowe in an effort to have a receiver appointed who can get a look at the books and records of the closed institution.

Henry Horn, known generally over the state south of Springfield as one of the "big" men of the banking business, the coal mining industry, and the milling trade, was the president of the Duquoin bank until the day of his death, Dec. 10. His son, Henry Horn, was the cashier.

The bank has been closed practically since the night of the elder Horn's death, a sign in the window indicating that it has suspended pending an inventory of the Horn estate.

The creditors who will begin operations before Judge Crowe Tuesday represent approximately $100,000 of deposits, it is claimed. Their action, it is learned, is the result of a private investigation that has gone as far as possible without access to the bank's records. The charges which are to be made in the bill asking for a receiver, it is ascertained, will cause a distinct sensation throughout "Egypt."

CHILDREN TO GIVE BOY SKIN

Schoolmates of Cornelius Pel Offer Cuticle to Save Leg.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 28.—Fifty boys and girls will give skin to be grafted upon the leg of little Cornelius Pel, who was run over by a heavy truck five weeks ago. It was not until this week that skin grafting was decided upon. Pupils of the Hall street school and the Sunday school classes of Holland Unitarian church were asked to aid the little fellow. The half-hundred who volunteered went under the knife at Butterworth hospital today.

Each child will lose a quarter of an inch of skin.

ENGLAND AWAITS REPORT ON RAID

British Fleet Goes Behind German Base at Heligoland.

DROPS BOMBS ON VESSELS

French Official Statement Tells of Air Attacks by His Own and Kaiser's Aeroplanes and Dirigibles—In Russia Germans Reoccupy Mlawa—French Take Guns.

London, Dec. 28.—With news of one of the most daring exploits of the British fleet yet performed in the North sea—that of a raid over the mine fields behind Heligoland and under the guns of the powerful land defenses by a British squadron convoying hydroaeroplanes, coming only in official Berlin announcement—all England awaits the report of its own admiralty on this British reply to the German raid on Hartlpool and the undefended towns of Whitby and Scarborough.

The squadron made its way past the German guardships until it was close enough to the shore for the hydroaeroplanes to rise to the attack on Cuxhaven, at the mouth of the Elbe. There they dropped bombs on vessels lying in the river mouth and bombarded an oil tank in the city.

French Statement.

Paris, Dec. 28.—The official communique issued at 3 p. m. is as follows:

"Between the North and the Lys the day was calm with intermittent cannonading. Between the Lys and the Oyse there is nothing to report. In the valley of the Aisne and in the Champaign there has been an artillery duel. The enemy, after violent bombardment in the region of Perthes, attempted a counter attack on the trenches which he had lost. The attack was repulsed by our artillery fire and by our infantry.

"In the Argonne we have made slight progress to the south of St. Hubert and one company gained between 100 and 200 metres. We have bombarded a ravine where the enemy evacuated several trenches.

"Between the Meuse and the Moselle, to the east of St. Mihiel, two German attacks against the redoubt of Lebois and Brule were repulsed.

Both Sides In Air Attacks.

"A dirigible threw a dozen bombs on Nancy in the center of the city without any military reason for such an action. Our aeroplanes, on the contrary, have bombarded the aviation hangars at Frescati, one of the railway stations at Metz, where the movement of trains had been reported and we also bombarded the barracks of Saint Privas at Metz.

"In Upper Alsace our troops have made further advances on the heights overlooking Cernay and we have repulsed several German atacks.

Germans Reoccupy Mlawa.

"The Germans who had resumed their advance on Mlawa have reoccupied that city. The situation in Poland shows no notable modification. The violence of the fighting along the Bzura and Rawka rivers is diminishing. On the Pilitza, however, the fighting continues to be very fierce, as well as upon the lower Niga. On the entire Galician front, the fighting is developing under favorable conditions for the Russians."

Tells of Taking Guns.

An official verbal note appended to the communique adds that among the captures on December 24 in the German trenches in the region of Perthes were two quick-firing siege guns, mounted; a 245 millimetre siege mortar; a five centimetre gun with armored cupola and a 37-millimetre revolver cannon, showing the powerful organization which the French were facing and which was unable to stop the French onrush.

VILLA AND ZAPATA AT BREAKING POINT

Pancho Opposes Wholesale Executions Now Going on.

El Pas, Texas, Dec. 28.—That Gen. Francisco Villa and Gen. Emiliano Zapata, the present military rulers of that portion of Mexico under the judisdiction of the so-called "convention government," will be fighting each other in a month is the declaration of Americans from Mexico City. The declaration comes from those who are in a position to be acquainted with conditions.

The break will come over the executions now taking place in the Mexican capital, it is declared, and it may result in splitting the present triumvirate of Villa, Zapata and Provisional President Eulalio Gutierrez into three factions. Villa and Gutierrez are reported at present to be on the same ground relative to the executions, both being opposed to them, but Villa has in the past been willing to join Zapata in supporting another man than Guiterrez for president in which event the breach is likely to take on further complications. The only chance for continued peace in "the convention" party, it is now asserted, is for Zapata to take a stand with Villa and Gutierrez against the numerous executions that have been taking place.

That Villa and Gutierrz are of the same mind relative to the executions is practically settled in an edict issued yesterday by Gutierrez declaring that executions must cease in the capital and elsewhere in Mexico under the judisdiction of the convention except after a fair trial is held.

SKATER DROWNS UNDER ICE

Falls Into Water at Sewer Outlet: Companion Unable to Extricate Him.

Terre Taute, Ind., Dec. 28.—Paul Flesher, 19 years old, a senior in Garfield High school here, was drowned under the Wabash river bridge here. He and Paul Letherman, a freshman, had been skating about two miles north on the river and were returning when they broke through thin ice, caused by a sewer outlet. Letherman pulled himself out, but was too exhausted to help Flesher. Flesher's body is still under the ice.

Frank M. Flesher, father of the dead boy, is a traveling salesman for the Hibben-Hollweg Company of Indianapolis.

BEATS MOTHER WITH CHAIR

Drunken Paroled Brute Breaks Hip of Woman, 80.

Connersville, Ind., Dec. 28.—Mrs. N. Shepard, 80 years old, was attacked and probably fatally wounded here by her son, William Shepard, who beat his mother with a chair in a drunken fury. The aged woman was found lying unconscious across a broken chair when police officers burst open a door at her home. The woman's right hip was broken and her left ankle was sprained. Bruises almost covered her body. Because of her advanced age physicians say Mrs. Shepard's chance for recovery is slight. Later the mother denied the statement she had made, but the authorities believe that she is trying to shield the son.

Shepard is 38 years old and is accused of often abusing his mother. He was recently paroled from the Michigan City prison.

SHERIFF SUED FOR DAMAGES

Woman Says He Arrested Son Without Warrant and Shocked Her.

Cadillac, Mich., Dec. 28.—Two suits for $5,000 each were started against Sheriff Elmer I. White of Kalkaska county by attorneys of this city in behalf of Mrs. Lovina Stull and Andrew Stull of Kalkaska. It is charged that White was unnecessarily rude in making the arrest of a son and nephew of Mrs. Stull last July on a larceny charge. Mrs. Stull, who was soon to become a mother, says she was shocked to such an extent that she was crippled.

The officer is charged with using profane language and with not possessing a warrant at the time of the arrest.

A Famous Old Abbey.

Melrose abbey is in Roxburghshire, Scotland, in a beautiful situation between the Eildons and the Tweed. David I. of Scotland founded an abbey at Melrose in 1136. It was several times torn down and rebuilt. The present famous ruins are what is left of the abbey built largely by the gift of Robert Bruce in the fourteenth century. They are the property of the dukes of Buccleugh and are carefully preserved. The abbey was a cruciform building in the decorated and perpendicular styles, with pronounced French influence. Much of the nave remains, with the two transepts, the chancel and the choir, two west piers of the tower and the sculptured roof of the east end. Sir Walter Scott has immortalized the east window in "The Lay of the Last Minstrel." The heart of Robert Bruce is buried at the high altar. Sir William Douglas, "The Knight of Liddesdale;" James, the second earl of Douglas, and Alexander II., king of Scotland, are also buried in the abbey.—New York Times.

Didn't Discharge Him.

In the financial district they tell a story of a bank that was in difficulties several years ago and how the clearing house happened to learn of the situation. One of the big national banks was clearing for a certain other bank that was in trouble and every day the president of the clearing house bank would certify $2,000,000 worth of checks for the other. Finally the paying teller called the attention to the fact that he was taking a mighty long chance, but the president paid no attention to the hint. Then the teller informed the clearing house of the situation, and the president was called to book. "Did my paying teller tell you you that?" demanded the president. "He did," replied the chairman of the clearing house committee. "I shall discharge him at once," declared the president, bristling up with indignation. "You do and we'll close your bank to morrow," calmly replied the chairman. Needless to say, the teller was not discharged.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Falstaff and Yarmouth.

Yarmouth has a claim upon all Englishmen quite independently of its associations with the breakfast bloater. For it was the home of Shakespeare's Falstaff, who appears to have been a man of exemplary piety. The Falstaffs were an old Yarmouth family.

"A Falstolfe or Falstaff," writes John Richard Green, "was a bailiff of Yarmouth in 1281. Another is among the first of its representatives in parliament, and from that the members of that family filled the highest municipal offices. John Falstolfe, a man of considerable account in the town, purchased lands at the close of the fourteenth century in Caistor, and became the father of Sir John Falstolfe, who, after a distinguished military career, was luckless enough to give his name to Shakespeare's famous character. In Yarmouth, however, he was better known as a benefactor to the great Church of St. Nicholas."—St. Nicholas.

Europe's Richest City.

The richest city in Europe is Basel, the great Swiss railway center, Zurich, in a neighboring canton, coming second. This is proportionate to the number of inhabitants. Basel's richest citizen boasts a fortune of £500,000, another has £300,000, while no fewer than sixteen residents pay income tax on a round million dollars. Eighty-two are "French millionaires," possessing fortunes of a million francs. The average wage earning capacities of the various professions form an interesting contrast. Basel's doctors—the place is flooded with medical men—are the worst paid, averaging only £240 a year; druggists are good for more, and lawyers the same. Professors, on the other hand, earn something like £500 a year and bank directors anywhere from £1,000 to £1,200.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Statue of Brick.

Perhaps no other nation in the world save the inventive Germans would have thought of building a statue of brick. In the little city of Vegesack, near Bremen and in the district of the German clay fields, the citizens have erected such a statue to one of their number who won fame as an African explorer. The monument is of brick, thirty feet in height, including the pedestal. The architect molded the figures of a man and camel out of a solid mass of clay, which was burned in a great kiln and then sawed into brick sized blocks.

Astronomy Versus Art.

Professor—Has anything ever been discovered on Venus? Student—No, sir, there has not—if the pictures are correct.—Judge.

That action is not warrantable which either blushes to beg a blessing or, having succeeded, does not present a thanksgiving.—Quarles.

COLLISION OF TRAINS PERILS PASSENGERS

Six Persons Hurt, and 42 Have Narrow Escapes.

South Haven, Mich., Dec. 28.—Six passengers were injured and 42 had a marvelous escape from death or serious injury when a southbound fast freight on the Pere Marquette struck a Fruit Belt passenger train just leaving Hartford at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. The freight engine struck the rear coach of the passenger and dumped it into the ditch. The passengers were rescued through the windows. The most seriously injured are: D. C. Hodge, South Haven, back and neck hurt; injured internally. John A. Mathison, South Haven, back and hip hurt. Miss Marvel Fletcher, of Hart, hip and knee injured. Harry Randall, South Haven, nose broken and teeth knocked out. Mrs. M. I. Thompson, Chicago, back hurt. Claude Johnson, South Haven, ankle sprained and knee hurt.

The engineer of the freight said he was blinded by steam from a leaky steam chest and could not see the semaphore of the interlocker.

Engineer Saulsbury, of the passenger train, seeing a collision inevitable put on steam in an effort to clear the crossing, but was not able to do this.

"DICK" DEWEY SUED BY WIFE

The Charge Is That Politician Is Living With Another Woman.

Pontiac, Mich., Dec. 28.—Former City Commissioner "Dick" Dewey has been sued by his wife, Flora Dewey, for divorce. Charges of a serious nature are made against the former official and a Detroit woman is named in the action. Dewey was the first commissioner elected under the commission form of government in this city and is interested in lands and resorts at Union lake. He is a prominent Mason and Elk, 47 years of age. The couple have no children. The court has granted an injunction tying up his property pending the hearing of the suit.

Sugar Company Ending Campaign.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 28.—With the finish of the sugar season for 1914 the last week, practically the entire acreage of the Michigan Sugar company has been closed for 1915, according to General Manager W. H. Wallace. The Croswell factory shut down Thursday, which ends the season's work. Mr. Wallace says that by the end of next week all contracts will be in. He attributes the early closing of contracts to the fact that the company will pay a flat rate of $6 per ton for 1915 beets.

Twins for Third Time.

HOLLAND, MICH. — Twins have been born to Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Merzenga, at Hudsonville, for the third time. The first was a boy and girl, the second both girls and the last are two boys. The combined weight of the boys is 18 pounds.

Twenty-one More Inspectors.

NILES, MICH. — Dr. Atherton, inspecor in charge of the Niles station of the United States bureau of animal industry, announced a new list of 21 Michigan veterinarians to assist in the inspection of live stock for interstate shipment.

Operation Proves Fatal.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Charles C. Henning, well known business man, died following an operation for gall stones and peritonitis. Several days ago Mr. Henning went to West Baden, Ind., to take the baths and had just been brought back.

Saginaw Woman, 100, Dies.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Mrs. Christian Warst, thought to be the oldest resident of the county, is dead at the home of her grandson in Saginaw township, aged one hundred years, ten months and twenty-four days.

Nine Typhoid Cases in Family.

FLINT, MICH. — Sanitary Officer Keyport found nine cases of typhoid fever in the home of John Johnkowski. Every member of the family except the father and youngest child are suffering from the disease.

WOMAN IS GUILTY OF BIGAMY

Sentence Suspended, While Record of Man In Case Is Looked Up.

Williamsport, Ind., Dec. 28. — Mrs. Emma Erickson, who a few days ago was arrested at Lafayette, charged with bigamy, was sentenced to one to five years in the Woman's Prison, but the sentence was suspended.

Lawrence J. Farrell, with whom she contracted a bigamous marriage in this county, is in jail here while the authorities investigate to learn whether he has another wife.

New Princess Is Maria.

Rome, Dec. 28.—The Italian royal princess born Saturday has been named Maria. She will be christened later. A member of the Italian royal family outside of the sovereign will be chosen god-father.

SAKHALIN STORY PURE FAKE

Petrograd Officially Declares Report Without Semblance of Truth.

London, Dec. 28.—Reuter's correspondent at Petrograd, says: "With regard to the statement emanating from Washington that Russia has ceded to Japan the Russian half of the island of Sakhalin in return for heavy guns the Petrograd official telegraph agency is authorized to declare in the most categorial manner that the report is absolutely unfounded and that it does not contain the semblance of truth."

Two Held on Mann Act Charge.

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 28. — Frank Powers, who has a wife in Omaha, and Mrs. Omaha Bachman, who has a husband in Los Angeles, are held here for Omaha authorities. Powers is charged with violation of the Mann act.

C. W. BEST ARTIST'S SERIES

The Presbyterian choir of Tecumseh has booked a concert course of three numbers which promises a feast for all lovers of music. Tecumseh has not had such an opportunity for some time, save for the summer Chautauqua, and should show her appreciation by hearty patronage. The series is as follows:

JAN 19. The Russian Company consisting of Hazel Dell Neff, soprano; M. Leo Zelenka-Lerando, harpist; Marguerite Austin, violinist—a combination that cannot be excelled.

FEB 15. Fenetta Sargent Haskell, dramatic reader whose wonderful ability in holding an audience for an entire evening is attested to by the critics of such papers as the Chicago Record-Herald, New York World, New York Times and Havana Post.

MARCH 18. The Spanish company consisting of Helen Watson Powers, soprano; Helen Desmond, pianiste; M. Emile Follmer, tenor; Senor Antonio Sala, violincellist. This company surely forms a fine finale for the course with beautiful single numbers and wonderful ensemble work from our favorite operas. Senor Sala, though but 20 years of age, has already played before the court of Spain and has been acclaimed a "prodigious prodigy" by Gil Blas, Paris. M. Follmer is a pupil of Herman DeVries and Jean de Reszke and comes here from a great European success.

Prices are as follows:

Adult season ticket	$1.00
School student season ticket	.75
Single admission	.50
Children under 12, free if accompanied by parents.

Tickets on sale at Gastons' jewelry store by W. S. Dickinson. adv

CHICAGO TRIBUNE EUROPEAN WAR PICTURES

Those people who have read about the great European War (which means practically everybody) and who have been anxious to know the true conditions on the fields of battle, will have an opportunity to learn the facts when the Chicago Tribune European War Pictures, the first and only authentic motion views of the vast battlefields, are shown at the Bradley Opera House, one night only, Monday January 11.

The Chicago Tribune secured the sole and only permission to take pictures on the firing line, and the dauntless bravery of their staff photographer, Edwin F. Weigle, who was unmindful of bullets and bursting shells resulted in the most sensational set of pictures ever taken in the history of photography. All the so-called war pictures heretofore seen were merely manoeuvres. These views were taken when the actual fighting was in progress. They are graphic to the minutest detail. The German siege guns may be seen working their deadly havoc, the men in the trenches are seen directing their heavy fire, the wonderful Belgian dog batteries, of which so much has been written, are seen in action. The pictures are a vivid document of the greatest war in the world's history and the Belgium Red Cross receives 50 per cent of the proceeds of the exhibition.

A NARROW ESCAPE

While getting ready to come to spend Christmas Day with her parents Mr. and Mrs A. W. Stahler, Mrs. Albert Foster had a bad coughing spell and going to the cupboard took what she thought to be her cough medicine but which proved to be oil of vitrol. The quantity taken was in her favor, as it produced vomiting. Dr. Hendershott was summoned at once, and she was soon out of danger, but in a weak condition and has been confined to her bed ever since.

GRANGERS ATTENTION

All members of Tecumseh Grangers who have received invitations to the banquet next Thursday night please come prepared to tell your most funny story.

Kaiser Back on Belgian Front.

LONDON — The German emperor, accompanied by the imperial chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg; the ministers of war and marine, and a numerous suite, has gone to the western front, according to advices to the Daily Mail from Copenhagen.

Leading Fond du Lac Man Dies.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Dec. 28.—John Heath, a leading merchant of Fond du Lac, president of the library board, and for many years president of the common council, died folowing an illness of two weeks.

Alfred Henry Lewis Ill.

NEW YORK — Alfred Henry Lewis, well known for his "Wolfville" stories, his novels, short stories and for his magazine and newspaper work, is dangerously ill at his home here. His illness is due to serious stomach and intestinal diorders.

Cheboygan Merchant Bankrupt.

Bay City, Mich., Dec. 28.—Henry A. Feahr, general merchant of Tower, Cheboygan county, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States court here. He places his liabilities at $4,30127, and his assets at $3,805.

It Changed His Mind.

A switching engine prevented a Chicago man from committing suicide the other day. With a rope around his neck and fastened to the rails of the Rock Island railroad he was crawling between the ties, prepared to jump from a viaduct, when a switching engine came along and cut the rope. As he had lost his chance of hanging himself, he thought better of his project.

HOME TALENT

Will Give at Opera House Thursday Evening

"A SILENT SLAVE"

Under Auspices of Commerce Club

The home talent production to be given at the Bradley opera house Thursday evening, Dec. 31st, entitled "A Silent Slave," under the auspices of the Commerce Club, will be one of the season's events. The beautiful 4-act comedy is produced under the direction of Allen O White. He promises the theatre going public of Tecumseh something new in the line of home talent. This play will be produced as nearly as possible like the production given at the American Theatre, New York, several seasons ago when Miss Grace George was the star of the play.

Miss Alma Kloffenstein will play the character of "Chick" barefooted. The comedy of this drama will be furnished by "Jerry," played by Mr Floyd Ager.

If you are interested in home talent do not miss this production as Mr. White will give you many surprises. He carries all special scenery for this production. Specialties between acts will also be one of the features. Get your tickets early at Hay's bakery as a packed house is assured. The cast of characters is as follows:

James O'Neal—Allen O. White
Jerald Stone—Sheldon Southwick
Robert Sinclair—Paul Hunt
Stub West, Horace Sinclair—Fred Downs
Jerry—Floyd Ager
Chick West—Miss Alma Kloffenstein
Mabel West—Miss Lydia Babcock
Florence Sinclair—Mrs. Allen White

MRS. M. E. HINES

Mrs. Mary E. Hines passed away at the home of her son George Hines at 5:30 Christmas eve aged 75 years and 13 days. Mrs. Hines has been in feeble health for several years but the end came suddenly. She had been in usual health up to the day before Christmas as was planning on going out for dinner on Christmas Day. She was taken suddenly ill in the night with pneumonia and never rallied. Short funeral services were held at the home at 8:30 Monday morning and the remains were taken to Onsted where funeral was held in the Baptist church at 2:30.

GOSPEL MEETINGS AT FRIENDS CHURCH

The series of gospel meetings at the Friends church under the leadership of Rev. Howard Moore of Ypsilanti, opened Sunday with good interest and attendance. The theme of the morning service was "Fishing for Men." Mr. Moore spoke in a very interesting and impressive way of the joy that comes to those who are successful in catching men in the gospel net, and also of the vital realities in spiritual life that comes to those who are caught.

In the evening the speaker gave some vivid illustrations concerning "Clay in the Hands of the Potter."

These meetings are expected to continue each evening this week and next excepting Saturday. On Tuesday and Thursday evenings the sermon will be of special interest to men. Children's meetings this week on Wednesday and Thursday at 3 p. m.

Mr Moore's daughter is assisting him in all these meetings. Her rendering of hymns on the autoharp will be of special interest to all.

Let everybody plan to attend as many of these meetings as possible.

The post office will be open from 6:30 to 9:30 a. m. New Years Day. No rural delivery.

John B. Smith and family attended the Smith—Johnson wedding in Petersburg Thursday.

Comfort Chase and family of Dowagiac were spending the latter part of the week with his mother Mrs. D Chase and sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Macham of Adrian, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Samsen of Plymouth attended the dinner given by Mrs. R B Gillespie and daughters for the Rector family Christmas Day.

Between forty and fifty of the Masonic order were in attendance at the Baptist church Sunday morning to celebrate St Johns Day. Dr. Hartzog gave a very interesting discourse on the patrons saints of Masonry. The first spoke of John the Baptist his surroundings and preaching and then of John the desciple and his works. There was a good attendance and every one was deeply interested.

STOP BUYING EXPENSIVE COUGH REMEDIES

Make the Best at Home

Money spent for the old style, ready made, cough syrups in bottles holding only 2 to 2½ ounces is very largely wasted, because most of them are composed principally of sugar and water. Yet you have to pay the same price as if it was all medicine. Stop wasting this money. You can make a better cough medicine at home at one-fifth the cost. Merely go to B J. Pulver's Drug Store and ask for two ounces (50c worth) of Schiffman's Concentrated Expectorant. Mix this with one pint of granulated sugar and one-half pint of boiling water which makes a full pint (16 ounces). This new, simple, pleasant remedy is guaranteed to relieve the worst cough or cold. Also excellent for Bronchial Asthma, Bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and whooping cough. One bottle will make enough home-made cough medicine to probably last the whole family the entire winter. Children like it. It is so pleasant to take and it positively contains no chloroform, opium, morphine or other narcotics as do most cough mixtures. Keep it on hand in case of emergency and stop each cough before it gets a firm hold. The above druggist has been authorized to return the money in every single case where it does not give perfect satisfaction or is not found the best remedy ever used. Absolutely no risk is run in buying this remedy under this positive guarantee. adv

Most charming music was furnished by a five-piece orchestra from Toledo. At 10:30 supper was served in the dining room.

Several out-of-town guests were present: Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Watts of Adrian; Mr. and Mrs. Will McGlashen, Buffalo; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Crittenden, New York City; Misses Laura Freese and Doris Kennedy, Clinton; Miss Hazel Zimmerman, Chicago; Webb Kay, Misses Albertine Boyce and Metta McKinney, Detroit; Miss Winnifred Hall, Oberlin, Ohio; Harold Hardy, Lansing.

"EXCUSE ME"

"EXCUSE ME," Rupert Hughes' comedy, which S. T. King presents here is a genuine farce with all accessories this form of entertainment assumes.

The play derives its title from the apologetic frame of mind in which the passengers of the Overland Limited find themselves through the restriction of space and other impediments to perfect comfort. The story is interesting, the incidents and accidents of the journey are most amusing, and the humor is derived largely from the types presented, characters familiar to all.

The American palace coach, with its magnificent appointments, uniformed staff and usually aristocratic company affords amusing material of which Rupert Hughes, the author, has availed himself. There is much to satirize in pullman car experiences on an American railroad, not merely such caricatures as are derived from the porter, conductor and breakman, but far more varied sarcasms as are evolved from the behavior of the passengers, men and women of many minds.

There are three acts, all the incidents taking place on a train speeding from Chicago to Reno. The passengers are seen as they board the car, find their places and get settled for the three day trip. In a performance such as this play demands upon the artists enacting the different roles, S. T. King has exercised great care in the selection of the cast and has se exercised great care in the selection of the cast and has secured a particularly clever aggregation of entertainers.

"Excuse Me" is played by the best cast this season that ever presented the piece. Jerry Hart as the "Porter" is a scream every time he appears in the play. The company is playing all this week in the Lyceum Theatre, Detroit.

"Excuse Me" will be the attraction at the Bradley Opera House, Friday January 8.

TWO MORE MAY ENTER WAR

Roumanians and Greeks to Fight With the Allies?

LONDON — Two more of the smaller nations of Europe—Greece and Roumania are expected to enter the great war on the side of the triple entente immediately. This result was foreshadowed by information let out by officials of the foreign office.

It was made known that Bulgaria at last has given categorical assurance that she will remain strictly neutral in the war, and in consequence Great Britain, France, and Russia have given guarantees to Greece and Roumania that they will not be attacked by Bulgaria if they assist the allies.

PROPOSES NEW PEACE PLEA

Pope Will Announce Plan at Audience to Sacred College Christmas Eve.

ROME — It is stated from an authoritative source that the pope will give a solemn audience to the sacred college on Christmas eve, when he will deliver a most important allocution about the war and his efforts to hasten peace.

The pontiff will announce that he intends to make another appeal to the sovereigns and chiefs of state in favor of peace. The pope will also give an audience to the diplomatic corps at the vatican and will again urge the restoration of peace.

ACQUIT 13 INDIANA HEADS

Lieutenant Governor and Others Cleared of Signing Bogus Claims.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND. — Lieut. Gov. J. E. O'Neill and twelve other officers and employes of the 1913 legislature, who were indicted Dec. 4 charged with signing and presenting illegal claims against the state, were acquitted by Judge J. T. Markey in the criminal court here.

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter Read the following statement.

Mrs C Stevenson. Wyandotte & Potawatamie Sts., Tecumseh, says; "The first system of kidney complaint in my case was a sharp, shooting pain across the small of my back, which made it almost impossible for me to lie down Someone advised to give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial and I did, procuring my supply at C. A Wright & Son's Drug Store. After I had taken this remedy a short time, the pains and aches left and gravel that had been a source of constant suffering, no longer troubled me, in fact, I felt like a different person. I have since recommended Doan's Kidney to a number of my friends and shall continue to do so. My former endorsement holds good."

U. S. AVIATOR FALLS TO DEATH

Lieut. Gerstner Drowns in Pacific in Maneuvers; Four Craft Drop.

OCEANSIDE, CAL. — Lieutenant J. Gerstner, observer in one of the six United States army scout aeroplanes that started on a flight from San Diego to Los Angeles, was drowned in the sea ten miles north of this place. Captain L. E. Miller, pilot of the wrecked machine, was rescued by Captain L. W. Patterson, another army aviator, whose aeroplane had been wrecked near where Lieut. Gerstner met his death.

Four of the machines that entered the flight were brought to the earth near here. The other machine reached Los Angeles in safety. Stormy weather and bad air conditions were held responsible for the accidents.

Michigan Lawyers Plan Curb on Marriage and Divorce

LANSING, MICH. — Proposed changes in the state laws intended to prevent hasty marriages and hasty divorces, which were outlined by Mark W. Stevens of Flint before the Wayne County Bar association in Detroit are explained in detail in a synopsis of the report on domestic relations, prepared by the Michigan commission on the revision and simplification of laws, which was made public here today by the executive office.

Among the leading and most prominent changes in and additions to the existing laws are the following:

Marriages between whites and Africans or those of African descent absolutely forbidden; violation of this section a felony.

Marriages of insane persons and persons suffering with one or both of two communicable sexual diseases prohibited; violation of this section made a felony.

Marriage of a sane person with a former inmate of a state asylum made a felony unless a certificate of absolute cure is shown.

Compels persons wanting to marry to apply for license to county clerk sixty days before license can be issued.

County clerk must advertise in newspapers for six consecutive weeks the fact that a pair want to marry.

Making presence of one of two communicable diseases, contracted either before or after marriage, legal cause for divorce.

Divorce granted in another state, for cause arising while parties lived in Michigan, made illegal as to Michigan.

Compelling the attendance of the prosecuting attorney in all divorce suits, and barring himself, his partner or employe from participation as private counsel.

GIRL SEES HER LOVER KILLED

Fireman at Lapeer Lighting Plant Is Electrocuted.

LAPEER, MICH. — As his sweetheart, Clara M. Hatch, and a deaf mute, Fred Baker, looked on, Oscar Reed, fireman at the lighting plant here, was instantly killed by being electrocuted. When the signal that the water in the boilers had reached the low mark was given automatically, Reed for some undetermined reason went to the dynamo and grasped a high tension strand.

The members of the crowd, which collected at the plant after word of Reed's death had been spread, undoubtedly owe their escape from serious injury to Harold Tinker, a local mechanic, who risked his life to let water into the boilers, which were near the point of letting go. The boilers had been left unattended and a moment or two more would have seen a terrific explosion, it is believed.

HOG CHOLERA IS IN SAGINAW

Scourge Breaks Out on Eight Farms; Seventy-five Beasts Die.

SAGINAW, MICH. — Hog cholera again has broken out in Saginaw county. Within the last two weeks more than seventy-five hogs have died as a result of the disease, which has been found among the hogs on eight farms near Frankenmuth Junction.

The epidemic has been reported to the state live stock sanitary commission and inspectors will be here tomorrow to direct the work of vaccination and to handle the situation.

HOW A DEEP SEATED COUGH

And Sore Lungs Were Overcome by Vinol—Mr. Hillman's Statement of Facts Follows:

Camden, N. J.—"I had a deep seated cough, a run-down system and my lungs were awfully weak and sore. I am an electrician by occupation and my cough kept me awake nights so I thought at times I would have to give up. I tried everything everybody suggested and had taken so much medicine I was disgusted.

"One evening I read about Vinol and decided to give it a trial. Soon I noticed an improvement. I kept on taking it and today I am a well man. The soreness is all gone from my lungs, I do not have any cough and have gained fifteen pounds in weight and I am telling my friends that Vinol did it." — FRANK HILLMAN, Camden, N. J.

It is the curative, tissue-building influence of cods' livers aided by the blood-making, strength creating properties of tonic iron, contained in Vinol, that made it so successful in Mr. Hillman's case.

We ask every person in this vicinity suffering from weak lungs, chronic coughs, or a run-down condition of the system to try a bottle of Vinol on our guarantee to return your money if it fails to help you.

Wife of Harry K. Thaw Is Willing to Aid Him.

H. K. THAW MUST GO TO NEW YORK

Supreme Court Rules Against Slayer of White.

THE END, SAYS HIS ATTORNEY

Thaw Will Probably Be Returned to Matteawan From Which He Escaped Aug. 17, 1913—His Mother Is Undaunted—Evelyn Is Willing to Aid Him.

WASHINGTON — Harry Kendall Thaw, who shot and killed Stanford White, will be returned to New York from New Hampshire, his present asylum, to be tried on the charge of conspiracy to escape from Matteawan He may or may not be recommitted to the asylum. The supreme court of the United States, in an opinion that was unanimous, holds that Thaw was not entitled to a writ of habeas corpus granted him by Judge Aldrich, the federal district judge for the district of New Hampshire and for that reason reversed the judgment of the lower court. A mandate in the case will be handed down in about thirty days and until that occurs Thaw will remain in custody in New Hampshire unless there is some other sensational turn to the case.

This apparently will lend Thaw's remarkable fight to keep out of the clutches of the New York state authorities which began with his escape from Matteawan Aug. 17, 1913.

Surely Headed for Matteawan.

It is the opinion of persons who have followed the case that Thaw will be formally arraigned on the conspiracy case when he gets back into the jurisdiction of the New York authorities and then a lunacy commission will again pass upon him. That may result in his commitment to Matteawan even before trial on the conspiracy charge. That he is headed for Matteawan is generally conceded.

Thaw's case came to the supreme court on appeal taken by the state of New York from the decision of Judge Aldrich of the federal court for New Hampshire. This judge held that Thaw was entitled to a writ of habeas corpus but remanded him to custody until the supreme court finally passed on the case. At the time the habeas corpus writ was granted by Judge Aldrich Thaw was headed for New York, the governor of New Hampshire having honored the requisition of the state of New York for his surrender for trial on the conspiracy case. The case was argued in the supreme court only a week ago. William Travers Jerome representing New York state. The record of the court in disposing of the case was unusual for so important matter and the opinion was by Justice Holmes. It was unanimous.

Thaw Is Dumbfounded.

MANCHESTER, N. H. — Harry K. Thaw stated that he would make no public announcement about the supreme court decision until after the arrival of Philander C. Knox. The Matteawan fugitive was dumfounded by the decision. For the first time since his escape from New York he had nothing to give the newspapers and absolutely refused to be seen.

Mrs. Thaw Undaunted.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—Undaunted by the latest failure in the long fight she has made for her son's liberty, Mrs. Wm. Thaw at once began making plans to help Harry Thaw as soon as she learned of the latest decision of the supreme court. Immediately upon being informed of the ordered extradition of her son, Mrs. Thaw called Manchester, N. H., where Thaw is at present, over the long distance telephone.

She will attempt to encourage him and will probably communicate at once with the array of legal talent that has been fighting to keep Thaw in New Hampshire.

This Is End, Says Stone.

PITTSBURGH, PA. — Thoroughly discouraged over the decision of the supreme court of the United States, handed down in which Harry K. Thaw is ordered returned to New York to be tried on conspiracy charge, ex-Gov. Wm. A. Stone, Thaw's principal attorney, said:

"It is really true. I am awfully sorry. Well, this is the end, for there is no appeal. I can hardly believe it."

Evelyn Willing to Aid Harry.

NEW YORK — Mrs. Evelyn Nesbitt Thaw, on being informed by a reporter of the court's decision against her husband in her home, made the following declaration:

"If he (Harry Thaw) would show signs of rationality I would again go through all I once did for him. Once I took the stand and fought for him. I fought Jerome and all the rest of them and I fought a winning battle. All the sacrifices I made at that time I would willingly make again for him."

WOULD CLEAR BOOKS OF ABUSED STATUTE

Act Used in Domestic Trouble to Extort Blackmail.

OWOSSO, MICH. — At a meeting the Prosecutors' and Sheriffs' association at Lansing the last of the month, legislation will probably be formulated for the erasure of a statute now on the books which is described by Prosecutor Joseph H. Collins of this county as an invitation to blackmail.

This statute provides that in case of infidelity, only the husband of the woman involved, or the wife of the man may make complaint. At any time during the examination in justice court or even when the case is ready to go to the jury in the circuit court, the complaining witness, without the consent or sanction of either the court or the prosecutor may withdraw the action and free the defendant. Money is used more freely to end such cases than in any others.

ANN ARBOR STUDENTS DRY

Court Puts Ban on Liquor Drinking in University.

ANN ARBOR, MICH. — By affirming the conviction of Lawrence Damm, an Ann Arbor saloon keeper found guilty of selling liquor to University of Michigan students, the state supreme court placed the ban on undergraduate liquor drinking in the university town.

"The statute forbids the sale of liquor to any student in attendance at any public or private institution of learning in the state," said Justice Ostrander, who wrote the opinion. The court explained that adult students would be denied drinking privileges the same as citizens living in a local opton county may be denied rights enjoyed by their neighbors in an adjoining county.

BELIEVED LUMPY JAW CASE

Inspector Discovers Disease Much Dreaded by Live Stock Men.

MUSKEGAN, MICH. — What is believed to be a case of lumpy jaw, a contagious cattle disease feared by cattle men as greatly as the hoof and mouth trouble, was found in Muskegon county by W. J. Mickel, state dairy inspector, in the herd of Harry Spicer, an Egelston township farmer. The cow, whose mouth was swollen and covered with sores, was examined by Mickel, who is practically certain the animal is suffering with "lumpy jaw." The herd was found in a filthy condition.

Inspector Michel has notified the bureau of animal industry of the department of agriculture of the situation and expects a federal inspection here at once.

SHAVES, THEN ENDS HIS LIFE

Minneapolis Young Man Complained of Inability to Sleep.

MT. CLEMENS, MICH. — Alvois E. Hinz, a florist of Minneapolis, aged twenty-two, arrived at the Medea hotel a few days ago and registered under an assumed name. A few days afterward he went to his room early after telling the clerk to call him at 10 in the morning. Then he shaved, took a bath and cut his throat with the blade of a safety razor.

Hinz had told people about the lobby that a very dear friend of his had died and that he was unable to sleep through worrying over it.

Explosion Kills Kent Watchman.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH. — William H. Knox, aged sixty, night watchman in the Realville building, located in the down town section, was instantly killed when an exhaust pipe in the engine room exploded.

Middleville to Have New Station.

SAGINAW, MICH. — A new freight and passenger depot will be constructed by the Pere Marquette at Valley Center, midway between Saginaw and Port Huron. The improvement will cost about $1,800.

Livingston Stock Man Drops Dead.

HOWELL, MICH. — Fred F. Crandal, fifty years of age, prominent Livingston county stock raiser and owner of the Oak Lawn stock farm, near here, dropped dead in his barn.
